BLOOMSBURG STATE COLLEGE
BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

PLANS -- NOT PROPHESIES

We are now ready to move ahead!

September, 1963, will see the time of the admission of the first Arts and Science freshman. One-hundred twenty young people will form four sections or classes.

For more than 40 years, Bloomsburg has been an institution educating teachers certified for service in the schools of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. This one function has limited its ability to serve the youth of Pennsylvania and has excluded many from the opportunity of attending college while living at home or from attending college at all because they were not able to pay the fees charged by private institutions.

Realizing the inability of the College Entrance Examinations, generally called the College Boards, to serve as the sole and final basis for admission, Bloomsburg will continue an experiment begun last year. One hundred or more "trial" freshmen will be admitted to the regular six-week summer session to take two courses—one in English and the other in mathematics, which, if completed with average grades, will admit these freshmen to the first semester, beginning in September. Last year's admission was offered to approximately 60, 50 of whom showed up for classes in the summer session. More than 40 completed their summer work and 34 returned to enroll in September.

Recently a committee representing the Middle States Association visited the campus to determine the ability of the College to begin to offer courses leading to the Master's Degree for teachers of English and Social Studies, including Geography. We have reason to believe that candidates to (1) take graduate courses leading to permanent certificate and/or (2) become candidates for the Master's Degree will be admitted in either the summer session or in the fall semester of 1963.

Total enrollments will be fixed at a figure not to exceed a 25 per cent increase in the next two years and construction will be begun on two women's dormitories to accommodate 500, a men's dormitory to accommodate 300 and an auditorium to seat 2,000 during the coming year.

Further information regarding the development of a second campus on the Country Club site will be released as soon as the legislature has completed its deliberations, and the Governor has signed certain bills, which are now in the process of being drawn or considered.

In the meantime, you will please understand that these are plans being made for Bloomsburg rather than prophesies of what will happen in the future at your alma mater.

MID-YEAR COMMENCEMENT

Address delivered at the Commencement Exercises of Bloomsburg State College Thursday, January 17, 1963, by Dr. Ralph E. Heiges, President of Shippensburg State College.

Success Is A Journey

I am, indeed, honored to be here at this, your midyear Commencement of the Class of 1963. Naturally, being a stranger to members of the class, I do not know what your attitude is toward this day or toward me as Commencement speaker. Perhaps it is the same as was expressed by the six-year-old after the first day of school. He got off the bus and as he was leaving he turned around to the driver and said, "You don't need to stop for me tomorrow." The driver was naturally surprised and asked how that was. Steve said, "I've had enough of that stuff!"

Or, perhaps you may be characterized on this occasion by the same comment made about a jet bomber observed flying over the Carolina Banks. An old codger looked up and said, "And to think, I told Wilbur and Orville they would never fly!"

And now, whether you have just "had enough of this stuff" or you surprised a lot of people by being in this graduating class, at least I have you as a captive audience for a few minutes.

A few months ago, Red Smith, the sports writer, made a particularly profound observation. He wrote, "It is a truth well-known to all authorities on geriatrics that the older a man gets the faster he could run as a boy."

More recently, the Saturday Evening Post reported that a few months after an election, 10% to 15% of the citizens who actually voted for a defeated candidate have come to believe sincerely that they voted for the man who won.

This retrospective vote for the winner increases with time. It's impossible, for example, to find a single old-timer who recalls voting against Teddy Roosevelt.

This accommodating flexibility of the memory is a pleasant kind of failing. Unfortunately some of its side effects are not socially harmless. The generation that has developed a protective myopia toward its own mistakes not only has 20-20 vision for the mistakes of its offspring but also is sure it knows exactly how to correct them. But, anyway, here's some advice.

As a graduate of a State College, and as a President of another State College, I feel it incumbent on me to say several things about these colleges. Your President here at Bloomsburg has searched the records and plainly stated the facts about the growth of the State Colleges, which growth emphasizes the theme of my remarks — Success is a Journey. You are being graduated from a college supported by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and you have enjoyed the privilege and the appropriations extended by the Commonwealth in order that this higher education might be accomplished. Many others will want this same privilege and ye there is a continuous threat to it. This threat is the lack of understanding in the Commonwealth as to the nature of public higher education.

Public higher education in the state must meet at least three specifications in order to exist. Public higher education must be geographically available. Also, public higher education must be obtainable at a reasonable cost. And as its third attribute, public higher education must be quality education. Too often the legislators and the citizens in general fail to realize that these three attributes are necessary to public higher education. It is no answer to have a college in a town or across the street and charge so much that the citizens cannot afford to attend. Public higher education is the cornerstone of our democracy in these times of increasing automation and scientific advance. We don't dare over-price it.

You have the opportunity, and it will be incumbent upon you, to take a stand in favor of public higher education. So much for that.

At this juncture in your educational and personal life we stop to recognize your achievements. We pause to honor you for what you have done. This day is not the accomplishment. Rather, the hourly and daily chores of the last three or four years are the important things. Success is a Journey.

I am sure that each of you look forward from time to time to taking a vacation. Some of these vacations are more extended than others. Each year my wife and I enjoy planning and taking a vacation. At least, we try to take one annually. Through the years we have taken cruises in the Caribbean. We choose a vessel that plans to go to ports in which we may be interested, and in preparation we may read about the type of weather, what is to be seen, and where, above all, gentlemen, where the shopping is! But it is the cruise that makes the journey.

You sail from New York with the lights all aglow in Manhattan and you go by the Statue of Liberty and on to the ocean. Then you head south, knowing that in a day or two it will be much warmer. Indeed, on the second day a few brave souls will appear in shorts to take advantage of the sun. Another day there is more sun, water in the swimming pool, deck games and the like. Then, perhaps, you will dock at Nassau or Jamaica and on to the shopper's paradise of the western hemisphere, Curacao. Now you may have read, before you started, about the bridge in Curacao — the bridge at the harbor — which is on small pontoons. As an ocean vessel comes and leaves the harbor, this pontoon bridge is folded against the banks of the bay. But until you see this; until you really appreciate the ingenuity and the quaintness of the situation, you have not fully made this journey. Now I could go on and describe to you the sights of Caracas, or the Virgin Islands, and then the return to New York itself — the slow humdrum pace of customs, and the return home. It is not the destination that we are interested in; it is the journey itself. Friends, Success is a Journey.

The success of your journey now may well be determined by the preparation you made for it. Indeed, you have spent several years here in preparing for your journey into the educational field or elsewhere. Whether or not you will be able to collect the hundred thousand dollars it is estimated the college graduate will earn in his lifetime, above and beyond that of a high school graduate, is a matter for speculation and your efforts to produce.

A man was walking across a park in a city and he knew there was a mental institution nearby, as well as a college. He stopped to inquire of a person working in the park which way it was to the college. The man, who was a patient of the mental institution close by, pointed across the park to the college and then observed to the questioner, "You know, I belong to this other state institution, but you have to show improvement to get out!" In spite of this seeming slur on the college, I am sure that you have made great progress to arrive at this day in your life.

There is an ever-increasing demand for more specialized knowledge. Newspapers and magazines suggest the advantages of technologists of all kinds. Pages and pages of advertisements plead for mathematicians, physicists, electronic designers and computer programmers. You must think of your field of specialization on this journey.

Take time to think — for you have many decisions to make. Every generation has its problems and this is no exception. You may feel your decisions are on questions of unbelievable gravity. However, let us look backward at history a moment and raise the question: "Would you have signed the Declaration of Independence?"

Would you have flaunted your signature in front of the king, as John Hancock did when he said, "There, George the Third won't have to wear his spectacles to see that!" Then followed such people as Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Sam Adams, and John Adams.

This was in 1776, and remember that Longfellow describes an event of a year earlier in these words:

"Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere.
On the 18th of April in '75,
Hardly a man is now alive
Who remembers that famous day and year."

Seventeen seventy-five . . . And yet it was a whole year later, the spring of 1776 that there was still the discussion of what to do. A committee of Jefferson, Franklin, Sherman, Livingston and John Adams put it in writing and a resolution was passed to accept his Declaration of Independence. But then, it was even several days later before the revised copy, the engrossed copy, was made and signed; and each man knew that it was possible that he was signing his own death warrant.

Now you may think that this event is something that happened years ago and such a momentous decision need never be made again. But I say to you that each generation must sign the Declaration of Independence again. Each generation by its own sacrifice of money and treasure, and perhaps even by blood, must preserve the doctrines set forth in the Declaration of Independence. You cannot escape the obligation. Success is a Journey.

Probably the secret of youth is that it takes time to play. Now play can be thought of — often is thought of — as being some type of vigorous physical exercise — in one era it may be golf, in another touch football or water skiing. But I prefer to look at it in a broader way which might be summarized by several questions, such as: Do you have a hobby? Have you read a book? In emphasizing the necessity for play as part of your journey, I also would like to indicate that a balance in your life must be maintained.

In your ear is a little canal which contains some fluid, and this little canal is what enables you to maintain your physical balance. If it does not function properly, or if it becomes infected, you will not be able to stand upright. You will become nauseated and uncomfortable. This delicate physical mechanism must operate effectively or the world around us becomes topsy-turvy.

And, we all need another kind of balance — the balance in our mental life. We are constantly walking a tightrope — a tightrope between the two types of mental institutions I mentioned previously — on the one hand the institution trying to restore those in ill-health mentally, and on the other hand those that improve the minds to better serve mankind. We must maintain a balance between our work, our intellectual life, and our play in order to avoid one and keep our balance.

If you accept the thesis that Success is a Journey, then you can change your goals; you can change your destinations. Take time to dream. It hitches the soul to the stars. My generation remembers the day when there was no radio. Your generation remembers the time when there was no TV. But your children will always think of radio and TV as being part of their very life.

We dreamed of space in the comic books, and lo, it is upon us! It has been estimated that 11% of the products we now use were not produced four years ago. Also, that 10% of prescriptions we use today could not be filled five years ago. This is, indeed, a day of dreaming, in which the most fantastic dreams you may have come true. But without dreaming, without thinking, without planning, there can be no attainment of a goal. In the attainment of the goal is your success.

Now, lest you become too enamoured of the idea of success, I would like to read to you a short see of verses written by General Alfred N. Gruenthal — just to keep your sense of proportion:

Sometime when you're feeling important,
Sometime when your ego's in bloom,
Sometime when you take it for granted you're the best qualified in the room,
Sometime when you think that your going will leave an unfillable hole,
Just try this simple experiment and see what it does for your soul.

Take a bucket, fill it with water, Put pour hand in clear up to the wrist,
Now pull it out, and the hole that remains is a measure of how you'll be missed.
You can splash all you please when you enter,
You can stir up the water galore, But stop — in a minute you'll find it just the same as before.

The moral in this quaint example is Be proud of yourself,
Do the very best that you can,
But remember: There is no indispensable man.

And in conclusion, may I remind you that you alone are not graduating today. Your parents and your ancestors have given you the opportunity — the opportunity of being — the opportunity of being what you are.

Sir Christopher Wren, the builder of many famous architectural edifices, was going around the site when St. Paul's Cathedral was being built. He asked one of the men who was cutting the stone for the building, "What are you doing?" He said, "I'm cutting a stone." He went on to another worker doing the same task. He said, "What are you doing?" "I'm earning 5 shillings a day." Going on to the next man, he again asked the same question, "What are you doing, my man?" To which he got the response, "I am helping Sir Christopher Wren to build a beautiful cathedral." There can be little doubt as to which of these three men was getting the most out of life. Success is a Journey. May you have a successful journey throughout life.

SCHEDULE OF WORKSHOP

The Bloomsburg State College is pleased to announce the scheduling of a workshop in the P.S.S.C. Program during the regular summer session, July 1-August 9. Classes will be conducted daily, Monday through Friday, 8:00 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. The course will be offered at the undergraduate level for six hours of credit.

This program, developed by the Physical Science Study Committee, headed by Dr. J. R. Zacharias of M.I.T. in 1956, is now being taught to 200,000 high school students. Basic materials include the P.S.S.C. Physics textbook, laboratory guide and teacher's guide. It is recommended that, if possible, teachers participating in the workshop request their school districts to purchase a set of laboratory apparatus from the Maclaster Scientific Co., Cambridge, Massachusetts.

We believe the P.S.S.C. Program to be a significant step forward in the teaching of physics in the secondary schools. It can contribute materially to the preparation of scientists and to increase the interest in and appreciation of physical science to the non-science student. The vitality and life of the course is in its inductive approach, and the use of the laboratory as a learning experience.

All science teachers who are teaching or plan to teach high school physics, and supervisors of science, are invited to participate. The program will include lectures on selected topics, discussion of problems, laboratory experience, P.S.S.C. films, related readings, and testing. The teacher's guide will be used in the workshop discussions.

Cost to the participants will include:

Summer Session Basic

Fee -----	$75.00
Summer Session Activities
Fee -----	5.00
P.S.S.C. Physics Text -----	5.80
Laboratory Guide -----	1.40
	$87.20

Recommended, but optional:

Teacher's Guide -----	$12.00
P.S.S.C. Laboratory materials, app. -----	$75.00

'62 SURVEY SHOWS STUDENTS FROM GREATER AREA

An increasingly larger number of communities located at greater distances from the college are represented at BSC according to surveys and analyses of the past decade. The 1962 survey, completed recently, indicated a significant increase in number of students whose homes are in Southeastern Pennsylvania, particularly Philadelphia, Bucks, Montgomery, Delaware and Chester counties.

Of the total enrollment of nearly 2,000 students, more than half come from 39 communities in 48 of the 67 counties in the State. Numerically the town of Bloomsburg ranks first with 170, followed by Shamokin with 102, Berwick with 100, Danville with 78, and Hazleton with 59.

Seven communities are represented by groups of students ranging from 26 to 50 in number. They are Sunbury 41, Williamsport 39, Catawissa 36, Wilkes-Barre 35, Scranton 30, Northumberland 29 and Milton 28. It is interesting to note that 413 students come from 27 towns having groups of 10 to 25 students enrolled at Bloomsburg. Approximately 1/3 of this group live in counties in Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Included in the communities having 10 to 25 students at Bloomsburg are: Allentown 17, Ashland 13, Benton 18, Bethlehem 12, Elysburg 10, Frackville 11, Glenside 10, Harrisburg 13, Glen Lyon 13, Hattboro 14, Kingston 18, Lewisburg 11, Levittown 21, Lewistown 15, Mahanoy City 21, Mt. Carmel 24, Muncy 18, Nescopeck 20, Philadelphia 18, West Pittston and Pittston 19, Plymouth 15, Pottstown 12, Pottsville 14, Reading 14, Shickshinny 16, Shenandoah 13, Upper Darby 13.

Michael E. Flanagan, a member of the Bloomsburg State College faculty for the past three years and coach of its Pennsylvania State College Conference championship track and field team of 1961 and 1962, has resigned his position here to accept one as advisor in health, physical education and recreation of the State Department of Public Instruction, Harrisburg.

Flanagan in his three years on the local campus has made a number of friends in the community and has been active as an assistant coach in football as well as coaching the track team for its two championship years. He succeeded Harold Shelley in the latter post.

He said he regrets leaving Bloomsburg but that the Harrisburg position is in a field in which he has long been active.

A native of Clearfield, he is a graduate of Lock Haven State College and received his Master of Education degree at the Pennsylvania State College. He has taken graduate work at both Springfield, Mass., College and Ithaca, N. Y., College.

Flanagan came here from Belkfonte where he had an outstanding record as a wrestling coach, turning in a record of 33 wins to 19 losses in dual meets. In that time he had one state champion, Ron Pifer in 1957, four district and three regional champions. He started his wrestling career in DuBois, where he coached from 1948 to 1952 and his overall record in the sport is 43, 19 and 1.

While an undergraduate at Lock Haven he was both a member and coach of a wrestling team that won a state championship.

At DuBois he was head track coach and assistant in football. In his years as track coach, both in high school and at the local college he compiled a record of 27 wins and a single loss in dual meets. At Bloomsburg his team had a 15 and 0 record over two seasons and at DuBois the tally was 12-1.

He was a member of the track, football and wrestling teams at Clearfield High School and on the same teams at Lock Haven throughout his collegiate career, being captain of the football team as a senior.

The appointment of George E. Wilwohl as assistant professor of physical education at Bloomsburg State College was announced by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president.

Wilwohl succeeded Michael Flanagan, who has accepted a position in Harrisburg. A native of Pittsburgh, Wilwohl is a graduate of St. Athanasius Elementary School and North Catholic High School. He earned his Bachelor of Science degree in Health Education at Slippery Rock State College prior to serving two years in the United States Navy.

Wilwohl began his teaching career in the Robert Lee Van Elementary School, Pittsburgh, in 1951, and joined the faculty of the Heron Hill Junior High School, Pittsburgh, in 1961. He was awarded the Master of Education degree by the University of Pittsburgh in 1958. His professional affiliations include membership in the North Hills Education Foundation, the National Education Foundation, Pennsylvania State Education Association. For the past five years, he has officiated at football and basketball contests in Western Pennsylvania. A sport enthusiast, he served as captain of the 1962 Slippery Rock football team.

Mrs. Elsie H. Robison, 514 West Third street, Hazleton, retired on September 1 after more than 28 years of service with Pennsylvania Power and Light Company. A native of Benton, Mrs. Robison was graduated from Bloomsburg High School and Bloomsburg State College. Prior to joining PP&L she taught in elementary and high schools in Pennsylvania, New York and Nebraska. Beginning her PP&L career in 1934 as a home service representative in the Company's Bloomsburg district, she retires as a senior home economist in PP&L's Central division, with headquarters in Hazleton. Mrs. Robison is a member of the Hazleton Women's Club and St. Paul's Methodist church.

Donald Leroy Thomas, of Shamokin, Pa., received the degree of Master of Education, in the field of Business Education, at the Pennsylvania State University in June, 1962.

DR. ANDRUSS SPEAKS IN MISSISSIPPI

Speaking to the Business Teachers of twelve states attending the Southern Business Education Association meeting in Biloxi, Mississippi, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, President of Bloomsburg State College, in answering the question, "Where do we go from here?" pointed out that we are engaged in a struggle for survival.

In international affairs, Capitalism, in competition with Communism in the field of education, must prove itself to the many new nations of the world.

Business teachers must prove that they can teach Economics to all high school students so that the American citizen can understand what he stands for.

"Too long," said Dr. Andruss, "we have assumed that all the Nations of the world understand what we are trying to do in America in relation to earning, spending, saving, and investing money."

Business Education began in private business colleges operated for profit, became a department in the public secondary schools, and now must make a contribution to the education of all high school students through acquainting them not only with private business enterprises operated for profit but with the management problems of corporations and the contribution which business as an institution is expected to make to the human welfare.

"Until American voters and investors understand their obligation to their country, their over-confidence with their private pocketbook may wreck the very enterprise system which has made America great.

Business teachers can help young people to begin to think, to read newspapers intelligently, and to evaluate the claims of politicians who wish to appeal to one group or another in the productive process, when, as a matter of fact, production is a partnership involving the producer, the consumer, the labor unions, the corporation, the tax payers, and government."

CAN WE DO IT?

Here is what the Alumni of one of our neighboring institutions is doing:

The 1962 Alumni Loyalty Fund raised $35,103 for Susquehanna University according to a joint announcement made by John S. Hendriks, director of alumni relations at Susquehanna, and Clyde R. Spitzner of Philadelphia, chairman of the annual fund.

The total, spurred in the last weeks of the year by a $500 gift from S.U.'s Harrisburg District Alumni Club, went just over the $35,000 goal for the fund and surpassed by more than $8,000 the total of $27,066 received in 1961.

Susquehanna's Loyalty Fund gifts, by action of the Alumni Association, currently are being set aside in a building fund to help finance a new gymnasium and swimming pool on the university campus at Selinsgrove.

Now officially closed out, the 1962 fund represents gifts from 1,138 persons and groups, with an average gift of $30.85. The President's Club, with gifts of $500 or more, has a membership of 15; 143 joined the Century Club by giving $100 or more.

Of the total number of donors, 1,101 are S.U. alumni. This is nearly 29 percent of living alumni and compares with 57 percent participation in 1959, 13.9 percent in 1960, and 21.2 percent in 1961. The growth of Susquehanna's annual fund last year won for it a $150 American Alumni Council award for improvement. The award, sponsored by American business and industry, is financed by the U. S. Steel Corporation.

COUNTY BRANCHES ACTIVE

The Columbia and Montour County Branches of the Alumni Association joined in sponsoring a concert by the Penn State Glee Club. The concert was presented Thursday evening, March 21. The proceeds of the concert will be used to support one of the projects of the Alumni Association. It is hoped that the success of this undertaking will serve as an incentive to other branches to follow the example of these two branches.

SPRING FINE ARTS FESTIVAL AT BLOOMSBURG SC

For the second consecutive year Bloomsburg State College is having a spring Fine Arts Festival, from April 30 through May 5, 1963. In recent years there has been an increasing emphasis on college campuses throughout the country on the enrichment of the academic disciplines with a variety of cultural programs, so this is one way the Fine Arts Festival Committee strongly feels, in which Bloomsburg can ally itself with contemporary trends in education. Furthermore, this activity, it would seem, has a relation to the projected liberal arts curriculum next Fall.

Included in the five-day festival last year were an art exhibit and lecture by Emlyn Etting of Philadelphia; performances of Moliere's "School for Wives" by the Bloomsburg Players, under the direction of Miss Mary Homrighous; a dance demonstration and lecture by Matteo of New York City; and a concert by the Madrigal Singers of the college and chamber music by a trio composed of Martin Rechtmann, violinist and Aaron Shapinsky, cellist, from New York; Mildred Bisgrove, pianist, of the music faculty of Bloomsburg State College.

The committee is doubling its efforts this year to publicize the events and to involve more students in the activities, both as participants and as spectators. This latter project will involve a program of choral music and reading selections performed by students on Sunday, May 5.

All events of the festival are free and are open to the public. The alumni particularly are cordially invited to attend. The events as they have been determined to date are as follows:

April 30—Art Lecture, Robert Cronauer, Carver auditorium, 2 p. m.; Gallery Talk and Tea, Dining Commons Lobby, 3-4 p. m.

May 1—Art Exhibit, first floor hall, Sutliff.

May 2-3—"Ghosts" by Ibsen, Carver auditorium, Bloomsburg Players.

2 GIRLS' DORMS TO BE BUILT ON BSC CAMPUS

Contracts have been awarded for the construction of two girls' dormitories, accomadating 496 at the Bloomsburg State College, for a total of $1,949,600. Low bids in that amount were opened by the General State Authority at Harrisburg and the bulk of the work goes to county firms.

S. H. Event, Inc., Bloomsburg, had the low bid for general construction at $1,347,000. Other low bids were Joseph A. Rado, of Berwick, $231,300 for heating and ventilation and $191,300 for electric work, and John F. Miles Company, Kulpmont, $180,000 for plumbing.

The total was more than $65,000 under the estimate of $2,015,000. During the summer bids were opened and were over the estimate of that time. Later more funds were provided for the project.

The rooms, under the specifications, are to be provided with prefabricated units of closet space, bureau and mirror and these units may be moved from one room to another.

Each of the buildings will provide quarters for around 250, with 125 of those in separate four-story units. In each building there is a connecting area between each unit. In the connection area are quarters for the dean and lounge; overhead there is an areaway.

One of the new dormitories will be placed on the front campus, between Science Hall and the World War I Memorial Pinery and the other will be in the area of the terraces between Noetling and Science Halls and part of it will be on the edge of the grove.

Plans call for the erection of a third women's dormitory on the present site of Science Hall so that the three will provide a U shaped pattern of dormitories. The third building will have a capacity of the two dormitories soon to be constructed and will be much higher.

Rev. Fred E. Lott, D.D., '04

The Rev. Fred E. Lott, D.D., who died Friday, February 15, 1963 at Binghamton, had an unusual career in the ministry of the Methodist Church, spanning 38 years of active duty with time out for the completion of his formal education and 17 years of retirement.

As a young man, the Rev. Dr. Lott decided on a teaching career and prepared at Bloomsburg State College, then a normal school. For six years, he taught in the public schools and after two years as a supply pastor he was ordained in 1908.

After serving charges at Barton and LeRaysville, he took a leave of absence for seven years, earning degrees at Syracuse University, Yale University, Garret Biblical Institute and Drew Theological Seminary. For his work in a constitutional law class, taught by President and Chief Justice William Howard Taft, he received special honors at Yale.

In 1917, Dr. Lott returned to his pastoral work, continuing to serve in small town charges — Union Center, Apalachin, Nichols, Newark Valley and Simpson — until 1927 when he was named to Forty Fort.

Then, his career took a sharp upward turn and in 1928 he became superintendent of Wilkes-Barre District. In 1934, he was assigned to Johnson City and in 1937 he became executive secretary of Wyoming Conference Board of Education. His service was climaxed with the pastorate of High Street, Binghamton, one of the most important in the Conference. Since his retirement in 1946, he had been plagued by ill health.

Shambach, seventy-five, a former supervising principal of the Millville schools and a graduate and one time faculty member of the Bloomsburg State College, was buried at Hiram, Ohio, on Wednesday, December 19 following services at Presbyterian Church, there at 1:30. His death occurred at his home Sunday, December 16, following a long illness.

Mr. Shambach was a member of a family prominently identified with education and he retained many of his area contacts.

A native of Spring Mills, he was born April 16, 1887, the son of the late Rev. Joshua and Sarah Jane (Yetter) Shambach. Later he spent two years as a student at Lafayette and then returned to teaching. He received his A B degree from the University of Michigan and his Master's Degree from the University of Pittsburgh.

He taught science in the Moorestown, N. J., High School and then mathematics in the Bloomsburg State Normal School. Later he was supervising principal of schools in Scranton, Wisanisco and Westmont and superintendent of the schools in Sunbury and Donora.

After retiring from public school work in 1950 he became assistant professor of education at Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio, and remained in the educational department of that institution of learning until he retired again in 1958. Part of the time he was on the Hiram faculty he was acting head of his department.

He was a member of Kappa Phi Kappa, honorary education society. Following his retirement he served as treasurer of the community of Hiram and served as a member of the cooperative board.

The educator took an active part in church work at Hiram and some years ago was elected an elder for life in the Presbyterian Church there. He had also served as an elder at the Presbyterian Church in Donora.

His first wife was Katherine Eves, Millville. Following her death he married Luella Frank Shortess. Each had a daughter by a previous marriage. Shambach's son, born of his first marriage, was killed in air combat over Italy during World War II.

The Shambachs had four grandchildren. One, the daughter of James and Olga McMahon, Shaker Heights, Ohio, was recently an exchange student in Norway, and another, the son of Morley and Sarah Margaret Anderson, Ho-Ho-Kus, N. J., spent more than a year in Paris scholos while her father supervised engineering work there.

M. L. Hartman '11

Word has been received informing us of the death of Dr. M. L. Hartman, 909 Pearl street, Belvidere, Illinois. Dr. Hartman's death occurred November 9, 1962.

L. Ray Appleman '13

L. Ray Appleman, Benton, one of the most beloved, efficient and dedicated educators in the history of the county, died February 9 in the Bloomsburg Hospital. He would have observed the seventyninth anniversary of his birth on February 16.

The retired educator had been in failing health for the past two and a half years but was able to be about. He suffered a heart attack in his home and was rushed to the Bloomsburg Hospital by the Benton community ambulance. He rallied in the institution and spoke with his wife just seconds before he died.

Mr. Appleman retired in August, 1952, after serving almost a half century as an educator, all in the Benton area. He was head of the Benton schools for forty years.

The Benton Joint Elementary School, opened shortly after his retirement, is named for him. The Benton Alumni Scholarship program, one of the finest in the area, also bears his name as a testimonial of the graduates.

He was active in all types of community endeavor and was a civic leader in the north end borough throughout his life. A devout churchman, he was active in the Benton Christian Church throughout his life. He held a number of church offices and until recently was a teacher in the Sunday School. In 1957 he was honored by his congregation for fifty years of outstanding service.

Surviving are his wife, the former Emma Straueh; two children, Ruth now Mrs. Dean Pealer, Waller and Kathleen, now Mrs. Richard Griffith, East Aurora, N. Y.;

two grandchildren, Deanna Pealer and Kenneth Griffith; three sisters, Mrs. Harry Laubach, Mrs. Karl Fritz and Mrs. Mark Skow, Benton. He was a charter member of the Benton Lodge, F. & A. M., and a past master, serving as head of the lodge in 1917. He was made a life member of the lodge in 1957 and was given a fifty-year Masonic service award in 1959. His death severed a marital union of fifty-four years last December 3.

He was born in Benton, the son of Samuel F. and Nellie Hess Appleman, and was educated in the Benton schools and Bloomsburg Normal School. Mr. Appleman began his career in a one-room school in Central in 1903. The following two years he taught at Waller and in 1906 moved into the Benton system where he taught forty-six years and until his retirement. For forty of those years he was supervising principal and during his tenure was active in the advancement of the program of education in Benton.

In 1915 the vocational program was added to the Benton curriculum and was the first course of study of this type in the county and one of the first in the commonwealth.

In 1927 Benton Borough and Township formed a joint board and constructed the main part of the present high school. This jointure was expanded in 1951 to include Jackson, Stillwater and Fishing Creek and shortly thereafter plans were completed for the present Elementary School. At that time Sugarloaf joined the jointure.

The school was opened a few months after his retirement and bears his name as a tribute to his contributions to education in the area. Throughout his career he was interested in a well balanced program of education and regarded sports as an important phase. He was always interested in athletics; was one of those who gave endorsement and worked for the creation of the Columbia County Athletic Association, formed in 1923, and his counsel was often sought with regard to various departures in the field of sports.

He was active in the creation of Benton's fine community park and for years was one of the key men in the staging of the Farmer's Picnic.

During his retirement he made a complete map of the old section of Benton cemetery. This was the first map of that plot ever drafted. He made a survey and wrote a history of his family and the day before his death completed the final chapter of a history of Benton Christian Church which was organized in 1836.

BASKETBALL

During his two and a half years as head coach of the Bloomsburg State College basketball squad, have amassed a fine record. Bloomsburg has one of the best three-year records in the history of the institution.

Coach Foster joined the Bloomsburg faculty in September, 1960, following a very successful tenure, first at Chichester High School, Boothwyn, and then at Abington High School. During the 1969-70 season, his charges compiled a 19-2 record, the best in Abington's history.

Although his first year at Bloomsburg (1960-61) was devoted largely to rebuilding, Foster surprised and pleased Husky rooters with a log of 12 wins and 4 losses. Last year, the squad was victorious in 16 outings, losing single games only to Mansfield S.C., West Chester S.C., and King's College. In both years, the Bloomsburg team finished second in the Eastern Division of the Pennsylvania State College Basketball Conference.

The red carpet was laid out for Bloomsburg's State College wrestling team when it arrived at Indiana State College, Terre Haute, Indiana, and the Huskies received it graciously, including three decisive victories over teams from the University of Nebraska, Wisconsin and the host's team in a round-robin tourney involving the four teams.

The Huskies came home with 23 of 28 matches in the victory column and three others were ties.

Wilkes Tournament

Bloomsburg State College wrestlers through a superb team effort took the championship of the Wilkes annual holiday wrestling tourney and become the first State College ever to obtain this honor.

The Huskies compiled 54 points through the accomplishments of six of the team of Russ Houk to triumph over the University of Michigan which had 45. The University of Pittsburgh, defending champion, had 38.

Other leading team scores were:

Allentown YMCA and Loek Haven State, 26; University of Maryland, 21; Springfield College, 16; West Chester State, 15; Oswego, Lyeoming and Wilkes, 12 each.

The Wilkes event, held for several decades, is dubbed the "Rose Bowl of Wrestling" and is rated by many followers of the sport as second only to the NCAA and Eastern Intercollegiates.

There were more than sixty colleges, universities and athletic clubs from all parts of the nation competing.

It was the overall excellence of the Bloomsburg team which brought the title for the Huskies crowned no individual champions. January 9—

Agnes Valimont, now Sister Mary Joseph, O.S.C., left on February 5 to help found a new cloistered monastery of contemplative nuns in Bolivia

Sister Mary Joseph was graduated in the General Business Course with a minor in English. After two years of teaching in Maryland and Pennsylvania, she became a nun at the Monastery of St. Clare, Bordentown, New Jersey.

She states in a recent letter: "Since we are a cloistered community, we Sisters destined for Bolivia do not expect to return to the United States unless some urgent reason should make it necessary.

"Our monastery will be located in Coroico, Bolivia, about 40 miles northeast of La Paz." Her address is: Madre Mana Jose, Madres Clarisas, c/o Padres Franciscanas, Casilla 2329, La Paz, Bolivia.

Judge Bernard J. Kelly, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Bloomsburg State College, a member of Common Pleas Court No. 6 of Philadelphia and a native of Exeter, has been projected into the national limelight as a result of his assignment to take over the contempt of court proceedings against the president and city editor of The Philadelphia Bulletin, growing out of their refusal to produce records, subpoenaed by the grand jury investigating alleged City Hall corruption in Pennsylvania's largest city. The Bulletin executives contend they are not required to divulge news sources under a State law.

President Judge E. Gold disqualified himself from sitting when he was challenged by The Bulletin. The case then was turned over to Judge Kelley. Because of the widespread interest in this controversial matter, Judge Kelley will undertake one of the most delicate assignments of his career.

Judge Kelley, a graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Class of 1920, and of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, Class of 1926, served in the Navy for four years and was admitted to the bar of Luzerne County after completing his law studies. He went to Philadelphia four months later and has been there since.

A great deal of his career has been devoted to public service.

with his adopted city, the Commonwealth and the Federal government. He was elevated to the bench in 1959, a post for which he was eminently qualified on the basis of the variety of experience he acquired in more than three decades of active practice.

ATTENTION, ALUMNI!

Historians and statisticians, concerned with higher education, have had a field day during the past twenty years recording and analyzing the record number of high school graduates who have poured into the colleges and universities of our nation.

On the other hand, administrators of these colleges and universities have been and are still being beset with the problems of providing classrooms, dormitories, equipment, qualified faculty, and library facilities to accommodate these surges in enrollment.

Time, money, and careful planning have been prime factors in the task of providing opportunities for all the qualified applicants who desire a college education. These factors are particularly critical in sustaining a four-year undergraduate program as well as graduate programs leading to the Master's degree.

To help meet the need for adequate funds, both private and public institutions of higher education, have of necessity turned to alumni and friends for financial support. It is interesting and encouraging to note that loyal alumni, at one of our sister institutions, have contributed $10,000 each year, for the past three years, to help their alma mater meet needs for which State appropriations are not available.

Your alma mater is proud of the large number of its graduates who have sent their children, grandchildren, nieces, and nephews to Bloomsburg to complete their undergraduate studies. It is also gratifying to note the number of alumni who are returning to the campus to earn the Master's degree.

Your alumni association has pledged its support to the college to purchase library books and to provide scholarships and loans. Will you help us to serve you and members of your family?

Your contribution, large or small, will help maintain the highest standards at Bloomsburg.

YOUR BOARD OF DIRECTORS AT WORK

Your Board of Directors held its quarterly meeting Saturday, January 19, as provided in the by-laws.

An invitation had been extended to the various branches of the Association to join with the Board at this meeting. The following branches sent representatives: Columbia, Montour, Dauphin, and Philadelphia. The purpose of this was to stimulate the activities of the various branches and revive some branches that have long been dormant.

Commendation is due to Mr. Earl Gehrig, Treasurer of the Loan Fund. He has been very successful in reducing the number of delinquent accounts to 17.

Commendation is due also to Mr. Boyd Buckingham, Director of Public Relations at the College. He has also been serving capably, without compensation, as Business Manager of the Quarterly. As a result of his efforts the active membership of the Association, as of March 19, was 1600, the highest in the history of the Association. He has rendered great service to the Association and to the College by reducing the number of Alumni for whom we have no address. There is still much to be done in this respect, as can be seen by the list of names published elsewhere in this issue.

The meeting of the Board was preceded by a meeting of the Association. The amendments published in the September issue of the Quarterly were adopted, and are now in force. Same amendments were necessary because of the change of the name of the College from "The Bloomsburg State Teachers College" to "The Bloomsburg State College."

Article IX—Section I was amended to read as follows:

"There shall be an annual meeting of the corporation on such day of each year as may be designated by the College Authorities and the Board of Directors of this Association as Alumni Day."

This leaves the date of Alumni Day largely in the hands of the Administration, and allows greater flexibility in arrangements for the program of the day.

Article XII provides for the disposal of the funds of Association, in case of dissolution. This amendment was required by the Federal Department of Revenue.

The Board will hold its net meeting Saturday, April 6.

THE PRESIDENT'S PAGE

(After Ten Years)

This morning I looked through the file of the pages which I have written for the Alumni Quarterly during the last decade.

Most of them were about money—or about new buildings—or about new curriculum offerings, degrees, curriculums—and some about the increase in student fees.

The President of the College is an executive and knows the loneliness of administration, for there comes a time of decision, despite all the counsel from associates from above and below; and it is he who says "Yes" and "No." He can't afford to make too many errors in judgment, whether it be in the selection of new faculty, the kind of expenditures in the budget, the appropriation requests sent to the legislature, or the need for the revival of alumni interest and support.

Now I want to talk about the Alumni Association. One time we had one of the largest memberships, percentage-wise, in the then State Teachers Colleges. That is to say, out of a file of 5,000 or 6,000 active addresses, we had about 1,000 to 1,500 members. With the passage of time and until the last year the figure has been about the same, regardless of graduating 300 or 400 students a year.

In other words, by merely maintaining the same number of members, we have lost ground.

However, with the reorganization of the Alumni Association, the changing of the By-Laws, and the increase in the number of directors, it is hoped that we shall be able to contact all graduates on a more frequent basis than once in five years.

The College stands ready and has, I believe, demonstrated in the past its willingness to cooperate in every way possible.

Many of those in attendance for Class Reunions on Alumni Day presented their Alumni Dues card and had their luncheon in the College Commons. These dues-paying Alumni were guests of the College.

The Alumni File of some 13,3000 (7,530 active addresses) or more students has always been kept by the clerical personnel in the College. It has been of use both to the College and to the Alumni Association. An increasing fraction of the time of the Director of Public Relations has been given to the Alumni Association, and he is at the present time the Business Manager (for the Alumni Quarterly).

Many of the branches have had their invitations duplicated and the envelopes addressed by the College, upon their request. Faculty and representatives of the College who attended meetings of these Branches have in most cases had their expenses paid by either the Community Activities or the College.

It is time that these matters be fully disclosed and that all members of the Alumni Association be aware of the encouragement and financial support the College is giving to the Association.

These are changing times and the things that were planned thirty years ago need to be reviewed and certain adjustments made to keep pace with the future.

It has been evident for many, many years that the number of teachers who are able to attend Alumni Day, held in the latter part of May, has been decreasing. In fact, most of the people in attendance are not teachers. Therefore, Alumni Day needs to be rescheduled in terms of increased attendance at a time when College Facilities are available.

It is now time, and I believe we are about ready, to have a development of the Alumni Association comparable to the growth of the College.

I am sure you will do your part for this Quarterly goes to those who are Members of the Alumni Association. We need to increase, in fact, we need to double the present Alumni membership; and the best way that you can help Bloomsburg is to ask other Alumni to join our Alumni Association.

These are the thoughts of the President,

Harry Andrus

COMMENCEMENT

Marked by the awarding of the first Master of Education Degree in its history, Bloomsburg State College before a capacity audience in Centennial Gymnasium Sunday, June 26, held its annual spring commencement and awarded Bachelor in Education Degrees to 260.

Stringfellow Barr, author, educator and lecturer told the class that citizenship in the republic of learning knows no boundaries of class, creed, color, sex, nation or geography and that those in this republic include men and women who have learned how to learn and how to go on learning until they die.

Arthur Hontz, Hunlock Creek R. D. 1 received the degree of Master of Education, this presentation coming thirty-six years after the presentation of the first Bachelor of Education Degree, that having been presented to Arthur Jenkins, then a resident of Newport Township, in 1927.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, conferred the degrees and awarded the diplomas. Presentation of the candidates were by the directors of the various divisions, who were Dr. L. Lloyd Toumey, business education; Dr. Royce O. Johnson, elementary education; C. Stuart Edwards, secondary education; Dr. Donald F. Maietta, special education and Dr. Robert C. Miller, graduate studies.

The address of the day was on the theme "The Republic of Learning" and in his message Barr stated:

"It would be pleasant and useful if on our college and university campuses each June commencement speakers could think of better reasons for celebrating than those that are usually given.

"I remember the orators of the nineteen-twenties who used to welcome graduates to the vast opportunities for money-making in the reign of Calvin Coolidge. I remember listening to others in the reign of Herbert Hoover, promising that renewed prosperity was just around the corner, while the faculty and graduating seniors wondered how many graduates would be lucky enough to find any job at all.

"But could these absurdities happen if college faculties and graduating seniors and those seniors' proud parents could remember what the function of a college really is? Or what arts a so-called bachelor of arts was assumed by our grandfathers to be ready to practice? Or why, on certain stifling June days American professors and American graduating seniors put on unfamiliar costumes originally designed to keep out the cold in western Europe? We can't remember.

"Let us remember today. The arts which bachelors of arts once learned to practice were the liberal arts. And the liberal arts were then not thought of as useless but ornamental knowledge, and certainly not as dodges for avoiding mathematics and its application to matter. They were the arts of handling the symbols which men need to use if they are to think, imaginatively and clearly — both verbal symbols and mathematical symbols. They were the arts of reading, writing, speaking, and listening. And those who had learned to do these really well, far better than all but a few of the millions of college graduates in our country today, were certified by their colleges as bachelors of arts, regardless of their future occupations.

"They were ready for citizenship in the Republic of Learning, a republic that knows today no boundaries of class, creed, color, sex, nation, or of geography. The Republic of Learning includes all men and all women who have learned, not this subject or that field, but how to learn and how to go on learning until they die. The present occasion ought to mark the naturalization of these young graduates as citizens of the Republic of Learning and invite them to its arduous and exciting responsibilities. Those who taught these graduates wish them, I am sure, not so much happy motoring, as hard and, therefore, happy thinking."

BACCALAUREATE SERVICE

"To be a person of good will one must cultivate the ability to see the good that is everywhere about us," the Rev. Dr. Virgil W. Wallace, Berwick lecturer, evangelist and minister, told the Bloomsburg State College class of 1963 at baccalaureate services held in the Centennial Gymnasium on Sunday, May 26.

The building was almost filled for the service in which the Berwick minister spoke on "The Philosophy of Good Will."

Dr. Wallace said "we have dispraised praise until the whole world seems to have entered into a conspiracy against it and as a consequence the world has become a whispering gallery of suspicion and distrust. We link praise with flattery but flattery is a counterfeit coin of good will.

"Let us agree, then, that the spirit of good will is a grace and the art of vocalizing it is a fine art. Oratory, is, I think, the finest art of all because the orator is architect, musician and painter all in one. The world needs and craves your encouragement.

"The more we praise the more we can praise. The more we give the more we have. Is it not wonderful to know that each one of you has something the whole world needs and every normal individual desires?

"The superior man's very success has thrust him upon the mountain peak and those tall peaks among the stars are very lonely. Does anyone see? Does anyone care? He needs to know.

"The mediocre, the men and women of the unstarred life, are legion. How can we praise mediocrity where there exists no distinguishing excellency? There are a thousand things to praise, but most of all that they keep going on to the end of the road. I am sure we will be very surprised to see the names in God's archives of fame.

"Members of the graduating class: there are two things you hope to find among the glittery towers and shimmering roofs. They are success and happiness. I place in the hands of each one of you the golden key of vocalized good will. It will open more doors of opportunity than any other. This golden key that will enable you to see and praise the good is every where round about in astonishing measure. Without it, there can be for you no worthwhile success and no true happiness.

"There must be wondrous music in heaven, but me thinks the Master Musician would still the throbbing of angel harps to hear the simple 'I thank you Father', from his humblest but most grateful child."

FORMER FACULTY MEMBER IN EDUCATION PROJECT

Miss Edna Barnes, former member of the BSC faculty who now resides in Orlando, Florida, heads the Sorosis Club of Orlando which recently pledged $1,600 to purchase 1,000 home study textbooks for a project to teach reading and writing to the 10,000 illiterates in Orange County, Florida.

The books will be used for home study in conjunction with television lessons broadcast three days a week. Miss Barnes writes that more than $1,500 of the money has already been obtained.

Ben C. Duke, Jr., attended London University last winter and also toured parts of Europe. He will return in the autumn to Tokyo, Japan, where he is teaching in the International Christian University. His address until September will be 103 Summerhill Avenue, Berwick, Pa.

IVY DAY

"An educated person has a moral obligation to society, and the person educated to mold the character of the future generations has a grave responsibility," John Rockwell asserted during the annual Ivy Day oration.

Rockwell also used the following quotation, made 135 years ago by Lord Brougham, to emphasize the importance of the teacher in our society, 'Let the soldier be abroad if he will; he can do nothing in this age. There is another personage—a personage less imposing in the eyes of some, perhaps insignificant. The schoolmaster is abroad, and I trust to him, along with his primer, against the soldier in full military array.'

The speaker raised several questions and answered them with a combination of quotations and personal philosophy. He asked the seniors: "Is the college graduate someone who draws unto himself a gathering of intellectuals as does a magnet with its magnetic field? Does he seem to radiate an abundance of knowledge, which he is waiting to expound the moment a simple question is put to him? Or is he a man of principle? Has he developed courage to ignore what he may safely neglect?"

In answer to these questions, Rockwell asserted, "A man or woman of principle is that person who has developed guides for his thoughts. By persisting in a course of thought toward a meaningful goal, he has obligated himself to seek truth and to accept it when he has found it. His learning has depth, because he has sown together his fragments of knowledge with underlying principles."

"There is a growing concern that general apathy exists among the very group upon which our future depends—those who have been gifted with intelligence and intellect. All too often, the average college graduate rationalizes his apathy by stating that the task of helping to save civilization belongs to the genius, or that the really important jobs always go to the lucky individuals."

"We must wake up! It's up to us now to match great challenges with great achievements, accompanied by a constant striving for excellence for all things. We must also speak up when we disagree.

"We know that we are in for a struggle, but I urge everyone here: Let our struggle for survival be used to challenge the best in each of us. Let us each try to do something—something extra, something more than routine—which will contribute to our country's strength, unity and progress."

Paul R. Bingaman, Northumberland, class president, presided at the traditional exercises. He presented the spade, used to plant the ivy, to Ernest Shyba, Kingston, president of the class of 1964.

Special music was presented by the Madrigal Singers of the College. The program was concluded with the singing of the Alma Mater, led by the Madrigal Singers under the direction of Mildred Bisgrove of the College faculty.

These grants are awarded on the basis of recognition of scholarship in a particular field of literary study, as demonstrated by research and publication of distinction.

The grant provides for at least two months study at the library at any time he chooses during the next year. Professor Seronsy, who will continue there his studies in English literature of the Renaissance, particularly in Shakespeare and Samuel Daniel, has not yet decided on the exact period of his study in Pasadena.

ALUMNI MEETING

At a session that was the largest attended in many years, Bloomsburg State College alumni heard reports of its loan fund aiding fifty-four additional students during the coming year, were told by the College president, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, of the expansion of the program of the educational institution and the increased cost being placed upon the students, and named nine to its board of directors for terms of one to three years.

Earl A. Gehrig, treasurer, reported there is $36,910 in the various funds, with additional endowments of $4,487 during the past year and from this there was $770 given to students in scholarships and grants.

In addition there is presently $111,500 in the fund provided by Miss Mary McNinch, an alumna, exclusively for student loans and there is a probability that $23,000 more will come to this fund from her estate in the near future.

At the present time there is $36,000 out in student loans and during the past year there were fifty-four loans made in a total amount of $12,700. During the year $14,540 was received in repayment of loans and the treasurer noted that practically all loans have now been placed on a current basis.

Howard F. Fenstemaker, who retires from the faculty at the close of this term, was reelected president of the board of directors at a meeting following the general alumni session.

Elected directors by the graduate body were: Millard Ludwig, Millville; Mrs. Vera H. Housenick, Dr. Kimber C. Kuster, Bloomsburg; John Thomas, Hamburg and Howard Tomlinson, Long Island, three years; Mrs. Verna Jones, Philadelphia and Ray Hargraves, Stanhope, N. J., two years and Frank Furgele, Bristol, and Edward F. Schuyler, Bloomsburg, one year.

The board at its reorganization elected Charles H. Henrie, Bloomsburg, vice president; Mrs. Elmer J. McKechnie, Berwick, secretary and Earl J. Gehrig, Bloomsburg, treasurer.

A change was made in the program from previous years, with the meeting being held in College Commons immediately following the luncheon rather than in the Carver Hall auditorium prior to the luncheon. The class of 1963 was elected into membership.

Dr. Andruss told of the College interest in the graduate organization. He spoke of this being a period of transition at the College and the beginning of an era of development the result of which no one envisions at this time.

He spoke of the history of the institution and observed that at the present time it has students from forty-five of the sixty-seven counties and around fifty attending who are residents of other states.

There has been loaned to students from the National Defense loan fund $188,000. This fund is made up ninety percent of federal funds and one per cent of student funds. He said the total of loans is large but reminded that the student enrollment is three times what it was twenty years ago and the costs of attending are much higher.

Dr. Andruss said total scholarships and grants per year average between $2,000 and $3,000 and that while money for loans was regarded as most important, more in the way of scholarship aid would be definitely advantageous. During a college year there is $100,000 paid out in student employment. Everything possible is being done to aid students but more is needed in this category.

He pointed out that the state is paying less toward the education of a student than it did eight years ago and declared the inequities in aid by the state to private and public schools must be changed. He declared there is need for the overhauling of the system of control of higher education in the state.

The representative of the oldest class was Edna Santee Huntzinger, Cleveland, Ohio, class of 1893. Mrs. J. S. John, Bloomsburg, was present from the class of 1895.

John Bakeless, Seymour, Conn., in responding for the honor class in reunion, that of 1913, observed "few realize what Bloomsburg has done for us until we get out in the world."

REMEMBER BLOOMSBURG

About twenty years ago—when the enrollment was around 700—the Alumni Association put on a drive to build up the student loan fund. Now we have 2000 students on campus and plans are being made for 3000. The late Mary McNinch provided a tremendous boost to the loan fund by making a bequest in her will of over $100,000 to the alumni Association Loan Fund.

At the present time we are loaning over $16,000 a year to needy students. The need to build up this fund is pressing. What better way to remember your Alma Mater than to make a gift to the Student Loan Fund? This can be done in your will be adding the following sentence:

"I hereby give and bequeath to the Alumni Association of Bloomsburg State College, Inc. the sum of —— Dollars (or a fraction of the estate) to be used for loans to needy students or student scholarships."

TWO ALUMNI HONORED

Two Bloomsburg State College graduates who have attained success and won great respect in the field of education were recognized by BSC alumni on Alumni Day, when Distinguished Service Awards were presented to:

Dr. Kimber C. Kuster, a member of the class of 1913 and on the faculty of his alma mater from 1935 until his retirement in 1962.

Glenn A. Oman, Scranton, a Bloomsburg native, a member of the class of 1932, now chairman of the board and president of International Textbook Company, parent firm of International Correspondence Schools, ICS, Canadian Limited and Haddon Craftsman, book manufacturers.

The presentation to Dr. Kuster was made by Howard F. Fenstemaker, president of the alumni association and longtime friend and colleague, and to Mr. Oman by Dr. Harvey A. Andrus, president of the College, during the annual meeting in College Commons.

The citation to Dr. Kuster referred to his "enthusiastic and skillful presentation of his subject" that "inspired his students to carry his high ideals to all parts of the nation."

The citation to Mr. Oman noted that "the whole world is your classroom and you have aided thousands to become skilled in many fields."

Dr. Kuster in his response paid tribute to his predecessors on the faculty and spoke of his distinct pride in the fact that his students in other institutions of learning, all over the world, were able to meet the demands upon them. He also praised the work of the local institution.

Mr. Oman in expressing his thanks mentioned the changes being made at the College, declared that "the future of Bloomsburg State College is secure" and that "I am very proud to be a part of it."

Dr. Kuster obtained the degrees of Bachelor and Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Michigan. His first contact with Bloomsburg as a member of the faculty was as a teaching assistant at the Normal School in 1916-17. He was an undergraduate assistant and graduate assistant and instructor in zoology at the University of Michigan, 1922-26 and an instructor in zoology, Oregon State College, 1927-28.

He became instructor and professor of biology at Bloomsburg State in 1935 and was chairman of the Department of Mathematics and Science until his retirement a year ago.

Dr. Knister has had a prominent role in the life of the community and presently is serving as chairman of the Bloomsburg Chapter of the Red Cross.

Mr. Oman is the son of Mrs. E. M. Oman, Market street, Bloomsburg, and is a graduate of New York University. He joined International Textbook Company as technical editor and in 1939 tool technical editor and in 1939 became assistant manager of the traffic division and was named manager a year later. He was appointed a staff assistant in the personnel department in 1949, and became director of the Cooperative Training Division of ICS in 1950. In August of 1952 he was chosen general manager of ICS, Canadian Limited, with headquarters in Montreal, and was elected vice president of that division in 1953 and president in 1956. He continues to serve as president of ICS, Canadian.

He was selected a vice president of International Textbook Company in April, 1958, and elected to the board of the company two years later. In January, 1962, he was elected president and chief executive officer of ITC and the following January assumed the responsibilities as chairman of the board. He is also a director and member of the executive committee of International Correspondence Schools, World Limited, a firm affiliated with ITC.

He is also active in civic affairs and is presently a director of the Lackawanna United Fund and the Allied Services for the handicapped, and a member of Scranton Chamber of Commerce. He resides at Clay avenue, Dunmore.

James Case, current president of the Community Government Association, installed the new president, Jerry Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howard, Carbondale. Howard is presently a junior in the Secondary Education curriculum.

The new president installed the following officers of his cabinet: John Knoll, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Knoll, Lansdale R. D. and a junior in the Secondary curriculum; Dean Long, treasurer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Long, Sweet Valley, a junior in the secondary curriculum; Elizabeth Winter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Winter, Jermyn, a junior in the elementary curriculum, and Donnie Jean Davey, Abington and a junior in the elementary curriculum.

The Bloomsburg State College Alumni Association extends to Mr. Robert C. Enders and the Bloomsburg Bank-Columbia Trust Company its thanks for the recent contribution of $50. This money will be put to good use in helping some needy student.

SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN TO FOREIGN STUDENT

A native of either Puerto Rico, Hawaii or Guam will be enrolled next Fall at BSC as a candidate for the bachelors degree in education. This program of admitting an American student of foreign origin on a four year scholarship evolved from the original idea of an international student program.

Various reasons such as language, ethnic customs, and passport barriers caused the International Committee (a new standing committee of CGA) to limit the program to American citizens. This student will then be selected on the same academic standards as regular students. After meeting the admissions standards and the approval of the International Committee, the prospective student will be recommended to the Scholarship Committee for award of the four year scholarship.

This scholarship is being formed from contributions of community groups, college alumni, institutional organizations, corporations and individual support. This scholarship will provide for the basic fee, housing fee, activities fee, and books and supplies.

Contributions thus far have been received from ARA Slater Food Service, Bloomsburg Lions Club, Memorial Elementary PTA, Bloomsburg Junior Womens Club, BSC Alumni Association, Benjamin Franklin PTA, Kappa Delta Pi, BSC student PSEA, and Phi Sigma Pi. Other organizations and individuals have also pledged their support. Myles Anderson, faculty coordinator of this program, pointed out that all contributions will be appreciated.

BSC TOLD IT CAN HELP NEW NATIONS

Dr. Zelma George, speaking on "Africa—Myths and Reality," challenged the BSC students with the task of furthering our relations with the emerging nations of the world in the assembly held May 16, in Carver Auditorium. She informed the students about some of the situations that occur every day that contribute to the downfall of our image throughout the world.

Every time a race riot occurs in the South the Communists win more people to their side while the U. S. is gradually losing face throughout the world. We promise equality and non-prejudice to the new Negro nations while at the same time the Negro is still considered inferior to the citizens in many of our Southern states.

According to Dr. George, it is the problem of the present and future leaders of our country to live up to the image we have built for ourselves. The fact that none of the new African nations have turned to Communism is a feather in our caps but we can't rest on our laurels.

A daughter, Cindy Ann, has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Roadarmel, Rushville, R. D., N. Y. Mrs. Roadarmel is the former Marie Tomko, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tomko, R. D. 3. Mr. Roadarmel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Roadarmel, Cr., of Bloomsburg, and is teaching in the Middlesex Valley Central High School, Rushville.

George Chaump, coach at John Harris High School, Harrisburg, was honored as one of the "coaches of the year" by the Central Pennsylvania Old Timers' Athletic Association, at the group's annual award program on January 7.

PRESIDENT ANDRUSS LOOKS AT FUTURE

In "Looking Ahead to the Nineteen Seventies at Bloomsburg," Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the Bloomsburg State College, told the student body and faculty at a recent convocation:

The College will accept at summer school on a trial basis ten per cent of a freshman class that in college boards scores do not rank as high as generally required. This was launched on a trial basis last summer for around fifty and thirty-four of the trial group are still at the College.

"Now we face another challenge with the introduction of Arts and Science courses beginning with September, 1963." He said the College is likely to admit four sections, not to exceed 120, who will pursue courses that are generally followed in colleges not specifically devoted to the education of teachers.

As to the difference in course, he said it will not be great, except that the math requirements of one semester for all students will be increased to a year for those in Arts and Science and one foreign language will be required. "Otherwise the beginning courses for the first two years may be found in our catalog at the present time. The second year will provide electives in the fields that are selected and completed during the first year. There will be an opportunity for Arts and Science students to consider teacher education.

"This crossover to transfer from one curriculum to the other at the end of the second year will probably be easier in elementary and secondary education, or for those who expect to teach in the elementary and the academic subjects in the secondary school without loss of credit.

"However, if business education, special education for the mentally retarded and speech correction is elected, it probably would require from one semester to one year additional college attendance." He said the question has been asked if an added year's attendance will entitle the student to his second Bachelor's Degree, but no commitments have been made.

With regard to faculty, in which he expressed the hope that at least forty per cent will have Doctor's Degrees, he observed that "the greatest single problem of our College at this time, which must be solved, is that of faculty salaries.

"It is hoped that the Legislature will see fit to enact a law which will increase faculty salaries substantially. To do this it will be necessary for additional funds to be made available at the rate of $45 to $50 per student. When you realize that there will be 30,000 students in State Colleges this year, this means an increase in the appropriation of $1,500,000.

"If the state had spent as much money on faculty salaries, as it has on increasing the facilities, we not only would have air-conditioned colleges, but we would also have air-conditioned faculties."

"This college has on the books, or in prospect, between $5 and $6 million worth of construction. The fact of the matter is, the building or all the buildings with all this money will not in itself result in education.

He spoke of the various projects now underway or on the books and including an auditorium near Navy Hall to seat 2,000 and cost more than $1,500,000. There will also be a new library.

He spoke of the state's purchase of the Country Club property and said that "if this institution is to eventually accommodate from 4,000 to 5,000 students it will be necessary to purchase additional land with the thought that possibly 2,000 more students need to be accommodated on the present campus of more than 60 acres.

Mention was made of the need to supplement the Country Club tract of 47 acres with the purchase of a Magee tract of 21 acres.

Discussing future needs he said "there is need for a second gymnasium or field house and consideration given to changing the field house from the present campus to the Country Club campus. Provision should be made for seating at least 3,000 spectators.

"Up to the present time, consideration has not been given to the need for a new administration building, or the location of administrative offices, or for a new laboratory school as a research center. The present laboratory school is thirty years old, and does not conform in its present pattern to schools that are being built. In the event that a new laboratory research center for children were constructed, the present laboratory school could be used for classroom purposes.

The educator told the assembly that the facts presented "are relayed to you so that you may have some idea of the general direction that your Alma Mater is taking, so as to help you to locate how far we have gone in the journey toward a bigger and better Bloomsburg."

MAY DAY

A colorful parade of holiday observances, in song and dance, highlighted the annual May Day program on the campus of Bloomsburg State College.

Pupils of the Benjamin Franklin Laboratory school joined with college women to present an entertaining program in honor of May Queen Betty Scaife, Williamsport senior.

The crowning of the queen by James Case, president of the College Council, was carried out in traditional ceremonies which followed a concert by the Maroon and Gold band under the direction of Nelson A. Miller.

Pupils of the first grade at Benjamin Franklin school scattered flowers in the path of the May Queen and her court. Senior girls who served as the honor court were Gail Allen, Patricia Biehl, Mary Lyn Brock, Sally Creasy, Carol Davenport, Barbara Flanagan, Meg Gordos, Lois Heston, Barbara Hickernell, Elizabeth Jenkins, Sandy McKee, Margie Snook, Peggy Stiles and Joanne Tenzyk.

The members of the honor court and the queen's attendants, Betty Hodovance, Dolores Keen, Scrilyn Morell, Dorothy Stanton, Patricia Wadsworth and Mary Zevas, were dressed in full-skirted gowns in pastel shades and carried colorful bouquets.

The dark-haired Queen of the May was in a white gown and carried an arm bouquet of red roses. Her red velvet train was carried by pupils from the training school.

To open the May Day program, the college vocal group, The Harmonettes, assisted by the special class, presented selections honoring Lincoln's birthday. College girls appeared in a colorful Valentine dance and grade 2, in colonial attire, danced the minuet to mark Washington's birthday. The fourth grade illustrated St. Patrick's day with a lively jig and kindergarten children acted out an Easter bunny story in costume.

College girls presented patriotic dance and drills in observance of Flag Day and Fourth of July. Dressed as hobgoblins, witches and ghosts, third graders depicted

FASHION SHOW

Twenty-two college coeds stepped into the spotlight of an artistically-arranged setting on the stage of Carver Auditorium on Thursday, March 28, to model the latest Spring and Summer costumes for milady's wardrobe. The program, following the theme "Fashions for '63," was presented on the campus of the Bloomsburg State College at 2:00 and 8:00 p. m. on March 28.

Costumes, stage-set, models, and commentary again equalled the excellent standards of the past. In recent years, the event has drawn nearly 1,800 student and adult spectators from a radius of 70 to 100 miles. In addition to the college models, the Fashion Show committee, headed by Mrs. Margaret McCern, of the college faculty, again selected 15 children of pre-school and pre-teen ages to delight the spectators with the newest costumes in children's wear along with some unscheduled but amusing antics.

Costumes and accessories for the show were provided by the following Bloomsburg retail stores: W. T. Grant, J. C. Penny, The Young Set, Areus', Maree's, the Diane Shop, the Ruth Corset Shop, Snyder's Millinery, Harry Logan Jewelers. Fresh floral arrangements accented and highlighted the set. Invitations to attend the show were also sent to senior girls in 65 schools from seven counties.

Miss Suzanne Weatherill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Weatherill, R. D. 1, and Dr. Donald A. Vannan, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Vannan, Danville, were married recently in Jerseytown Methodist church. A reception followed in the church social rooms.

The bride graduated from Millville High School and BSC and is a teacher in Turbotville elementary school. The bridegroom, a graduate of Danville High School and Millersville State College, received his Doctor's degree from Pennsylvania State University. He served two years with the U. S. Navy during the Korean conflict and is now an assistant professor of education at BSC.

WILSON PORTRAIT UNVEILED

Samuel L. Wilson, head of the English Department of Bloomsburg State College from 1927 to his retirement in 1951, and a member of the faculty twenty-eight years, was honored at alumni festivities on the campus on Alumni Day when his portrait, a gift of the class of 1931 and many faculty and faculty emeriti, was unveiled and presented to the institution of learning.

James Davis, Mechanicsburg, president of the class, in the presentation said the honored educator has many fine qualities but it is remembered best for three: as a master of his subject, a disciplinarian and one always fair.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, in accepting for the school referred to Mr. Wilson as "one of the greatest teachers I have known" and said the portrait was presented by former students and colleagues as an expression of love for him as a man, respect for him as a teacher and regard for him as a friend.

The portrait was painted by Mrs. Eleanor Herre and was unveiled by Dr. Andruss.

Davis in his presentation listed the portrait committee composed of Orval C. Palsgrove, Clarence R. Wolever and Mrs. Eshier Yeager Castor, co-chairmen; Frank J. Golder treasurer and Dr. Edward T. DeVoe, of the BSC faculty, publicity.

No announcement of the presentation was made in advance but the committee did distribute among the some 700 at the luncheon, programs of the testimonial which included a reproduction of the portrait. A few changes were later made to the oil by Mrs. Herre.

Mr. Wilson in his response observed he was "overwhelmed" and that it was a wonderful feeling after "twenty-eight of the happiest years of my life which were spent as a member of the faculty of this institution."

He said in that period he had not had one unpleasant experience with a faculty colleague or student and said "it is a wonderful feeling now that I realize I will

BSC FACULTY HONORS TWO

Howard F. Fenstemaker, a member of the Bloomsburg State College faculty for the past thirty-seven years, and Russell Schleicher, who retired from the faculty in the spring of 1962 and is now teaching at Bel Air, Md., were honored by the BSC Faculty Association at a much enjoyed dinner program in College Commons on Saturday evening, April 27. One hundred-forty were in attendance.

Dr. Edward T. DeVoe made the presentation gifts, on behalf of the association, and in so doing traced the histories of the two educators.

Both men responded, with Fenstemaker, after receiving the gift, observing "I guess it's too late to back out now." William Cope handled the program as master of ceremonies.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, spoke of the contributions made to the local institution of learning by both men. He punctuated his remarks with some of the lighter side of education, drawing especially from the rich and well rounded career of the head of the language department. One of his stories was about Fenstemaker's offer to contribute an old green rain coat to Bundles for Britain if Bloomsburg won a certain football game. The Huskies did and the professor made good on his offer.

Fenstemaker, who is also president of the general Alumni Association of BSC, and has long been active in the community, is a graduate of the local College and also of the University of Michigan where he was recognized for his scholarship by being made a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He is a past president of the Kiwanis Club be looking down on incoming and outgoing classes and will view the progress of the institution."

Present for the testimonial were his wife and his son and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. William Wilson, Broomall, Pa. At the close of the session he was showered with congratulations by those in the banquet hall.

and a leader in the First Baptist congregation, where he taught Sunday School thirty-seven years and has been the organist for thirty-six. He is also active in Free Masonry.

He also holds a Masters' Degree from New York University.

Prof. Fenstemaker was honored by the BSC graduate body during Alumni Day, 1961, when former students presented his portrait to the College and the graduate body established as a testimonial to him the Fenstemaker Library Fund which is still growing.

With regard to Mr. Schleicher, Dr. DeVoe observed "he has been a successful teacher primarily because he has never ignored the human element in his classroom teaching. To me, Mr. Schleicher will ever be Mark Hopkins sitting on one end of the log."

Retired members of the faculty in attendance were Dr. Kimber C. Kuster and C. M. Hausknecht. Their wives were also guests.

Entertainment was provided by Miss Betty Scaife and John Sills, accompanied by Mrs. Janet Knorr. Miss Scaife sang "Secret Love," and Sills, "My Lord, What a Morning." They also presented the duet, "Moon River."

Mrs. William S. Beckley was chairman of the banquet committee. The officers of the faculty organization are Dr. Donald D. Rabb, president; Kenneth Roberts, vice president; Mrs. Mary Lou John, daughter of Prof. Fenstemaker, secretary-treasurer, and James Leitzel, Miss Susan Rusinko, Charles Halstead and James Creasy, members of the executive committee.

LEGISLATORS VISIT BSC

The increased cost of an education in a state college being placed on the student was stressed by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of Bloomsburg State College, when he addressed fifteen State Senators and Assemblymen from the service area of the local educational institution, after they had toured the campus Thursday, April 25.

The state's cost in this program have increased 103 per cent in a comparatively short period but the cost to the student has gone up 128 per cent in that period the average income of families with students in these colleges has increased from $4,000 to $6,200 but at the same time the basic fees the student must pay have increased 250 per cent.

It was pointed out that under the school code the tuition at state institutions is free to the students of the state, but basic fees now include cost above maintenance.

The Legislators were considerably interested in the program as was evidenced by their questions at the close of the program. Rep. Adam T. Bower, Sunbury, declared he had received more answers to questions which previously he had been unable to obtain.

Inquiry was made among the students as to what they thought of increasing the sales tax to four and a half per cent. One replied he would not like to pay this increase but would be willing to do so because of the things which it would provide.

Most of the visitors contingent arrived in early afternoon. Each was personally escorted around the campus by a girl and man attending BSC from the Legislator's district.

Following that they met for an hour and a half with all of the trustees and many of the faculty.

At the conclusion of the meeting the Legislators and their student escorts had dinner in College Commons.

Dr. Andruss traced the development of the teachers colleges and of some of the plans for Bloomsburg. He said, with regard to the Country Club tract which has been purchased, that consideration was being given to the development of a junior college, a community college or to one giving the first two years of a four year course.

He said that a third of the local student body resides on the campus, a third in private homes in the community and a third commutes. Many girls, he said, cannot be accepted for there are not housing accommodations on campus for them.

The educator stressed the increased financial burden being placed on the student. He said the colleges are always in financial stress because the appropriation is based on enrollment of the previous year and each term that enrollment increases.

Total enrollment today in the fourteen teachers colleges is as large as in 1955-56 combined.

He also stressed the need for higher faculty salaries so that good instructors may be secured and retained. He said the salaries today are under those paid in private colleges of the state and in the colleges of the nation as a whole.

Because of teaching salaries in the state, around thirty per cent of the graduates tend to leave to teach in other states. Many of these, however, fulfill their obligation of teaching in Pennsylvania for two years.

INTERNSHIP AT COLLEGE

Miss Maria Isabel Nolasco, an elementary teacher and supervisor from Honduras, Central America, spent an internship in elementary education at Bloomsburg State College. Miss Nolasco began her stay on the campus on March 18, and returned to Pennsylvania State University on April 17. Miss Nolasco's visit to the Bloomsburg State College campus marks the second time in a period of two years in which the local institution has cooperated with the Latin American Education Project sponsored by the United States Agency for International Development and The Department of Elementary Education of The Pennsylvania State University. Last year, the college community was host to Mr. Carlos Morales of Guatemala, Central America.

The purpose of Miss Nolasco's participation in the Latin American Education Project was to enable her and other members of the group to spend an extended period of time in carefully selected schools and institutions in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The ten months of professional internship climaxes a long period of study of systems of education in the United States and gives the participants an opportunity to see first hand our educational program in full swing.

During her stay in Bloomsburg, Miss Nolasco spent much of her time in the Benjamin Franklin Elementary Laboratory School on the college campus. Miss Nolasco has served as an urban teacher at Renovacion School in Jesus de Otoro, and has been responsible for training rural teachers-in-service.

620 FROM 96 SCHOOLS ON BSC CAMPUS

Five hundred thirty-five students and eighty-five faculty members from ninety-six colleges and universities in the United States visited the campus of the Bloomsburg State College during March, to participate in either varsity sports, band, or debating events.

On March 8 and 9, 117 swimmers and six colleges participated in the Pennsylvania State College swimming championship which was held in Centennial Gymnasium. A week later, the NAIA National Wrestling Tournament brought 166 wrestlers and forty-eight coaches to the campus and the town for a three-day period.

In the middle of the following week, the 90 members of the Pennsylvania State University Glee Club presented a concert in Carver Auditorium, and two days later, twenty debaters and five faculty advisors competed in the Pennsylvania State College Debate Tournament. The activities of the month culminated with the three-day Intercollegiate Band Festival featuring 142 college musicians and twenty directors from thirty-six colleges and universities in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

These activities are a part of the expanded program presented by the College in an effort to provide more entertainment and participation for both the participants as well as spectators. The growth of the College in recent years has been one of the key factors in making many of these events possible.

John Enman, Associated Professor of Geography at Bloomsburg State College, presented a paper discussing "The Rise and Decline of the Connellsville Beehive Coke Region" at the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Academy of Science at the Penn-Stroud Hotel, Stroudsburg, on Friday, April 12.

SPOKE AT THE COLLEGE

Dr. Donald R. Coates, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Geology at Harpur College, State University of New York at Binghamton, spoke to student and faculty groups at Bloomsburg State College who are working in or interested in the various phases of Earth Science and related areas in the Physical Sciences.

The visiting geologist was brought to the campus of BSC by Dr. Bruce E. Adams, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Geography, working through the American Geological Institute at Washington, D. C.

Dr. Coates worked directly with the local college geography staff for the period March 26-28, and with students interested in such areas as geology, physiography, and physical geography, as well as certain aspects of the physical sciences. Among topics presented to these groups were "The Ice Ages," "A New Look at Geomorphology" and "Geologic History of Southern New York and Northern Pennsylvania." There were also numerous periods with faculty and student groups.

David K. Shortess, Bloomsburg, assistant professor of biological sciences at the Bloomsburg State College, is one of ten students of the Pennsylvania State University to be awarded National Science Foundation Graduate Fellowships in the sciences, mathematics and engineering for the academic year of 1963-64.

The local educator, who has had one year of graduate work toward a doctorate in philosophy, under the fellowship will receive $2,000 for study at the intermediate level in the year ahead and $2,200 for the terminal year. Mr. and Mrs. Shortess and their three children plan to move to State College in the Fall.

He is a graduate of Lycoming College, Williamsport, with a Bachelor of Arts degree, and received a Master of Education in Biological sciences from Penn State. He came to Bloomsburg from the faculty of the high school in his native South Williamsport.

FOUR NEW BUILDINGS ARE PLANNED

An increase of $1,500,000 in allocations for the planning, construction, and furnishing of six buildings at Bloomsburg State College was announced in November, 1962, by the General State Authority. Originally, the six buildings were estimated at $5,460,000. The increase to $6,984,000, plus nearly $800,000 for architects' fees, furniture and equipment, brought the revised total allocations of $7,694,000. Nearly half, or $3,215,000 of this amount, will be used to build dormitories which are selfliquidating. Housing fees collected from students over a period of years are used to liquidate the cost of construction and furnishing.

In 1962, the General State Authority also spent $150,000 to purchase the Bloomsburg Country Club ($100,000) and the Dillon home ($50,000). Each of the two is either adjacent or near to the present campus and will play a vital part in the proposed growth of the College.

The addition to the heating plant, the revision to the electrical system, and the expansion and replacement of utilities are nearing completion. Construction has started on two dormitories to house 500 women; these two buildings will be erected in areas adjacent to Science Hall and are scheduled for completion in August, 1964.

Preliminary drawings for a four-story dormitory to house 300 men were signed recently by President Andruss. The new building will be constructed on the site of Old North Hall. Steel frame construction will be utilized with brick veneer and block back-up. The general architectural style and materials will blend with those of New North Hall. The building will contain 160 rooms for students, rooms and counselors, study rooms, lounges on each floor, a recreation room, a TV room, administrative offices, a mail room, an administrative apartment, a fall-out shelter area, and a self-operating elevator.

Architects have submitted preliminary plans and a model of an auditorium to seat 2,000 people. Final drawings are expected to be submitted in July, 1963. Cost of construction has been estimated at $1,400,000.

Funds in excess of 660,000 have been approved for the planning of a library to seat 500 readers and provide shelving for 200,000 volumes. The estimated cost of construction is $1,329,000.

Increases in enrollment and in the number of faculty and non-instructional employees, additions to existing buildings, the beginning of construction of new buildings, completion of architect's plans for other new buildings, the purchase of equipment for instructional purposes, increased alumni activity, purchase of additional land area, and an expansion of curriculum offerings are highlights of the 1962-1963 college year. The many aspects of growth at Bloomsburg State College, during the past year and the one that lies ahead, reflect the careful planning and vision of President Harvey A. Andruss and the Board of Trustees.

For the fourth consecutive year, the College expects to bring nearly $2,000,000 into the Bloomsburg area in terms of salaries and wages, and money spent locally by students living in dormitories, students living in the town of Bloomsburg and students who commute to the campus each day from their homes. Additional sums spent by parents and other visitors by the College Commons, by the Husky Lounge and Snack Bar, by student organizations and activities, and on contracts for supplies and repairs will raise the total to $2,500,000.

With a total enrollment of more than 2,000 undergraduate and graduate students, the College provides employment for 127 full-time faculty members, 122 non-instructional employees, and 98 part-time student employees.

The present number of students and faculty is three times as great as ten years ago, and, in 1962, summer sessions attracted more students than the total number enrolled during the college years of the early 1950's. This increase and the growth of the graduate program has provided more extensive summer employment opportunities for both faculty and non-instructional employees.

The continued development of the graduate program leading to the Master of Education degree in either Business, Elementary, or Special Education and authorizations to grant the Bachelor of Arts degree in the Natural Sciences, Social Sciences and the Humanities added new milestones to the cultural history of an institution which is nearing its 125th anniversary.

During 1963, approval will be sought to grant the Master's degree in Education in the fields of Social Studies and English; the Arts and Science programs are expected to get underway with the beginning of the Fall term in September, 1963. The latter program climaxes years of curriculum study and revision as well as careful efforts to secure faculty members who have earned Liberal Arts degrees and have had teaching experience in Liberal Arts colleges.

The expansion of curriculum offerings will provide new and additional opportunities in higher education for students in the Bloomsburg area and the Commonwealth.

The college will continue to sponsor annual events which have interest and value to residents of the Bloomsburg area and the Commonwealth. These include the Education Conference, the High School Business Education Conference, Parent's Day, Homecoming, Alumni Day and national and state-wide athletic tournaments.

Community Activities Fees, paid by students and faculty to support cultural programs, recreation opportunities and both intercollegiate and intramural athletic activities, exceed $100,000 this year. All varsity sports contests and cultural programs are open to the public at no charge or at a nominal charge.

631 COLLEGE STUDENTS IN HOMES OF BLOOMSBURG

Two thousand forty-three students were enrolled in classes at Bloomsburg State College for the first semester of the 1962-1963 college year, according to Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president. This is an increase of nearly one hundred over the number completing registration in September, 1961, and includes 1,976 full-time students and 67 part-time students. Of the latter group, 47 are graduate students, completing requirements for the Master of Education degree, and 17 are undergraduates earning the Bachelor's degree.

Campus dormitories house 662 men and women; the number of students accommodated in homes in town has increased to 631, and another 683 commute from their homes each day. It is interesting to note that the number of men continue to exceed the number of women; the ratio is approximately 11 to 9.

Since the demand for courses, offered on a part-time basis to nurses, did not reach the necessary minimum, the College did not offer this type of instruction during the first semester of the year.

The critical need for additional classroom space has already imposed limitations on continued increases in enrollment and in curriculum offerings. The present classroom shortage can be relieved to some degree by beginning classes at 7 a. m., by adding classes from 4 to 5 p. m., or by scheduling evening classes. However, some consideration must be given to students who drive relatively long distances to and from their home each day.

It seems likely that any immediate increase in enrollment could be accomplished only by admitting a larger number of male students, who could find housing accommodations off-campus. There are now 463 men and 168 women living in town of Bloomsburg; however, at the present time there are spaces for 114 men and 15 women, which are not occupied.

In view of the fact that housing accommodations for more than 150 students now exist in the town of Bloomsburg and there are numerous proposals on the part of householders and private investors to provide additional accommodations, the college, while most appreciative of past cooperation, cannot encourage future planning and investment in private student housing until (1) the campus plan for the Bloomsburg Country Club area is completed; (2) the State announces its policy regarding students living in self-liquidating dormitories if they do not live in their own homes; and (3) the policy to be followed by the new administration in Harrisburg regarding appropriations for increased student enrollments which are now housed in over-crowded classrooms.

With this in mind, the trustees have passed a resolution indicating that the College can make no announcements or commitments regarding the future occupancy of additional housing space for students in or near the town of Bloomsburg until the expansion plans have been approved by the Department of Public Instruction, the office of the Governor of the Commonwealth, and the General State Authority.

This action is intended to coordinate the private housing of students, which had made the present expansion of the College possible with the plans for self-liquidating dormitories, which will be constructed in the future, so as to prevent over-investment in private housing for students in the town of Bloomsburg.

The following note was recently received from Ruth Hope (Mrs. William E. Handy): "My cousin's daughter will enter BSC this Fall and our daughter expects to go to Bloomsburg in 1965. We spent a weekend in Alexandria, Va., with Kay and Elwood Wagner last October. They are nicely situated and quite typical of the Air Force family. In addition to taking care of my busy husband, I am teaching on a substitute basis, plus helping Dad with his interests—farming and insurance. I now have my license."

COMMITTEE VISITS BSC

Bloomsburg State College played host to a committee from the Middle States Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges during the week of February 18 in another of many steps being taken to expand its educational services and programs of study. The committee, headed by Dr. Francis Crowley, one-time Dean of the Faculty, Fordham University, began their survey of staff and facilities Monday evening, February 18. They remained on the campus until Wednesday afternoon, February 20.

BSC is seeking approval of the Pennsylvania State Council of Education to offer the degree of Master of Education in the fields of English and Social Studies, including Geography. The Middle States Committee will submit the report of its findings to the State Council as a basis for granting approval to expand the graduate offerings of the College.

Bloomsburg launched its graduate programs in 1961 when approval was granted to offer graduate study in the fields of Elementary Education and Business Education. In 1962, the programs were extended to the areas of Special Education for the Mentally Retarded and Speech Correction. At the present time, there are more than 100 persons enrolled in the Division of Graduate Studies, which offers programs of study in the Summer Sessions and during the Fall and Spring semesters on a part-time basis.

Other members of the visiting committee were Dr. Phyllis Bartlett, Chairman of the Department of English, Queens College, New York; Dr. Aubrey Land, Chairman of the History Department, University of Maryland; Dr. Joseph Butterweck, representing the Department of Public Instruction.

Dr. Robert Miller, Chairman of the Division of Graduate Studies, heads the local committee which consists of Dr. John Serff, Dr. Bruce Adams, Dr. Cecil Seronsy, Dr. S. Lloyd Tonney, Dr. Donald Maietta, Miss Elinor Keefer and Dean John A. Hoch.

BEGIN BSC ORIENTATION

Dr. Maxwell H. Goldberg, professor of humanities at Pennsylvania State University, addressed the Faculty Association of Bloomsburg State College Tuesday evening, February 26.

Speaking on "Liberal Arts Studies For Our Tribe," Dr. Goldberg pointed out there is growing indication of a realistic effort to link the liberal arts tradition with action oriented programs in professional education. He added that the results of continuing national meetings of learned societies and professional associations are encouraging.

He said that "the winds of change are bringing down the walls that existed for many years between liberal arts and professional education and between the disciplines in the Arts and Sciences themselves."

He offered a number of specific suggestions for the faculty in their approach to the new programs in the Arts and Sciences as they get underway next September.

Dr. Goldberg was introduced by Professor Richard Savage, English department. Dr. Donald Rabell, president of the faculty association was in charge of the meeting. The program was the first of a series to be presented to orient the BSC faculty concerning the Arts and Sciences program.

Joseph DeRose received the degree of Master of Education at the commencement exercises held at the Pennsylvania State University, March 23, 1963. Mr. DeRose's major was clinical speech.

WORKING WITH DISTINGUISHED ITALIAN SCULPTOR

Ruth Hutton Ancker, Bloomsburg native, who is a resident of Berkeley Heights, N. J., is spending three months in Rome, Italy, where she is working in the studio of Alessandro Monteleone, distinguished Italian sculptor, as an invited artist.

It is a European tradition for continental artists to invite other artists from foreign countries to share their studios. There they enjoy the freedom and atmosphere of spacious studios, meet other artists with like interests and exchange ideas. Also they are granted privacy and time, with all the facilities of a European studio, to pursue their creative work.

Mrs. Ancker, who has attracted much attention as a sculptor in the past few years, left a brilliant career as a fashion artist to enter the fine arts field. She did not start exhibiting her work until 1950, but has had special shows in this country and abroad. Three years ago, she and Danilo Bergamo, French painter, held a successful joint exhibit of their work in Rome.

She has been a pupil of the late Oronzio Maldarelli and has also worked with the Parisian sculptor, ntoucci Volti and the Hungarian, Ferenc Varga. She has been influenced by these three great artists, but is unique in her own discoveries which have been termed "poetic" and "archaic." One critic has termed her a "modern traditionalist" and she too feels that her work combines ancient Greek and Egyptian influences with twentieth-century simplifications.

While in Rome, Mrs. Ancker will be executing several commissions from patrons in the states. One is a figure in bronze of St. Francis of Assisi for a garden at St. Andrews Episcopal Church, Murray Hill, N. J. The figure will be fifty inches high and will be cast by a foundry in Pisa, Italy. St. Francis' hands are cupped before him and they will be filled with bird seed to attract birds to the garden.

Monteleone, in whose studio Mrs. Ancker is working, is one of Rome's leading sculptors. He specializes in church work and is an authority on St. Francis.

Among other pieces, Mrs. Ancker will do a sculpture portrait for bronze casting of Signora Goffredo Sylvestro, a young Roman matron. She has completed two new creative pieces and plans several more before returning home in June. On the trip back she will visit her brother, Terry, and family, in Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany.

Mrs. Ancker plans a one-man show the first two weeks of December in the War Eggleston Galleries, New York, and will show entirely new pieces not previously exhibited.

Recently, Mrs. Ancker completed a life-size mask in terra cotta of Eleanor Sancs Smith, poet and editor of The Morning Press Poetry Column. Her portrait bust of the Hon. Joseph Robbins, a relative of the well-known Bloomsburg family, has won international acclaim.

Mrs. Ancker, who graduated from Bloomsburg State College at the age of seventeen and later received a degree from Columbia University, is the sister of Robert Hutton, Bloomsburg. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. William Hutton, Bloomsburg.

Miss Jane Mary Petusky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Petusky, Catawissa R. D. 3 and David John G. Bull, son of Rev. and Mrs. George H. Bull, Catawissa R. D. 1, were united in marriage Saturday, May 25 at Our Lady of Mercy Church, Roaringcreek.

At the University of Pittsburgh he had taken graduate studies toward a Ph.D. degree. For a time he taught English social studies at Bloomsburg High School. Ordained by the Methodist Church in 1945, the Rev. Mr. Peelor has served pastores in Connecticut and Pennsylvania.

Mr. Peelor has been Chairman of the Board of Christian Social Concerns for the Western Pennsylvania Conference of The Methodist Church since 1958. In 1962 he was nominated to the Board of the Pittsburgh Child Guidance Center. Two years ago his first book, "Angel With a Slingshot," was published. With the exception of his recall to active duty, Mr. Peelor has been pastor of Christ Methodist Church since October, 1949.

Major Samuel Kurtz, U. S. Air Force, former music supervisor at Bloomsburg High School, served as guest conductor for the Northeastern District Band Festival held March 7-9 at Central Columbia County Joint High School.

Major Kurtz, composer-conductor, is serving the United States Air Force in a dual capacity. He is the command band director for the Air Training Command at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, and commander of the 539th Air Force Band at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

His duties at Air Training Command headquarters began in 1958 and in March 1960 the major received his additional duty assignment as commander of the Lackland Band. This band, known as the "Air Force Band of the West," was organized by Major Kurtz while on a previous assignment to Lackland in 1949.

Born in Reading, in 1909, Major Kurtz earned his bachelor's degree at State Teachers College, Bloomsburg, and his master's degree in Music Education at Pennsylvania University.

Major Kurtz studied for several years with Arthur Pryor, trombone virtuoso, and was music supervisor in the Bloomsburg public school system from 1931 to 1939. He served in a similar capacity in the Stroudsburg school system in 1940 and 1941. The major has written two band works, "Bolero Non" and "Mirage." Both compositions were published in 1941.

With the outbreak of World War II, Major Kurtz went to Casablanca as a club program director with the American Red Cross, but a short time later he enlisted in the U. S. Army. After slightly more than six months as a private he was appointed warrant officer and took command of the 310th Army Service Forces Band.

Returning to the United States in 1945, Major Kurtz was assigned to the Special Service Music Branch, U. S. Army, in New York City, but in the fall of that year he was reassigned to the Air Force Band at Bolling Field, Washington, D. C., as assistant band leader to Col. (then Captain) George S. Howard. While in Washington he organized and conducted the famed Air Force "Singing Sergeants."

In 1949, Major Kurtz was transferred to Lackland Air Force Base where, in addition to establishing the "Air Force Band of the West" he organized the WAF Band and served as commandant of the Bandsman Indoctrination School.

From Lackland the major was sent in 1952 to Hawaii and then served in consecutive tour of duty in Tokyo, Japan, until 1957. In 1954, Major Kurtz was promoted from warrant officer (W-3) to major, thereby becoming the highest ranking band director—other than the director of the Air Force Band—in the U. S. Air Force.

Major Kurtz is a member of Pi Mu Epsilon, a professional musician's fraternity, and is an honorary life member of the Texas Bandmasters' Association. He is a director of the National Bandmasters' Association, and was elected in 1962 to the American Bandmasters' Association. He has been awarded an honorary Doctorate of Music degree by the Southern College of Fine Arts at Houston, Tex.

The major has actively participated for the past five years in the Tri-State Music Festival conducted each spring at Enid, Okla., and for the past four years has conducted the "Air Force Band of the West" in performances at the Texas State Fair at Dallas. In 1961, the major presented a band concert to the Chicago Mid-West Band Clinic which is recognized as the national band clinic of the United States.

Major Kurtz is active in Boy Scout work and has served for the past three years as committeeman for his area.

Among his service decorations, the major wears the Air Force Commendation Medal. Married to the former Alleyne Sheffield, of Osage, Tex., Major and Mrs. Kurtz have an adopted son, David, who is thirteen.

A recruiting drive for future college teachers culminated in the award of first year Woodrow Wilson Fellowships at 1,475 college students and honorable mention to 1,154 others.

Each Fellowship covers tuition and fees for the first year at the graduate school of the Fellow's choice, plus a stipend of $1,500 and dependency allowances, Sir Hugh Taylor, president of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, said in making the announcement. Miss Beatrice B. Letterman, daughter of Mrs. Beatrice Letterman, Bloomsburg, is one of the recipients. Miss Letterman has been honored by having her name included in the publication of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges and is a member of the Kappa Delta Pi honor society in education.

"Committees of eminent college professors and deans picked this year's winners from among 9,767 candidates named by faculty members at 907 colleges in the United States and Canada," Sir Hugh noted, and added, "it is our hope that these newly-elected Woodrow Wilson Fellows will continue as deo-sively as possible toward the attainment of the Ph.D. Toward that end we can meet the foreign language requirements of their graduate schools.

"All these winners—the largest number we have selected in any one year thus far—were chosen as 'good bets' for college teaching. We hope they will follow that career, yet we do not hold them to such a firm commitment. We ask only that they give college teaching serious consideration."

Patricia Biehl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Biehl, Hamburg, has received an "Award of Merit for Outstanding Achievement in Business Education" from the National Business Education Assn.

Dr. S. Lloyd Toumey, director of the Division of Business Education at BSC, presented the award to Miss Biehl at the annual dinner meeting of Alpha Delta Chapter of Pi Omega Pi, professional education fraternity.

The award consists of an attractive certificate, a year's professional membership in the National Business Education Association, a special simulated leather binder for current issue of Business Education Forum, a national professional magazine for business teachers, and a 1964 National Business Education Yearbook.

The National Business Education Association and its teacher education division, the National Association for Business Teacher Education, sponsored this award.

A 1959 graduate of the Hamburg Area Joint High School, Miss Biehl has participated in a variety of activities at Bloomsburg. She served as a class officer for three years, was a member of the fashion show staff four years, and Business Education Club, the Student Pennsylvania State Education Association, the Waller Hall Dormitory Council, and Pi Omega Pi fraternity. In

COMMENTS ON LITWHILER

Woodrow A. Litwhiler, teacher in the Verona, N. J. High School, recently relinquished his duties as baseball coach. The Verona-Cedar Grove Times, in its issue of March 21, had the following comments about Woody's career as coach:

Woody, who was born and bred in Pennsylvania, graduated from Bloomsburg State Teachers College where he lettered in both football and baseball. He continued his baseball career as a pitcher with Charleroi in the Pennsylvania State Association. At that time Charleroi was affiliated with the Detroit Tigers. The Pennsylvania club had a brother act as Woody's brother, Dan, who played 11 years in the Major Leagues with the Philadelphia Phillies, Boston Braves, St. Louis Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds, was also on the team.

He later played with Trenton in the Inter-State League and concluded his career as a hurler in the Essex County Baseball League after moving to Verona in 1944.

He started coaching baseball in 1945, spending two years at the helm of the Junior High team, and in 1947 took over the job which he just resigned last week.

Seventeen years is a fairly long time to serve as high school baseball coach and Woodrow (Woody) Litwhiler has earned the right to terminate his career in the interests of other pursuits. Because of the pressure of teaching duties and his dual post as administrative assistant to the principal and guidance director, "Woody" turned over his cap to Thomas Morris who should prove a worthy successor.

The record that "Woody" achieved we will leave to the sports pages. It is an impressive one that stands well in the annals of the Suburban Conference. There is another record, however, more indelible in the minds of those who were fortunate enough to have "Woody" as a mentor which stems from his approach to school sports. Over the years, he practiced the philosophy that sports should be for sports' sake. To win was fine but to play and to learn the principles of true sportsmanship was more important. In the lights of prevailing concept that every game must be deemed crucial, "Woody's" outlook at times was questioned but he remained steadfast in his belief that schoolboy sports should be held in the perspective that losers are not necessarily weepers and that the effort really spells the score and not the box standing.

Perhaps, the greatest tribute to "Woody" is found in the players who remembered him and who can look back in later years with the conviction that he was more than a coach. In the manner in which he encouraged his teams to play, he was also counselor, and achieved a signal success which is best exemplified by the esteem in which he is held by all those who came under his guidance."

YOUR ASSOCIATION AT WORK

The 1963 Alumni Day was a very successful occasion. Most of the class reunions were well-planned, and the attendance was excellent. Your President wishes to express his appreciation and commendation to all those who put forth much time and effort to make their reunions a success.

The decision to combine the Alumni Luncheon and the annual Meeting proved to be very popular. The new arrangement appears to be a happy solution to some problems that have disturbed your Board of Directors. In recent years, the attendance at the meeting in Carver Auditorium has been shrinking. Classes have been holding reunions off campus, and have not participated in the general activities of the Association. The reaction to the new arrangement has been most encouraging.

The most pressing problem now facing us is to build up the membership of the Association. Although the 1600 figure of last year is the highest in our history, the percentage is still far below what it should be.

Since your President is retiring from the faculty this year, he will have much time to devote to Alumni affairs. There is a great amount of work that has been waiting for someone who has the time to do it.

The College is renovating and refurnishing the Alumni office, so that it will cease to be merely a storage room and become the center of Alumni activities on the campus.

How can you help? Here are some suggestions:

1. Pay your Alumni Dues EACH YEAR and make any additional donation that you can afford.
2. Become a Life Member of the Association.
3. Attend your Class Reunion.
4. Help organize Branch Associations and support their programs.

With the growth of the College and the broadening of its scope, the Alumni Association should grow IN THE SAME PROPORTION.

I wish you all success and happiness in the coming year.

President of the BSC Alumni Association

THE PRESIDENTS PAGE

And six years Thou shalt sow Thy land and shall gather in Thy fruits thereof; But the seventh year Thou shalt let it rest and lie still.
Exodus XXIII-11

The ancient Hebrew enjoined that every seventh year the land should lie fallow. Vineyard and olive garden too are to remain uncultivated.

A sabbatical year is a term which has been adopted in colleges and universities for a period of freedom from academic duties.

In 1962 the legislature passed a law which entitled faculty members to take leaves-of-absence of one semester or one year in length after ten years of satisfactory service, for the purpose of travel, pursuance of graduate work, restoration of health, or any other reason that seemed to be appropriate when recommended by the President of the College, and approved by the Board of Trustees and the State Superintendent. Some years later, this sabbatical leave-of-absence policy was extended to the Presidents of State Colleges.

This year two members of our faculty, the Chairman of the English Department, Dr. Cecil C. Seronsy, is touring Europe and expects to return to the Huntington Library in California, near Los Angeles, to do research work on a grant which will enable him to continue his study of Samuel Daniel, a literary progenitor of Shakespeare.

Our Director of Public Relations, Mr. Boyd F. Buckingham, will spend a year at Pennsylvania State College, pursuing graduate study toward the Doctor's Degree.

The President of the College is also taking a leave-of-absence of one semester during the college year 1963-1964 to travel to the Orient and return to the East Coast by way of the Panama Canal. His last leave-of-absence was for six months in the year of 1945, when he was designated by the Secretary of War to help organize the First American Army University in Shrivenham, Berkshire, England.

Doctor and Mrs. Andruss will travel to the West Coast, visiting some friends and campuses of colleges and universities, and sail from San Francisco for Japan, where they expect to see some Bloomsburg Alumni. From Japan, they will proceed to Hong Kong, Manila and Bangkok, returning to the West Coast early in December.

The designation of Bloomsburg as the State College to build up library and other cultural sources on China has had something to do with the choice of the itinerary to be followed by the President of the College on his sabbatical leave.

At the present time, there are two Hawaiian students of Oriental ancestry attending Bloomsburg, one on a specific scholarship grant made possible through the contributions of the Community Government Association and interested Alumni.

If you have an interest in encouraging foreign students, or American students of only possessions to attend your Alma Mater, the Alumni Association will be pleased to receive any contribution which you may care to make.

SUMMER COMMENCEMENT

A capacity audience of students, faculty, parents and friends of graduates heard Dr. D. L. Biemesderfer, president of Millersville State College, present documentary evidence to prove that critics of American education do not present a full and accurate picture when they claim that American education is deteriorating.

Among the eleven candidates who received the Master of Education degree were two married couples who had earned the Bachelor's degree at Bloomsburg. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Butz, who currently reside at 500 Lawrence Avenue, Lincoln Park, Reading, were graduated from Bloomsburg in 1959 and 1961, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Perry, Sunny Slope Lane, R. D. 1, Manheim, earned their first degree at Bloomsburg in 1959 and 1960, respectively.

In his address to 76 candidates for the Bachelor of Science degree and 11 candidates for the Master of Education degree at Bloomsburg State College Thursday, August 8, Dr. Biemesderfer quoted from a study by Dr. Arthur Gates of Columbia University, who, in the process of re-standardizing his reading tests, found that in a period of twenty-five years elementary school pupils improved significantly in reading achievement.

Extracts from his address follow:

It is unquestionably somewhat trite, on an occasion such as this, to give attention to the importance of the role of the teacher in a democratic society. However, if it is expected that those who teach shall, as a result of their teaching, wield a direct influence upon the patterns of thinking and acting of those whom they teach, then it would be virtually impossible in 1963 to over-emphasize the deeply significant contributions of the teacher to the kind of world in which our children are destined to live.

In an age in which the threat of nuclear war presses upon us daily; when large segments of our population are denied, in practice, the basic rights and liberties of free men which we glibly ascribe to them in flights of empty oratory; when in consequence of a serious weakening of moral and spiritual fiber in our society we face a crime problem of such magnitude that it represents an acute danger to our national survival (this is the testimony of Edgar Hoover); when the health of our economic life is questioned and men in high places express concern about unfavorable balances of payment and find satisfaction in the knowledge that we didn't "go into the hole" last year by $8 billion—it was only $6 billion; when entire continents stir restlessly and countless new nations struggle to be born into a life freed from the shackles of ignorance, poverty, disease and degradation; when confronted by these and other local and national perplexities of comparable magnitude, does it make any difference as to what people—responsible citizens—believe, what their convictions are, what knowledge they possess upon which to project a philosophy of living and a course of action? The answer is obvious and the responsible role of the one who teaches is apparent.

This venture, teaching children (or grown ups), upon which you are about to embark, is not one to be ordered into casually—the stakes, for those who must learn from you, are too high for the teacher to be less than dead serious. This is what U. S. Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel had in mind when he said, "Most of us feel that education is important, but few believe it to be urgent." What I am trying to say is that what you teach and the way you teach it will have positive and far-reaching effects in fashioning the kind of men and women who become the end products of the formal education effort. Your professional competence, your personally developed conscience, the breadth of your vision and the depths of your commitment, these will be the measure of your effectiveness as a positive influence.

In these times, portentous as they undoubtedly are, what are the implications for the one who would essay to assume the responsibilities of teaching?

In the first place—to teach purposefully it is imperative that the end sought be clearly defined. What is it that we are trying to do for those whom we teach? John Gardner puts it in a way difficult to improve upon when he says in effect that the purpose of teaching is to enable the learner to attain the maximum fulfillment of his individual potential and this within the shared purposes of the society of which he is part. The aim is to help this one whom we teach develop to the full not only his intellectual powers but his moral and spiritual resources as well. It is relatively easy, and not all uncommon, to find a teacher emphasizing intellectual prowess without regards to moral or ethical considerations and the outcome, too often, is the sharp operator who literally cheats the eyes out of his customers and who will, if the occasion seems to require it, escort his teacher to the poorhouse or introduce him to the hangman; and the reverse is equally likely; when a distorted concept of relative values results on the part of a confirmed do-gooder, in persistent and vigorous beating of the devil and all his minions while arithmetic and grammar die a slow death from chronic neglect.

Certainly learning for learning's sake is not enough. Horace Mann had this same thought in mind more than a hundred years ago when he said, "We are not eager to produce either the unscrupulous genius or the virtuous ignoramus." To teach in these times, as in all times, imposes upon us the obligation to foster fulfillment of the total potential of the learner within the framework of the rational and moral strivings which have characterized man at his best. To quote Mr. Gardner once more, "In a world of huge organizations and vast social forces that dwarf and threaten the individual, we must range ourselves, whenever possible, on the side of individuality; but we cannot applaud an irresponsible, a moral, or wholly self-satisfying individuality. If we accept without reservation the implications of our traditional beliefs concerning individual fulfillment, we shall have enshrined a highly significant purpose at the heart of our national life—a purpose that will lift all American education to a new level of meaning.

We shall have strengthened American education—and therefore the nation—in precisely that respect in which it differs most profoundly from the Soviet model. We shall have enhanced precisely that quality which the U.S.S.R. can least easily imitate. Indeed, we shall have accepted a commitment which promises persuasive consequences for our way of thinking about the purpose of democratic institutions and the purpose of individual striving. Nothing but good can come from such a commitment.

In the face of the contemporary confusion, both as to aims and to practices in education, which attends contemplation of even the most trivial school or college incident; amid the clatter of tongues, decrying this or defending that, there is need to strive earnestly for clarity of ultimate purpose in this whole business of educating people. Perhaps we can agree this morning that we must restore both a vigorous sense of individuality and a sense of shared socially-approved purposes as our goals. Either without the other leads to consequences abhorrent to us, indeed, to the very real danger of self-destruction.

Assuming now that there is at least tentative acceptance of the basic purpose to be attained by our labors as teachers, let us turn our attention to a few of the more specific implications for the teacher in our time—what soundly devised measures to employ for the alleviation of some of the current educational pains which have the legitimate educational doctors as well as the newly licensed educational chiropractors running around in unprofessional circles to find, if not panaceas, then at least sedatives.

Take, for example, the charges and counter-charges about the non-existence or the paucity of programs of "quality education"—the critics denunciation of education's failure, as it is said, to promote the "quest for excellence." These charges constitute one of our current educational pains, and if it were to be demonstrated that they are founded in fact, there would hardly be any reasonable defense against them. No teacher can afford to turn his back on these allegations. There is demanded here some earnest soul-searching, objective evaluation both of program and practice, as to the quality, the excellence, of that which the teacher does in the name of education.

It is frequently claimed that as a consequence of the attempt to educate more people for more years and in more different areas of learning the quality of American education has seriously deteriorated, especially in elementary and secondary schools.

After a half century as a teacher I can say without any reservations, that this charge is not original with this generation. Never are objective data or results of controlled studies offered as evidence to support the charge of deterioration. The completely off-hand fashion in which so many of these "deterioration" charges are made must remind one of what Herbert Spencer's friends used to say of him—that his idea of a tragedy was a deduction filled by a fact.

The truth is that there is ample factual evidence that achievement in American schools has been steadily improving rather than deteriorating.

Recently, Dr. Arthur Gates, Teachers College, Columbia University, re-standardized his reading tests which have been in use for many years. He discovered that in a period of 25 years elementary school pupils (of equivalent age and intelligence) improved significantly in reading achievement. The findings of this study are verified by results of numerous other similar studies. In the late 1950's the college examiner at the University of Chicago established new norms for high school levels of general competence in English, mathematics, science and social studies and found that the competence of high seniors exceeded, on the average, those who were seniors in 1943. There are valid reasons for saying that the quality of American education should be improved but it does not follow that deterioration of the existing system is one of these reasons.

Perhaps the best that can be said of this "quality" pain is that recent events have made us all more poignantly aware of the need to face honestly our manifold sins in this realm. In the fervor after Sputnik, Howard Lowry remarks that the head of a university known not to be niggardly with its athletes, is reported to have exclaimed in the excitement of a meeting: "I am determined we shall have a university our football team can be proud of." Dubious solutions to the quality problem are offered in the heat of debate, like the one which recommends that all of the small colleges must get bigger, so that more people may have the advantage of going to small colleges.

Mr. Lowry, in his excellent essay entitled "The Human Privilege" poses this pertinent question and adds his own supplement to the answer: "What would you say were the most distinctive gifts America has made to the world? Prof. Brand Blanchard once named two of them—mass production and the realized idea of a federal union of states. May I venture a third, that we yet may make the demonstration that widespread education and standards of excellence are neither impossible nor incompatible."

In essence, then, teachers in these times must accept the obligation, in every classroom, for programs and practices of steadily improving quality, that the quest for excellence may be a reality in terms of the needs of the day.

A second concern which will, of necessity, claim the attention of teachers and administrators alike in our time springs from the all too common accusation that American schools are too little concerned with the development of intellectual competence. There is little doubt but that this charge can be substantiated in cases of particular schools, but it is equally certain that our schools, as a whole, cannot be justly tarred with this stick.

One writer, who has become very well known for his persistent and pungent philippes against the public schools, characterizes the program of the high school as a veritable carnival which encourages students to devote the bulk of their time to baton twirling, catching forward passes, piccolo playing and learning to steer an automobile. Among us who teach, there is and always must be, unqualified support for the position that any school which permits any other objective to get in the way of complete development of such intellectual potential as a given student possesses, stands properly condemned as having failed to meet its primary responsibility to the student.

No doubt there are schools, perhaps too many of them, which by overemphasizing athletic programs, or social activities, or the school band, confuse students and cause them to lose sight of the fact that schools exist for the unique purpose of developing the intellectual powers of students. While social graces and physical excellence and development of special abilities in music or dramatics or art or journalism are admittedly deserving of the school's attention and time, these things, nevertheless, must be developed concomitantly with the intellect and not to the detriment of it.

High calibre intellectual work is now being done in truly good schools and has always been done in schools which accept as the primary obligation of the school, the maximum development of the students' intellectual powers. Witness the increasing numbers of students who enter our best colleges with advanced standing or begin the work of the college a year or more in advance of the normal time allotted for completion of a high school program.

For the teacher in this day there comes a confrontation with the emerging "shift" in the focus of education from teaching to learning, from emphasis upon memory to emphasis on creativity, attitudes and values" (Keppel). The commissioner foresees a major breakthrough in the development of intellectual competence at all student levels from use of programmed learning in which films, television machines, and other devices are used in a coordinated program—all under the direction of trained and understanding teachers. Honors programs, arrangements for individual independent study freed from the impediments of mass instruction (for those capable of profiting from such individualized approaches) these hold great promise for attainment of intellectual competence of a high order, where once a stultifying mediocrity was the best that could be obtained. Another writer commenting on this same point says: "All too often we are giving young people cut flowers when we should be teaching them to grow their own plants. We are stuffing their heads with the products of earlier innovations, rather than teaching them how to innovate.

We think of the mind as a storehouse to be filled rather than as an instrument to be used."

On the other side of the coin, it is important to avoid the mistake of concluding that intellectual competence is the sole objective of your efforts as teachers. In this democratic society which undertakes, as a means of implementing some of its most basic beliefs, to provide education which fosters the optimum development of each individual, regardless of his kind or level of ability, educational offerings must be highly diverse, as diverse, indeed, as the needs and abilities of the individuals to be educated. Restriction of opportunity so that some cannot find offerings appropriate to their needs, negates basic values to which democracy is committed. One of the biggest differences between good schools and poor schools lies in the differentiation of program. Good schools offer programs which challenge pupils of all levels of ability and with varying interests. Poor schools attempt to fit them all into a single mold. There is no justification, no need, for a school to adopt a common denominator of mediocrity which cheats the more able, frustrates the less able and fails to stimulate those who fall between the extremes.

If follows, then, that no school must be accused of indifference to the ideal of optimum intellectual achievement if it does not require the non-academic kind of pupil to embark upon the traditional college preparatory program. We are reminded that when Thomas Jefferson said that "All men are created equal" he was speaking the language of a notable political theory and not the language of biology or psychology. All men are not created equal in capacity to receive a formal education.

One thing more should be said with respect to intellectual competence. "In America, schools are to a great extent a reflection of the hopes, aspirations, and beliefs of people in the communities which support them. With our system of local control an educational program cannot deviate far from community standards.

It must be recognized also that in many communities intellectual attainment in the academic fields of study is not highly prized. Consequently, the climate of opinion often is not one to encourage the young to seek recognition through intellectual excellence. As soon as America begins to prize intellectual achievement more highly (should we say more highly than winning football teams, or a first place band, or just a good time for the kids then we may rest assured that the cultivation of intellectual competence will find heavier emphasis in our schools.)

The Teacher and the Times—we conclude that the teacher's role in bringing into being an American citizenry informed as to its heritage, intelligent in appraising its strengths and weaknesses; committed to correcting that which is wrong and to defending that which is right—this role is one of critical significance. In the creation of enlightened public opinion and in the development of a vitally functioning public conscience no segment of the American people plays so important a part as do the teachers.. Yours is not a job to play at. Much more is involved than a mere living for you and your family or the prospect of ultimate retirement with han equity in an ex-pansive of sunny windblown beach.

The prominent historian, Channing Pollock, addressing a group of teachers, observed that most democracies last for about 200 years. They are conceived and developed by simple, vigorous, idealistic, hardworking people who, unfortunately, with success become rich and decadent, learn to live without labor, depend more and more on the largess of big government and end by trading foreign tyrants from which the first generation escaped for domestic 'tyrants' of their own unthinking creation. We draw near to our 200th national birthday. Two hundred does not, inevitably, sound for us the knell of doom—it does not need to be so. However, if contrary to the pronouncements of history, we escape the common fate of democracies, long since gone, it will be because teachers have seen clearly the goals to be attained and have met, skillfully and in good conscience, the obligations of their craft.

THERAPY PROGRAM IN FIELD HEARING, SPEECH

For the third consecutive year, the original full-time summer residential program in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, designed and sponsored by the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation for adult trainees to receive speech and hearing therapy, began at Bloomsburg State College on Monday, June 10, and extended through Friday, August 30.

Plans for the 1963 therapy program were developed by Dr. Donald F. Maietta, director of the Division of Special Education, and Tom Williams, district administrator for the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation, and were approved by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, Alan Jones, supervisor of bureau services for Pennsylvania, and Governor William H. Scranton.

Eighteen, ranging from sixteen to thirty-two years of age were enrolled for the program held in the modern Navy Hall Special Education Center. On the basis of previous diagnostic studies, the professional staff of the College reports the trainees selected for intensive therapy should sufficiently improve their problems to the extent of later benefiting from them in their occupational opportunities.

The professional staff of the College includes Dr. Maietta, director, Richard P. Mease and Samuel Shilling, speech and hearing pathologists; Dr. Martin Satz, psychology and Dr. Gilbert Selders, language and reading.

GROUP TOURS EUROPE

A group of 39 students and staff members took off from New York's Idlewild International Airport on Thursday, June 20 on Bloomsburg State College's European cultural study tour.

A "bon voyage" dinner was held for the group in the College Commons Wednesday, June 19 at 6:45 p. m. They left Bloomsburg at noon Thursday, prior to flying to Europe via KLM jet flight 650.

The six week seminar was under the direction of Henry George of Bloomsburg's Department of Social Studies. The class visited such meaningful places as the famed diamond-cutting establishment of Amsterdam, the renowned University of Heidelberg, ancient and modern Rome, the romantic Isle of Capri, Paris and historic London.

The fundamental objective of this educational and broadening course was understanding. Through their first-hand observations of the politics, governments, and economic systems of the countries visited, the participants gained a keen insight into not only the position of the country itself in today's shrinking world, but also its position in relation to the United States. The tour also revealed the social and cultural aspects of everyday life in Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, France and England.

Professor George arranged for seminars at such key points as Amsterdam, the University of Bologna, and Sorbonne University. George conducted discussions through the use of a communicating system which is installed on the motor coach to be used while on the continent. For the return trip, the Holland-American Line provided a conference room in which the tour members might redefine the purposes of the trip, evaluate their observations, and make preparations for reports.

V-12 GROUP MEET IN REUNION

Approximately one hundred fifty men, women and children assembled at Bloomsburg State College on Thursday, July 4, 1963, for three days of activities to celebrate the Twentieth Reunion of Navy V-12 veterans who completed military training at the college during World War II.

Registration for the veterans and their families began at 3:00 p. m. on Independence Day in the lobby of Waller Hall. All members of the group were housed in New North Hall dormitory. Arrangements for meals were made with the ARA-Slater Food Service.

The three-day schedule got underway on Friday, July 5, at 8:00 a.m. with informal gatherings scheduled until noon. After lunch, the veterans and their families toured the campus and enjoyed a dip in the college pool. Movies, showing various activities of the V-12 group during their training at Bloomsburg, were shown Friday night. The evenings activities were climaxed with a dance at the Bloomsburg Moose club.

The veterans rolled out of their beds Saturday morning at 6:30 a. m. to the tune of "Reveille." The men participated in a brief period of calisthenics prior to breakfast in the College Commons. At 9:15 a. m., the group met for drill and Captain's Inspection. Group pictures were scheduled for 11:30 a. m. Following lunch, the entire group enjoyed swimming or tennis. Prior to the evening meal, the vets "mustered in" at 6:00 p. m. A dance was scheduled for the WHLM Crystal Ball Room at 9:00 p. m. with a late swim scheduled for husbands and wives after the dance. Bed check was scheduled for 2:00 a. m., but the veterans and their wives planned to have an "after hours" snack after "bed check" has been completed.

An informal social gathering was scheduled for Sunday morning, July 7, prior to lunch and the departure of the veterans and their families for their respective homes. Arrangements for the activities were in charge of Dr. J. Alfred McCauslin, Dean of Students; Mr. Elton Hunsinger, Dean of Men;

SUMMER SESSIONS HAVE LARGE ATTENDANCE

There were 687 undergraduates at Bloomsburg pre-session and 110 graduate students registered. The College also had on the campus seventeen who were registered as students in speech and hearing under the sponsorship of the State Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation. Thus 814 studied on the hill during the three weeks. This was a pre-session enrollment record by almost a hundred.

Approximately nine hundred fifty students, including undergraduate and graduate students, were enrolled in the 66 courses offered during the Main six-week Session at Bloomsburg State College on July 1, according to John A. Hoch, Dean of Instruction. The total enrollment included over 800 undergraduates, 150 graduates, and 18 trainees in the program sponsored by the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Six hundred forty-two students registered for graduate and undergraduate courses in the Post session at Bloomsburg State College. This is the largest number of students in the history of the college to register for the three-week Post Session—an increase of almost 100 more than the 1962 Post-Session. In addition to the 632 undergraduate and graduate students, the college continued the summer resident program of instruction for 18 trainees sponsored by the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Dr. Charles R. Halstead, of the Department of History and Social Studies, has resigned to join the faculty of Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland.

PHYSICS WORKSHOP

A Physics Workshop using curriculum and materials designed by the Physical Science Study Committee was included in several special workshops to be offered during the main six-week Summer Session which began at Bloomsburg State College on July 1. Enrollment in the course was limited to in-service teachers and recent college graduates. The purpose of the Workshop was to acquaint teachers with the materials, philosophy, and procedures developed by the Physical Science Study Committee. It is hoped that those who enrolled in the summer workshop at Bloomsburg will use the new philosophy, materials and procedures when they returned to their own high school classrooms.

The Physical Science Study Committee produced inter-related texts, films, laboratory experiments and tests for courses in secondary school physics. The material used in the course is organized around four basic concepts including the Universe, Optics and Waves, Mechanics and Electricity, and Modern Physics.

Prof. Herbert Reichard, who taught the course, explained that the curriculum was less topical in character than most high school courses. This allowed a more penetrating analysis of areas which contribute most heavily to an understanding of the atomic picture of the universe.

Laboratory work was an integral part of the course, and, in many instances it was the primary learning course. While students cannot recapitulate all the discoveries of physics, the lab experiences were designed to give them an opportunity for personal study.

Daily work during the six-week session included lectures on text material, class discussions of problems and theory, selected P.S.S.C. films, and laboratory experiences. Doubleday and Company, publishers, made available a complete set of their science series textbooks which have been developed as supplementary reading for use with the P.S.S.C. program.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER RECEIVE MASTER'S DEGREE
(From the Pittsburgh Press, August 2, 1963)

According to Mary Gerhart and Margaret Dawson, the latest in mother-daughter "look-alike" ensembles is the mortar board.

Mrs. Gerhart and her daughter were identical from their tasseled hats and light blue academic hoods to their degrees when they were graduated from Duquesne University.

Both received master's degrees in special education. It marked the end of five summers of attending the same classes, doing the same homework and taking the same tests together.

But their differences don't begin there. During the regular school session, Mrs. Dawson of Avalon taught in Allegheny County classes for retarded children. Her mother, who has been in the field 20 years, teaches the mentally deficient in Stroudsburg.

Mother and daughter also share the same undergraduate alma mater. Mrs. Gerhart was graduated from Bloomsburg State College in 1926. Her daughter finished bachelor's degree requirements there 30 years later.

Their reason for returning for graduate work was the same as that voiced by many teachers.

"In a field of this kind you need to grow," said Mrs. Gerhart. "You can't get into a rut and stay there . . . You become a better teacher."

"I'm not a fanatic about education, but I always criticize those who don't go on to better themselves when there is every opportunity to do so."

In opposite ends of the state, the two also have worked with Girl Scouts. A widow, Mrs. Gerhart has been active in Stroudsburg scouting since her daughter was a Girl Scout. Mrs. Dawson, who's been teaching seven years, was in charge of four Allegheny County troops for retarded girls.

Mrs. Gerhart's "extra-curricular" activity in the winter is volunteer work in a sheltered workshop for the mentally deficient. She's also a cooperating teacher with East Stroudsburg State College.

NEW TEACHERS IN BERWICK

Miss Joyce Redcliff of Berwick, who taught during last year at Bucks county, will teach grade 5 at Orchard street school.

Miss Carole Coolbaugh, Bloomsburg, former teacher at Forty Fort High School, will teach in the business department.

Miss Alice Marsinko, Fern Glen, will teach English in the senior high.

Miss Jacqueline Sheatler, of Bloomsburg, will teach first grade in the Ferris Heights elementary school.

Mrs. Barbara Kindig Berlin, of Berwick, will teach Spanish and English at the senior high school. She taught at Lancaster last year.

Edward Berlin, Berwick, will teach social studies in the senior high school.

VOLUNTEERS FOR TESTS

A college student from Williamsport — strongly motivated by memories of the sufferings in junior high school chum several years ago—has successfully completed a 14-day stay in an experimental device which someday may lead the way to better treatment of serious burn cases.

Physicians in charge of the experiment at the Geisinger Medical Center, Danville, revealed details.

Marshall Siegel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Siegel, of 41 Huffman street, Williamsport, went into the unit on Thursday, August 15, and, except for his head, was confined to the device, on his back, until Thursday morning, August 29.

Siegel, a speech correction sophomore student at Bloomsburg State College, was kept at the medical center for two days for final physical checks and released.

Among his special interests are electronics and photography.

He is Photography Editor of the "Maroon and Gold," student publication at Bloomsburg State College. He is also a member of Sigma Alpha Eta, professional Speech and Hearing fraternity.

While in Bloomsburg, he has been active as Assistant Scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop 21 in the Bloomsburg community.

BOYD BUCKINGHAM

Boyd F. Buckingham, a member of the faculty of Bloomsburg State College since September, 1953, and Director of Public Relations since January, 1955, has been granted a sabbatical leave of absence for the 1963-1964 college term. Mr. Buckingham completed his present duties at the college on August 30 and began a year of graduate work late in September at the Pennsylvania State University toward the completion of the Doctor's degree.

A graduate of the Class of 1938, William Penn Senior high school, York, Pa., he earned the Bachelor of Science degree at Bloomsburg State College, immediately prior to 31 months of active duty with the United States Army Air Force, beginning February, 1943. He served as a bomber pilot in the European Theatre of Operations for seven months before receiving his discharge in October, 1945. Following his discharge from the Air Force, he joined the faculty of the Athens High School. In 1947, he began a six-year tenure as a teacher at the Sayre Area Joint High School (Sayre, Pa.) In August, 1949, he was awarded the Master of Science degree by Bucknell University.

During the past ten years at Bloomsburg, he has served as chairman of the Assembly and Evening Entertainment Committee and as coordinator of alumni activities in addition to sports writing and public relations responsibilities. For the past year and a half, he has served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

...ATHLETICS...

AT RUTGERS UNIVERSITY

William E. Foster, who gave Bloomsburg State three winning basketball teams during his brief tenure has signed a three-year contract to coach basketball at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J. He was selected from 10 applicants.

Foster, 33, who has had outstanding success in both scholastic and college coaching since his graduation from Elizabethtown College in 1954, will devote all of his time to the sport at Rutgers.

Announcement of the naming of the winning Husky coach, whose 1962-63 team went to the eastern regional finals in the NCAA college tourney, was announced by Albert W. Twitchell, director of athletics.

Foster has done a standout job on the hill with his records being 12-4 and 17-4. He is a native of Norwood, Pa., and during his career at Elizabethtown College played both soccer and basketball, scored 1,100 points in the round ball sport and was voted the outstanding athlete his senior year. He won four varsity letters in basketball and three in soccer.

His coaching career was started at Chichester High, Boothwyn, and after three years he was named head coach at Abington High where his team in 1959-60 turned in a 19-2 record, the best in that school's history.

He has been serving as co-director of the annual Jim Pollard Basketball Coaches Clinic, with Harry Litwack, Temple and is a director of the Pocono Mountain Basketball Camp for Boys at Camp Sun Mountain, Shawnee, Pa.

NAME NORTON CAGE COACH

Robert C. Norton, a member of the faculty of the Department of Education and Psychology at the Bloomsburg State College, has been appointed head basketball coach. Norton will succeed William Foster who has accepted a position as head basketball coach at Rutgers University.

A native of Pittsburgh, Coach Norton received his elementary and secondary education in the schools of Donora, Pa. He earned the Bachelor of Science degree at Slippery Rock State College and the Master of Science degree at the University of Pittsburgh. He has completed additional graduate work at the latter institution, certifying him as a guidance counselor and as a elementary and secondary school principal.

A veteran of two years of military service with the U. S. Army, Norton began his teaching career in the Fairview Township-Karns City High School in Butler County where he coached or assisted in basketball, football and track.

For two years, prior to joining the Bloomsburg State College faculty, he served as head basketball coach at the Fort Couch School, Upper St. Clair. During his seven-year span as a high school coach, he earned the plaudits of other coaches in the area for the fine job he did with his charges.

Coach Norton has been associated with athletics most of his life. While in high school, he lettered in basketball, baseball and track. At Slippery Rock, he lettered in tennis and captained the basketball team during his senior year.

Coach Norton worked with Coach Foster during the past season scouting opponents, traveling with the squad and observing practice sessions. He plans to follow the same general patterns of play used by Foster during the past three years.

BSC HOST TO WRESTLING TOURNAMENT

Centennial Gymnasium was the scene, over the weekend of March 10, or the tournament of the NAIA, in which Lock Haven State emerged as the NAIA wrestling champion of 1963.

The Bald Eagles in their third tangle with the Bloomsburg Huskies this season came through on top for the first time, claiming victory 61-60, in the most keenly waged battle in the 6 years of the competition.

It was a tourney that was undecided right down to the final match and the packed crowd in Centennial Gym stayed until the finish.

When Bill Garson, Williamsport, took the mat for the unlimited bout against Wellington Reylea, Eastern Michigan, the Bald Eagles were leading 61-57 and BSC's final performer had to gain a pin to tie the match.

He missed doing that in the third period when he executed a reverse, put his opponent in a predicament and came within 18 inches of pinning him—the maneuver carrying the boys that far off the mat.

It was a two team battle all the way between Lock Haven and Bloomsburg. Many of the other teams had some classy wrestlers and showed unexpected strength but did not possess the balance of the top contenders. The Huskies and Eagles have been taking turns at winning the title, Bloomsburg winning in 1960 and last year and Lock Haven in 1961 and this year.

Following the leaders in the scoring were St. Cloud with 49, Indiana State of Terre Haute, Ind., 35; Superior State of Wisconsin, 32; C. W. Post of Long Island, N. Y. 29; River Falls, Wis., 25; Moorhead, Minn., 22; Graceland, Iowa, 18; Hillsdale, Mich., 16; Western Illinois University and University of Omaha, Neb., 14 each.

Russ Houk, the outstanding Bloomsburg Coach who turned in a superb job as tourney director, was again, on the vote of member coaches, selected as the NAIA coach of the year. This is the second consecutive time he has been thus honored.

WINTER SPORTS ROUNDUP BSC ATHLETES HONORED

The following summary of winter sports at BSC is quoted from a recent issue of the "Maroon and Gold," in the column headed: "from the SIDELINES"

by Fred Saxton

Now that the season has ended for the Husky basketball, wrestling and swimming squads, save for post-season meets and tournaments, let's take a look and see how each of these teams have "weathered the storm." But first let's see, by combining the logs of these three teams, how successful the Husky winter athletic campaign was. It, to say the least, was a very successful season; all in all, Husky teams have compiled a slate of 31 victories against seven setbacks.

Coach Foster's dribblers won their first three outings early in December. Then they dropped a close 72-70 decision to West Chester State. However, they returned to their winning ways until Mansfield sneaked by the Huskies for a 69-66 win. Again, the Huskies bounced back and won six in a row. But their old nemesis, the Mounties of Mansfield, came to BSC and handed the Huskies their third and final defeat of the regular season. Before an over capacity crowd, the two teams battled (how they did battle) with Mansfield edging the Huskies by one point, 48-47. The dribblers, as before, recovered from their setback (the sign of a great team) and won their final three regularly scheduled contests.

Coach Houk's grapplers were nothing short of tremendous, winning all and losing none. Not only did the Husky grapplers win 13 dual meets, they also took a first in the Wilkes tournament, considered the "Rose Bowl" of wrestling. Led by Bill Garson, Bob Hall, Dick Scorese, Bill Paule and Jerry Fortney, the BSC Houkmen also won their first post-season tourney, the PSCC championship meet held at Shippensburg State.

Highlights of the dual season were victories over a highly rated Southern Illinois U. team and the powerful Bald Eagles of near-by Lock Haven State.

The BSC swimmers compiled a 3-4 log. Though this does not seem impressive, it merits recognition. This 3-4 record is the best the sport has achieved since the sport was started some four years ago. And this season is an indication of better things to come — this year's edition of the swimming team is composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores.

The mermen got off on the right foot by submerging Howard U. by a 61-34 score. Four days later, the watermen of Coach McLaughlin humbled Millersville State with a 60-35 count. However, our tankmen were to taste victory only once more. Morgan State invaded Husky waters and had their fins clipped. The tankmen succumbed to Lycoming twice, and dropped decisions to East Stroudsburg twice, and Lock Haven.

TRACK TEAM TAKES 3RD IN STATE MEET

Coach George Wilwohl's track and field team finished third in the Pennsylvania State College Athletic Conference Track and Field event at Shippensburg State College on May 11.

Despite outstanding performances by several Husky thinclads, the Huskies went down to defeat in defense of the state title won last year. The Huskies were third, in a field of twelve, behind West Chester Rams and the Rockets from Slippery Rock.

ATTENTION, ALUMNI!

Historians and statisticians, concerned with higher education, have had a field day during the past twenty years recording and analyzing the record number of high school graduates who have poured into the colleges and universities of our nation.

On the other hand, administrators of these colleges and universities have been and are still beset with the problems of providing classrooms, dormitories, equipment, qualified faculty, and library facilities to accomodate these surges in enrollment.

Time, money, and careful planning have been prime factors in the task of providing opportunities for all the qualitied applicants who desire a college education. These factors are particularly critical in sustaining a four-year under-graduate program as well as graduate programs leading to the Master's degree.

To help meet the need for adequate funds, both private and public institutions of higher education, have of necessity turned to alumni and friends for financial support. It is interesting and encouraging to note that loyal alumni, at one of our sister institutions, have contributed $10,000 each year, for the past three years, to help their alma mater meet needs for which State appropriations are not available.

Your alma mater is proud of the large number of its graduates who have sent their children, grandchildren, nieces, and nephews to Bloomsburg to complete their undergraduate studies. It is also gratifying to note the number of alumni who are returning to the campus to earn the Master's degree.

Your alumni association has pledged its support to the college to purchase library books and to provide scholarships and loans. Will you help us to serve your and member of your family?

Your contribution, large or small, will help maintain the highest standards at Bloomsburg.

REMEMBER BLOOMSBURG

About twenty years ago—when the enrollment was around 700—the Alumni Association put on a drive to build up the student loan fund. Now we have 2000 students on campus and plans are being made for 3000. The late Mary McNinch provided a tremendous boost to the loan fund by making a bequest in her will of over $100,000 to the Alumni Association Loan Fund.

At the present time we are loaning over $16,000 a year to needy students. The need to build up this fund is pressing. What better way to remember your Alma Mater than to make a gift to the Student Loan Fund? This can be done in your will by adding the following sentence:

"I hereby give and bequeath to the Alumni Association of Bloomsburg State College Inc. the sum of _____ Dollars (or a fraction of the estate) to be used for loans to needy students or student scholarships."

Appointment of William L. Bitner III, formerly of Harrisburg, as superintendent of the Glen Falls, N. C., city school system has been announced by the Board of Education of that city. He was graduated from William Penn High School and what then was Bloomsburg State Teachers College. He is working for a doctor of education degree at New York University. He was assistant to the superintendent of schools at Plainview, N. Y., before taking the new post.

Mr. Bitner is a member of the Board of Directors of the BSC Alumni Association.

A long novel, tentatively titled "To Sting the Child," by Bloomsburg State College class of 1950 graduate, Robert Baylor, will be published in the spring. It is set in a small Pennsylvania town along the Susquehanna River.

He is on a year's sabbatical leave from his post as English and journalism teacher at Mt. San Antonio College, Walnut, Calif.

At BSC, Baylor wrote a literary and a humor column for the college paper and contributed poetry and fiction to the literary magazine. A long feature story by Baylor on a BSC alumnus, John Bakeless, appeared in The Morning Press in 1949. It was later reprinted in the Alumni Quarterly.

"To Sting the Child" is a contemporary novel, but it ranges back into aspects of local history, myth and Indian lore—especially as concerns the Susquehanna River. Shikellamy's Face at Sunbury plays an important part in one section of the novel.

Three years in the writing, the book will run to 500 pages. There are eight major characters. The story covers a 20-year-period from pre-depression days to shortly after the end of World War II.

"I've applied an existential attitude to typically American experiences," Baylor said recently, "experiences as typical as high school football and peddling Sunday newspapers door to door."

Baylor played football for Danville high school in 1941-42 and later coached football in New York high schools.

During his youth he camped and fished along the Susquehanna from Berwick to Sunbury while working on coal dredges and eel walls.

The title is from a line of poetry by Robert Lowell: ". . . to sting the child with knowledge." The theme is summed up by a line from Nobel Prize winner Albert Camus: "At that subtle moment when man glances backward over his life . . . in the slight pivoting he contemplates that series of unrelated actions which becomes his fate, created by him, combined under his memory's eye . . ."

Baylor is currently at work on a novel set in California where he and his wife, Mary, have lived for the past nine years. In Europe they will travel throughout Western European nations, living for three month periods in London and in Paris.

ADDITIONAL ATHLETICS

BSC ATHLETES HONORED

One of the big problems in the planning of the expanded campus of the Bloomsburg State College has to do with the location of the field house and athletic fields but the program will include adequate facilities in this department, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, assured those who attended the sixth annual athletic awards dinner held in the College Commons, Thursday evening, May 16.

Declaring he was "pleased" with the records compiled by the athletic teams during the past year, and paying tribute to the athletes and coaches, Dr. Andruss said that in the expansion plans the location of the field house has been changed three times. It is hoped this phase of the program can be developed in the near future, he said.

All of the varsity athletes, coaches and many friends of the college, were in attendance at the dinner at which head basketball coach at the Michigan State University, was the speaker.

Anderson addressed his remarks especially to the athletes and urged them to use whatever ability they possess to the fullest and that this ability be used in the classroom as well as on the athletic field. "Use it but don't abuse it," he admonished. He spoke of the opportunities that his athletic ability had provided for him and said those with such ability can use it to become the type of individual each desires.

Dean of Instruction John A. Hoch was the capable master of ceremonies and the invocation was given by Boyd Buckingham, director of public relations. Awards were distributed at the close of the program.

Miss Edna S. Harter, Nesopeck, writes: "I have been a mathematics teacher in Berwick Area Senior High School since 1929. The subjects that I have been teaching during the past few years are Plane Geometry, Trigonometry and Mathematical Analysis."

Class Reunions

It is time to talk about class reunions. The classes graduating in the years ending in 4 and 9 will hold their class reunions on Alumni Day, May 23, 1964. Whether they will be successful or not will depend on whether or not groups of key persons in each class will begin making plans immediately.

Class lists have been sent to persons in each class who, it is hoped, will be willing to do a great amount of work between now and Alumni Day. These lists should, as far as possible, be brought up to date, so that the revised lists may be mimeographed and sent to all members of the class.

A small fund should be collected in order that there will be enough to take care of expenses such as stationery, postage, and the like.

In many cases, the officers of classes ceased to function after graduation. The burden then falls upon other members of the class, preferably people living in the Bloomsburg area. This, however, is not absolutely necessary, as many very successful reunions have been planned entirely by correspondence.

Each member of a reunion class can help by getting in touch with his own circle of friends, and seeing to it that all of his group will be present.

The strength of the Alumni Association depends on the work done by the reunion classes from year to year.

Please do your part.

PARADE HIGHLIGHT OF HOMECOMING DAY

Marked by perfect fall weather, an exceptionally large attendance, a colorful parade and other features that delighted returning graduates and friends, the thirty-seventh annual BSC homecoming was an outstanding success even though West Chester Rams walked off with the honors in the football game, 28-0.

Insofar as the townspeople generally were concerned the features were the parade and the football game.

The program of the big day kept pace with the tempo set before a capacity audience by the American Hootenanny when there was a local flavor as one of the features—a contribution by the Townsmen of BSC—Gordon Reed, Ray Kashimba and Jim Reed.

One of the most popular features for some time has been the get together following the football game. This was originally held in Husky lounge but attracted so many it is now staged in the gym.

The campus was alive with visitors from mid-morning until late at night, with a dance in the gym the concluding feature. Much of the time was spent in touring the campus, looking over recently completed buildings and those under construction, and learning what other additions are on the planning board. They also took time out to tell how the campus was when they were students at the "friendly college on the Hill."

The College student body didn't come up with the fifty floats the publicity had promised but they did provide more than ever before. Many were attractive and all got over the message that the big desire of the local student body was to blast the Ram football team—something the Huskies couldn't accomplish although they turned in their best performance of the Fall.

The procession was headed by the BSC Band and the last unit in line was the all-man band of West Chester. The Ram musicians did not arrive here in time to get a position further up in the procession. In fact they didn't reach here until after the parade started, but lost no time in forming and getting into the line of march.

Dean of Instruction John A. Hoch, acting president of BSC while Dr. and Mrs. Andriss are on a trip to the Orient, other college officials and students who lead the Community Government Association rode at the head of the procession.

There were floats of all the classes, the fraternities and other campus organizations.

The seniors had one of the more serious themes developed on their float which depicted the students' past, present and future in careers as teachers.

Alpha Phi Beta developed the theme of "Capture of the Golden Fleece." A number of beds in the men's dorm must have been temporarily without sheets, pressed into use as costumes for the marching brothers.

The B Club, girl's athletic organization, offered a menu that featured Ram (West Chester State brand) in many concoctions. The Maroon and Gold staff had the Ram at the gallows.

Sigma Alpha Eta, speech and hearing fraternity, got into swing of things with an attractive float.

The Varsity Club, men's athletic organization, sent memory back to the "gay nineties" or beyond when football was in its infancy, but got most attention with a raccoon coat attired collegian. The fur coats were the rage in the twenties. They have attempted fashion comebacks since but have never achieved the prominence attained in the decade usually described by the adjective "roaring."

Waller Hall advised "bet on the Huskies" and the PSEA float was devoted to "making mutton of the Rams." Another, this the Junior Class feature, dramatized "Stringing up the Rams on Hootenanny Hill." Then came the "Miss Vets Club, 1963," and the off the campus girls who provided the power to propel their cart devoted to the "Husky dragons."

Phi Sigma Pi advised the "Huskies Sail Away to Victory."

Then came floats of the Student Christian Association, the Sophomore class and the Women's Day Association.

One of the laugh hits was under the caption "English Class Reads Elegies for the Rams." All participants were in black and they even carried a coffin over the route, girls being pall bearers.

No group put more enthusiasm into their feature than the class of '67. The frosh float depicted a Ram being barbecued and fellows and girls offered "Ramburgers" to the large crowd which watched the procession.

Bringing up the rear, along with the West Chester band, and providing just as much gusto as the units earlier in the line was Pep Club which advised "slaughter the Rams."

Later in the day the Huskies in moleskin had the spirit to carry out all of these admonitions—but the flesh was weak.

TRUSTEES AT BSC ELECTED

Bloomsburg State College board of trustees, at the reorganization meeting named W. A. Lank president and J. Howard Deily secretary-treasurer. The session, held in the directors room in Carver Hall, was preceded by a tour of the campus in charge of Dr. Harvey A. Andruess, for the four new trustees, recently named to the board by Gov. William Scranton.

In addition to Messrs Lank and Deily, the other new trustees are Guy Bangs, Millville and Ted Fenstermacher, Berwick.

Other trustees present, from the previous board were: Judge Bernard J. Kelly, Philadelphia; Judge Harold L. Paul, Pottsville; S. M. Jacobs, Danville and Leo S. Denner, White Hall. Tribute was paid the memory of the ninth member of the board, the late Frank S. Thornton, Northumberland, as a resolution was passed.

Records of recently named instructional personnel were reviewed. Promotions in rank were given 16 members of the faculty.

Four appointments of non-instructional personnel, approved at the meeting, included: Lemoine K. Fritz, Berwick, clerk typist, replacing Norma Keiner, who resigned; George J. Rohall, Bloomsburg, laborer, replacing Donald Recse, who resigned; Harold Klischer, Wilburton, Husky lounge janitor, replacing Hurley Cox, who is deceased and Mrs. Phyllis Remley, Bloomsburg, clerk-bookkeeper, new position.

Approval was given resignations of three faculty members. They are Miss Gayle C. Jones, who is leaving to be married; Miss Mildred Bisgrovie and Richard Jano.

Approval was also given the arrangement with the Bloomsburg Joint School Board, under which the Benjamin Franklin Laboratory School will continue at the College. Due to a pressing need for more space at the college six rooms of the former Bloomsburg Senior High School, all in a separate wing, will be used for some regular college classes.

Reports of Dr. Andruess showed excellent progress by the college for the past year, as compared to the previous years.

DORMS FOR 500 WOMEN TO BE FINISHED AUG. 1, 1964

The progress of the two new dormitories now under construction at the Bloomsburg State College is ahead of schedule, according to Thomas Gorrey, superintendent of buildings and grounds. Completion date is set for August 21, 1964. The new dormitories, which will house 500 women students, will help alleviate a critical need at the college. For nearly a decade, enrollment of freshmen women has been limited due to the lack of adequate housing on campus.

Total construction costs of the new dormitories are approximately $2,000,000. Both buildings will be four stories high with fully automatic hydraulic elevators. Exterior walls will be concrete and brick with windows designed for maximum light and ventilation. Each dormitory will include study rooms on each floor, a dean's department, and a lounge area.

In addition to the two girls dormitories, plans for a new auditorium to seat 2,000 are on the drawing board and these plans should be completed by January, 1964. This auditorium will be located at the end of Spruce street and will encroach on part of the present Mt. Olympus football field and also part of the adjoining practice field.

Also scheduled for the drawing board are plans for a new men's dormitory to house 300 men which is to be erected on the site of Old North Hall at a cost of more than a million dollars. To keep pace with the increase in enrollment and the extension of curriculum offerings, more than $50,000 has been appropriated to plan a library, seating 500 readers and providing shelving for 200,000 volumes. This library will be located facing Spruce street midway between the Benjamin Franklin Elementary Laboratory School and Navy Hall and will extend into part of the Mt. Olympus football field. The normal period of time for a construction of a new building is approximately a year.

The addition to the Heating Plant, tha was started in April, 1962, is approximately 80 per cent completed with the final details

COAT OF ARMS RUGS AT BSC

A pleasant surprise in the form of two beautiful hanging wool rugs greeted the eyes of returning graduates of Bloomsburg State College as they entered the Alumni Room in Waller Hall on Homecoming Day. The rugs, which will replace the old State College tapestries at each end of the Alumni Room, will feature the unofficial coat of arms of Bloomsburg State College in varied colors set in a gold field.

The Magee Carpet Company was commissioned by the College to make the rugs in which they utilized their new custom tufted method. This method eliminates a loom and employs a special electric gun resulting in the wool being tufted from the under side.

Mrs. Eleanor Herre, designed of the Magee Carpet Company, and wife of Dr. Ralph S. Herre of the college faculty, made the design of the coat of arms for the rugs. The detailed drawing of the unofficial design was made by George Stradtman of the BSC faculty in 1960 from a picture in a Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction booklet.

Outstanding emblems on the shield in the center of the obverse are the William Penn ship "Welcome," a plow, and sheaves of wheat, emblematic of Pennsylvania's participation in commerce and agriculture back in the early 1800's. The shield is flanked by an olive branch and a sheaf of wheat with the Eagle crest on top. The coat of arms of the rugs is 5 foot in diameter while the overall size of each rug is 7 x 7 feet.

being cleared up by the first of the year. This overall campus building program plan calls for eleven other buildings and an athletic field by 1967.

Hawaiian Students At BSC

Another milestone was reached September 10 at the Bloomsburg State College when Miss Leatrice K. Sunaoka of Haneoke, Hawaii, registered as the first American student of foreign ancestry under the sponsorship of the College. According to Myles Anderson, Assistant to the Dean of Students, Miss Sunaoka is the recipient of an annual $1,400 scholarship sponsored by the Community Government Association which enlisted funds from college organizations, the Alumni Association, community service clubs, private individuals, and private companies.

The Faculty Scholarship Committee assisted by the Student Faculty Committee selected Miss Sunaoka from a group of many candidates from Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Upon learning of her selection she stated, "Both my family and I are thankful for this wonderful opportunity. I hope the people of Bloomsburg are as eager to meet me as I am to meet them."

Mr. Anderson responded that everyone at the College connected with the scholarship award hopes that this will be the start of more financial aid to come to future worthy Bloomsburg State College aspirants.

Miss Sunaoka will seek her degree in the Secondary Education curriculum, majoring in English and Biology.

The pretty Hawaiian indicated she desired to attend Bloomsburg State College as it rates high on the college competitive level in Guides to Colleges coupled with the fact she would be less apt to be lost in the masses that are sometimes experienced at a large college. She is also anxious to enjoy the change of environment from the relaxed Hawaiian way of life to the more hustle-bustle atmosphere of Eastern United States.

Leatrice's high qualifications should make her a top student in the incoming Freshman class. She attended the elementary and secondary schools of Fern Elementary Kalahi, Honolulu, Benjamin Parker Elementary-Kaneoke and James B. Castle High, Kanoeha, Hawaii.

She was active in student government, drives, dances, assemblies, Y Teens (community work), National Honor Society, F.T.A. meets and assemblies, Junior Prom Committee, Graduation Committee, Pacific and Asian Affairs Conferences, Junior Science Apprenticeship Program.

Miss Sunaoka's many school honors included Leadership Award in 11th and 12th grades, Outstanding Award in 10th, 11th and 12th grades, Oratorial Award in the 11th and 12 grades, and a superior rating in the University of Hawaii Speech Festival. In addition, she won the 12th Grade Scholastic Gold Key, Honorable Mention Plaque (art exhibition, New York) -12th grade, the Outstanding Science Student Award in 12th grade, and the following State Science Fair Awards: Electrical Engineers Society, Navy, Mechanical Engineers Society, and the Hawaiian Astronomical Society.

Upon arrival in Williamsport on Monday, September 9, at 2:01 p.m., Miss Sunaoka was met by Mrs. Stuart Edwards, wife of the Director of Admissions, and Miss Dorothy Eisenhardt, Class of 1963, who is Leatrice's Big Sister for the 1963-1964 college year. She will reside in Waller Hall.

In a ceremony performed Saturday, August 17 in St. Joseph's Church, Nuremberg, Miss Ruth O. Donar, Nuremberg, became the bride of C. Richard Reichart, of Light Street. The Rev. Joseph F. Meier, officiated at the double-ring ceremony. The bride graduated from Black Creek Township high school and McCann's School of Business. She is employed as a secretary at the Hazleton campus of Pennsylvania State University. Her husband, a graduate of Scott High School and BSC, is employed by Donald E. Reichart Lumber and Supplies.

STUDENTS FROM 51 COUNTIES

A recent survey at Bloomsburg State College shows the nearly 2,110 students attending that institution represent 51 Pennsylvania counties. The five counties with the largest number of students are Columbia 379, Luzerne 297, Northumberland 291, and Schuylkill 181.

EDUCATION CONFERENCE

A teacher is a person adjusted to effective living in his world, Dr. Clara F. Cockerille, professor of education at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., declared in the key address at the seventeenth annual Education Conference of Teachers and Administrators held at Bloomsburg State College on Saturday, October 5.

Speaking to the assemblage in Carver Hall she said "all too often there is a great gap between what we teach and what our pupils learn. We become frustrated because we have worked so hard and taught so much and our pupils have learned so little."

"In the early part of the conference we considered how and what we teach, so now in closing we center our attention on learning and consider those factors in a classroom which remove blocks to learning, which motivate pupils to become students and which close the gap between what we teach and what pupils learn."

"These factors are acceptance of pupils so that they feel worthy and wanted; educational challenge—teaching subjects with respect to those subjects; success—each pupil to be taught that he has more success than failure; timeliness—teaching oriented to today's world where the pupil lives; vision—a world of learning and possibility must be shown to pupils and joy—learning takes place in pleasant classrooms."

LISTS SOME REASONS FOLKS GO TO COLLEGES

Why individuals go to college, formed the basis of an interesting and thought provoking message by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of Bloomsburg State College, in an address before parents of BSC freshmen recently.

The differences in individuals were stressed and the premise that a formal education will serve the needs of all was blasted, as the educator emphasized the dividends of an educated person should be "the ability to give to the other rather than to only get things for themselves."

In his address Dr. Andruss read portions of an editorial which appeared in the Wall Street Journal.

Quotations from the distinguished British Philosopher-Scientist, Professor J. B. S. Haldane, indicates that education cannot proceed on the assumption that all men have equal abilities.

The International Congress in Genetics in Geneva was startled somewhat by argument against the assumption that all that is necessary to bring an emerging nation of backward people to full civilized estate is education and training, he said.

"Education cannot and should not attempt to equalize inherent genetics or inborn inequalities. We can insist upon the equal rights of all of us as human beings, and at the same time recognize that Mickey Mantle and a college professor are unequal in their natural endowments.

"The best we can do in public education is to provide each white child and each negro child with the kind of education suitable to his natural endowment," he said. "There is an assumption that all men are created equal, not only in their rights as human beings but also in their abilities and endowment," he said. "There is an assumption that all men are created equal, not only in their rights as human beings but also in their abilities and endowments; and the differences are mainly due to environment.

"Some students go to college! Some do not! Some people assume that the separation of these two groups means that one is superior and the other is inferior. This is too rough an approximation to be used as the sole measure of success. Whether anyone is inferior to another depends entirely on what you are talking about.

"Why do students go to college? There are many reasons:

"Some are sent—sent by their parents. Maybe the parents didn't have the opportunity. Maybe the son of the next-door neighbor is going to college. Maybe their brothers and sisters have gone.

"College attendance is a prestige symbol in America today—in the same class as the Cadillac car, the mink coat, foreign travel or winters in Florida.

"Others have a general goal that college attendance will increase their earning power. Magazines are full of statistics showing that an Eighth Grade graduate will earn so much in a lifetime; the high school graduate a higher amount; the college graduate still a higher amount.

"Parents and students consider earning power as one and sometime the sole justification for a four-year stay on the campus.

"Parents of coeds, or the coeds themselves, think that college, among other things, is a happy hunting ground for husbands. Some parents realize that when you educate a man, you are helping to make a career; but when you educate a woman, you are educating the next generation. This sometimes means that parents are interested in the future of their grandchild.

"While this list could be extended to include other groups who enter college for many different reasons, there are those who go to college with fairly well-defined ideas of what they want to do in life, not only in connection with what they are to do in making a living, but the level on which they would like to live.

88 ENROLL IN 'GRAD' SCHOOL

The Division of Graduate Studies at Bloomsburg State College has announced a total enrollment of eighty-eight for the first semester of 1963-1964, according to Dr. Robert C. Miller, director of the Division of Graduate Studies. Forty-eight men and forty women have enrolled in the curriculums of business education, English, social studies and speech correction.

Bloomsburg is authorized by the State Council of Education by the Commonwealth to offer a program of graduate studies in business education, and special education (mentally retarded or speech correction.)

BLOOMSBURG STATE HAS TWO PROMISING POETS

Bloomsburg area has a particular interest today in the observance of World Poetry Day for two local college students have exhibited special talent in this field of creative writing.

Poetry Corner of The Morning Press, through the efforts of its editor, Eleanor Sands Smith, has published several area poets of worth including some younger poets whose work has been acclaimed as fresh and vital.

They are Harry Humes, BSC senior from Girardville, and Harry Ackerman, BSC junior whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ackerman, Benton. Both have had a number of their poems published for the first time in The Morning Press and reader response has been most favorable.

Harry Humes had poems accepted last summer by "The American Weave," a bi-annual literary journal, and "The Writers Voice," a small weekly dedicated to creative literature. He considers poetry "an intense, exciting means of personal expression" and receives inspiration for his writing from his encounters with people. Many tend to regard poets as eccentrics, he says, but nothing could be further from the truth.

Harry Ackerman, a recent graduate of Benton High School, is in the secondary curriculum at the local college and plans to teach English. He has been writing poetry for about eight years and modestly states he has "about sixty that are worth reading." He has had poems published in the National Collegiate Anthology and in the Benton Argus.

Both have contributed poetry and prose to the Olympian, the college literary journal and are well-known for their unusual themes and facility of technique.

Poetry Corner has also observed the work by students in local high schools and has presented many of their poems to county readings. Mrs. Smith, who has edited the column for nineteen years, has presented some 5,928 poems—many published for the first time—in Poetry Corner.

ATTENDS SESSION

Miss Ellamae Jackson, Dean of Women, Bloomsburg State College, attended the 43rd Annual Convention of the Pennsylvania Association of Women Deans and Counselors, October 31 to November 2, at the Penn-Sheraton Hotel, Pittsburgh.

The theme for the convention, "Accent on Change," highlighted the many changes today, stressing those especially pertinent to all women engaged in counseling and guidance in Pennsylvania—changes in human relations, morals and mores, curricula, methods and research. Among the outstanding speakers were Dr. Perry E. Gresham, President of Bethany College; Dr. Helen P. Rush, Dean of Students and Dean of Women, University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Herbert Bienstock, Regional Director, U. S. Department of Labor.

The sessions included panels and symposiums, conducted by guest speakers and members, giving practical suggestions and providing opportunities for discussion and questions by all participants.

Dr. Carl S. Winters, one of America's foremost inspirational speakers and humorists, addressed the First College Convocation of the 1963-64 college term of the Bloomsburg State College on Tuesday, September 17, at 2 p.m. in Centennial Gym. The topic of his address was "The Fine Art of Living."

take the trouble to tell her personally, she finds the Corner has endeared itself to two generations. She often hears "Sometimes I don't know what they mean, but I read them all!"

It is Mrs. Smith's hopes that there will be more bookstores selling more poetic works, both old and new; more poetry purchased for the libraries and taught in schools and more young students encouraged to express themselves in poetry. She has a firm belief in the slogan of the Academy of American Poets, "Poetry Says It Best."

Pennsylvania Council On Mental Retardation Meets At BSC

The achievements that have come through research and experiments as to both cause and cure and the development of aids in the field of handling the cases of the retarded, were reviewed at Bloomsburg State College during sessions of the Central Pennsylvania Council for Research in Mental Retardation. The meeting was held Friday, September 27.

Alfred J. Butler and W. Glenn Conrad of the psychology department, Laurelton State School and Hospital, said experimental study of new admissions at that institute indicate that sixty per cent had diffuse brain injuries.

Use of standard tests to evaluate types of performance or behavior affected by abnormal EEG patterns produced evidence that visual-sensory input of severely mentally retarded is affected.

They also indicate cerebral dysfunction may manifest itself in certain areas of behavior and by greater variability of performance.

They stressed more careful attention and study should be given to the specific types of performance affected by abnormal EEG patterns.

In some areas of performance no appreciable differences could be detected by tests used from normal patterns of retardates. Specific objective tests are needed to compliment routine neurological examinations, it was pointed out.

Catherine Gensell, of the social service department at Laurelton, in speaking of achievement, affiliation and hostile press motives in three groups of institutionalized retardates, told of knowledge gained in this field. She said experimental study of familiar female retardates there, using a psychological test to evaluate hostility as related to god and poor adjustment of the residents, indicates reliable evidence may be gained from tests to predict the relationship of hostility to adjustment.

Malcolm M. Cronlund and Gordon H. Pritham, Frear Laboratory, Penn State, said an immunochemical study of the relationship of plasma proteins, faulty antibodies and gamma globulin in mongoloids is currently underway by the Frear Laboratory and a state school and hospital.

Through the use of a typhoid vaccine booster shot on subjects, an attempt will be made to increase faulty antibodies produced by mongoloids and reduce the increase of gamma globulin content.

John F. Quakenbush of the psychological department at Laurelton, spoke of the punch retrieval system. He gave an informative presentation of an effective, portable, highly individualized and inexpensive punch retrieval system for use in research requiring open indexing of literature and coded information of at least 1,000 research articles.

This represents substantial reduction in time for small research projects requiring much needed and complex literature.

Welcome was extended by John A. Hoch, dean of instruction. There was a busy meeting in late afternoon, followed by dinner in the Commons. Guest speaker at the closing session was Dr. Joseph C. Sieracki, director of pathology, Geisinger Medical Center.

Dr. Sieracki noted, "In any overall approach to the field of mental retardation what is needed instead of independent effort by the different professions is corralated efforts among all disciplines to learn as much about the human personality as possible. We cannot separate the study of behaviour from body chemistry or education and expect significant progress to be made."

Various colored slides and charts showing pathology and normal cell structure and development were used to illustrate his comments.

BE GOOD SWEET MAID—by Janet Worthington Engelhardt—Darrance and Company, Philadelphia—95 pp.—$3.00.

Books which attract over more than one decade, and poems which give people enjoyment through their mosaic of expression often experience rebirth. This can be said of Janet Worthington Engelhardt's "Be Good Sweet Maid." A reincarnation of her "Irondale Songs," and "Falling Petals," this volume radiates new entity by way of the introduction of several heretofore unpublished works. Mrs. Englehardt's ability for intuitive understanding produces an alchemy in this collection, a preoccupation, with sweetness and light, written on two levels. She attracts both the child and the adult. When she talks about human nature and its many foibles, her verity will charm her many admirers. No matter what her background reveals, whether a country village a college town, suburbia, or a lonely mountain and stream, her lines probe into delicate points of everyone's mental makeup.

It is worthy to note that the book's appearance, including binding, paper and typography, is an outstanding example of the printers art. The author and illustrator speak one language, refreshing and ink drawings by Jenifer Smith, Bloomsburg, capture the excitement of youth. This emotion is the scaffold on which Mrs. Englehardt has always sustained her house of poetry. Surely this book of poems reveals the intriguing and rare personality of the poet.

BSC FACULTY PROMOTIONS

The Department of Public Instruction has approved the action of the board of trustees and the recommendation of the President of Bloomsburg State College for promotions in faculty rank of the following staff members:

From instructor to assistant professor—William D. Eisenberg, John S. Scrimgeour, Mordecai D. Trebollow.

From assistant professor to associate professor—Donald J. D'Elia, Charles G. Jackson, Charles C. Kopp, Susan Rusinko, Rex E. Selk, Mrs. Barbara J. Shockley, Donald Vannan.

From associate professor to full professor—John A. Enman, Robert M. Jordan, J. Alfred McCauslin, Donald D. Rabell, Gilbert R. W. Selders.

Generally three years of experience is required in each rank before being promoted to the high rank, and the increased cost of promotions is not automatically matched by funds made available for this purpose in the college budget.

Salary classifications are related to academic rank, but there is a degree of overlapping, in that a person in a lower rank may be getting the same salary as a person in the higher rank since these amounts appear in both salary classification schedules.

While funds must be available in the budget before promotions can be made, there are other controls such as the provision that not more than 30 per cent of the total faculty shall occupy the rank of full professor. This rank requires the holding of a Doctor's degree and seven year's experience. However, meeting these requirements does not in itself mean automatic promotions, according to President Andruss.

"TO BE KNOWN AS 3-Cs

A College Community Club, to be known as the 3-Cs and with its aim the boosting of athletics at Bloomsburg State College was formed at a dinner meeting at the Hotel Magee Saturday, October 30.

Jack Eble was named president, Doyle Zimmerman, vice president, L. N. (Chick) Nespoli, secretary-treasurer, and Tom Pettrash, assistant secretary and treasurer.

Also on the board of directors are Gene (Skip) Leiby, Edwin (Bud) Miller, Bruce C. Dietterick, Russell Houk, John Venditti, Al Lenzini, Richard Benefield and Edward F. Schuyler.

Plans were laid for a membership drive to be followed by a booster program, with membership open to any one interested in the College sports program.

Arrangements are to have a monthly program with the meetings to be held the first Monday of each month. A number of projects in support of the program were discussed at the meeting at which Houk presided.

The marriage of Miss Wanda Ann Koval, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Koval, Berwick, to Lawrence Finn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Finn, Berwick, took place recently in St. Mary's Church, Berwick. The Rev. Fr. Karl Stofko officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

Both are graduates of Berwick High School. Mrs. Finn attended Pottstown Hospital School of Nursing. Her husband, a graduate of Bloomsburg State College, is a member of the faculty at Pottstown Junior High School. The couple is residing in Pottstown.

DANNY LITWHILER WRITES BOOK

Danny Litwhiler, who is a well rounded and expert in many fields, has now turned author.

An advance copy of the work, "Baseball Coach's Guide to Drills and Skills" was delivered recently.

It is a thorough, well illustrated volume and we have an idea it will gain considerable readership.

There was one thing in the book, however, that was not surprising. It was dedicated to his BSC coach and fast friend, the late Dr. E. H. Nelson.

In this turbulent world there isn't too much you can bank on but we would have wagered most anything that if Danny ever wrote a book on baseball it would have a dedication such as this one has. It follows:

"Dedicated to Dr. E. H. Nelson, Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania. My college coach, whose faith in me inspired and guided me through my baseball career. It is with his personal example in mind that I undertake the coaching of others, with the hope that these others will help perpetuate his ideals of coaching."

We once heard Pee Wee Reese say that one of the best places veterans of the majors, qualified to coach, can spend their post-playing years if they desire to help baseball is in college coaching.

The former Dodger star ran over quite a list of fellows who are presently coaching in the colleges and universities which he described as the most fertile field now existing for the development of talent. He also went out of his way to pay tribute to the work which Danny is doing as head coach at Florida State.

This is a text book. It is written so that as much information as possible can be packed into the shortest space. The illustrations are many and tie in with the text.

The jacket tells something about the author, mentioning his twelve years in the majors during which he played on a National League all-star team and a championship nine of the St. Louis Cardinals.

It throws in the information that in eight years as head baseball coach at Florida State University, his teams have made the NCAA district play-offs eight times, twice winning the championship to go on and play in the College World Series. He has produced 5 all-American players and in 1962 received the Helms Athletic Association Hall of Fame Award."

The book has chapters on baseball training and first aid, conditioning, team drills, batting, bunting, pitching, catching, general infield, first baseman, second baseman, shortstop, third baseman, outfield and base running drills. You note from looking over the volume that each chapter stresses drill and tells the reader what to do. It doesn't, as so many works have in the past, just tell you what is wanted. This one tells in detail, and illustrates, to work up to the proficiency desired.

There are also chapters on pre-game practice, screening candidates, gimmicks of the game, organization of practice area, pre-season practice both indoors and outdoors.

You get the tempo of the work in the first paragraph of the first chapter which is on training. It reads: "Preparation for a baseball season requires that the players start preliminary work on their own about a month before regular practice sessions begin. In order for players to be ready for the opening practice, they must spend time and effort to get into condition. Pre-practice work should be divided into four categories; running, stretching, throwing and weight work."

And it keeps moving right along at that pace for some 225 pages.

The authors preface, in true Litwhiler style, gives credit to all who had any part in the work and it also gives you the information that this volume is the kernel of baseball knowledge that has been gathered from many of the best brains and most talented performers that have been associated with the game. It follows:

"Baseball players are born; stars are made"—made by the effort of hard-working, imaginative coaches and the individual effort of players. It was this thought that dominated and gave direction to the writing of Baseball Coach's Guide to Drills and Skills.

"It is impossible to develop as a baseball players without proper drills and a thorough knowledge of the skills involved. A good coach can recognize the correct drills needed to develop a team and can adapt or develop a drill for any problem which faces him. Players must practice the strong points, of course, but repetition of drills on the weak points results in a superior team.

"The drills in this book have all been tried and proven to be of value to some player, college coach or major league manager. Not all the drills can be used by every player or team, and it is advisable to select the drills best suited to individual and team needs.

"This book could not have been written without my association, as a major league player and coach, with such men as Bob Elliott, Bucky Harris, Fred Hutchison, Danny Murtaugh, Stan Musial, Bobby Bragan, Luke Sewell, Billy Southworth, Al Lopez and Ted Williams. Also, I cannot overlook the impact of being a college coach and observing, as well as absorbing, the knowledge and ways of the coaches in the American Association of College Baseball Coaches.

"Credit must be given to the following men who have contributed to the completion of Baseball Coach's Guide to Drills and Skills: Don Pauls, trainer; Keith Pitchford, director of intramurals for men, and Ernie Lanford, freshman baseball coach—all of the Florida State University—and ex-Dodger trainer, Doe Harold Wendlter. Discussing and working with these drills during the baseball coaching theory class at Florida State also proved very beneficial."

FACULTY ACTIVE IN SPORTS

Two faculty members of the Bloomsburg State College are active officials on the high school and college sport scene in Eastern Pennsylvania.

Elton Sherwood Hunsinger, better known as Dean Hunsinger since he served as dean of men at BSC, has been a registered PIAA official for thirty years, holding registration in basketball, football, baseball and track.

Dean Hunsinger has officiated in three Eastern Conference football championships, six consecutive District Four baseball championships, ten District Four basketball playoffs, and one Eastern Regional A game in basketball.

Robert Davenport, assistant professor of Education and Psychology, has had seven years of basketball officiating and four years of football officiating of high school and college games in Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Bob, who hails from Berwick, will on occasion, work in the same game with Dean Hunsinger.

Another faculty member, Dr. E. Paul Wagner, professor of Education and Psychology, put his striped uniform in moth balls about three years ago. "Doc", as he is known in sporting circles, is a past president of the Williamsport and Danville Chapter of Football Officials. He had twenty-eight years of football officiating for high school and college and professional games and twenty-five years in basketball with the same groups.

All three of these sports enthusiasts echo the same feeling that although they are compensated for their officiating, the real rewarding aspect is keeping in good physical condition and in close contact with young people.

Lock Haven—21 BSC—14

Bloomsburg Huskies, forced to depend largely on a passing attack although Gary Sprout did some fine leather lugging, were unable to come up with enough successful aerials to overcome the more varied offense of the Lock Haven Bald Eagles at Lock Haven and lost 21-14.

A crowd of around 2,500, including a good sized Bloomsburg contingent, saw the Eagles gain the upper hand in the first half, the Huskies came back with the tying score early in the fourth period and the host club moved out of reach with two tallies.

It was largely a defensive bat-

BLAIR IN 7TH YEAR AT HELM

Walt Blair directed the Husky grid machine for the seventh year after serving two years as assistant coach. Blair was an outstanding athlete at Northeast High School in Philadelphia lettering in football, baseball and basketball.

Military service in the Army during World War II ended a brief stay at Temple University. While in the service, Blair played football with the Eighth Armoured Division and Camp Polk, La., teams.

In September, 1946, he entered West Chester State College to begin an outstanding career in college competition under Coach Glenn Killinger. It was during this period that the Rams became one of the nation's small college football powers. Blair played three post-season bowl games, seeing service in both the line and backfield.

An able and enthusiastic competitor, Blair used his know how to good advantage while coaching at Neshaminy, Jenkintown and Chambersburg high schools. His teams rolled up 30 victories, 13 losses and 1 tie.

Assisting in the coaching chores of the Huskies were Eli McLaughlin, as line coach; Dick Mentzer, backfield coach and George Willewohl, end coach.

tle until the fourth period when things opened up as each of the clubs scored twice in an exciting 15 minutes.

West Chester-28 BSC-0

West Chester Rams used their defense to gain a 3 touchdown advantage in the first half, and then moved to a 28-0 victory over BSC before a homecoming crowd of about 3,000. The Huskies of coach Blair, playing their best game of season, up to that time, put up a stiff resistance and staged one scoring threat in the second half — a 51 yard aerial from Bob Kurzinsky, a junior, Mahanoy City, to Roy Pef-fer, the senior speedster from Mechanicsburg.

The last few minutes of the first half saw the Rams score twice and decide the issue then and there.

Kutztown-25

A game that had been billed as a "natural" between two State College Conference Clubs that have found victory a most elusive commodity, turned out to be a breather for Bud Heilman's Golden Bears at Kutztown.

Performing before a good sized homecoming crowd, the defensive unit of the Bears was especially active in the opening half when its accomplishments brought one touchdown and set up another as the Huskies were buried 19-0.

After the intermission the Husky team dominated the play, scoring twice and having more opportunities. The one touchdown they yielded in the afterpiece was the result of a rolling punt touching a Husky back, Steve Bilyk, and being recovered by Kutztown 7 yards from the goal.

BSC-14 East Stroudsburg—7

Bloomsburg Huskies, rising to the heights for this fall and providing some brilliant line play on defense, closed a long season with a 14 to 7 victory over highly favored East Stroudsburg.

The won-lost record of 3-5 was the poorest for a Husky eleven since the sport was reestablished on a varsity basis in 1946 but because of the finish packed more lustre than last year's 4-3-1 record.

The victory over the Warriors was the first over East Stroudsburg since gridiron relations were resumed some five years ago and was the first triumph over a highly rated foe since the West Chester Rams were upset here 13-10 in the finale of the 1959 season.

ATTENTION, ALUMNI!

Historians and statisticians, concerned with higher education, have had a field day during the past twenty years recording and analyzing the record number of high school graduates who have poured into the colleges and universities of our nation.

On the other hand, administrators of these colleges and universities have been and are still beset with the problems of providing classrooms, dormitories, equipment, qualified faculty, and library facilities to accommodate these surges in enrollment.

Time, money, and careful planning have been prime factors in the task of providing opportunities for all the qualified applicants who desire a college education. These factors are particularly critical in sustaining a four-year undergraduate program as well as graduate programs leading to the Master's degree.

To help meet the need for adequate funds, both private and public institutions of higher education, have of necessity turned to alumni and friends for financial support. It is interesting and encouraging to note that loyal alumni, at one of our sister institutions, have contributed $10,000 each year, for the past three years, to help their alma mater meet needs for which State appropriations are not available.

Your alma mater is proud of the large number of its graduates who have sent their children, grandchildren, nieces, and nephews to Bloomsburg to complete their undergraduate studies. It is also gratifying to note the number of alumni who are returning to the campus to earn the Master's degree.

Your alumni association has pledged its support to the college to purchase library books and to provide scholarships and loans. Will you help us to serve you and members of your family?

Your contribution, large or small, will help maintain the highest standards at Bloomsburg.

BLOOMSBURG STATE COLLEGE

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Bloomsburg State College is now reaching the first quarter of the Second Century of its existence as an educational institution.

In 1839 an Academy was organized in the Town of Bloomsburg. One of the early teachers was C. P. Waller. Another person of the same name, Rev. David J. Waller, helped to secure a charter from the county court in 1856 for the Bloomsburg Literary Institute. After the construction of a building at the present site in 1867 and following a visitation by representatives of the Superintendent of Common Schools on February 19, 1869, a charter was granted three days later for a state normal school.

From this date until the completion of the purchase of all the normal schools by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in 1920, the legal title of your alma mater was "The Bloomsburg Literary Institute and State Normal School of the Sixth District." Seven years later, the Bloomsburg State Normal School became the Bloomsburg State Teachers College with the authority to grant the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education. In 1960, the word "Teachers" was deleted from the name of the institution; and the Bloomsburg State College was subsequently authorized to offer additional curriculums leading to the degrees of Master of Education and Bachelor of Arts.

Preparations are now being made to observe the One Hundred Twenty-fifth Anniversary of Bloomsburg State College sometime during the college year of 1964-1965, beginning in September, 1964.

The centennial year of Bloomsburg State Teachers College, celebrated in 1939, was an outstanding occasion for many who remember it. Some in the College and many in the town of Bloomsburg recall this as a cooperative effort of students, faculty, alumni, and townspeople. The observance of one hundred years of education, beginning with the Academy and culminating with the College, was a high point in the history of your Alma Mater.

As plans are matured, we will welcome your suggestions and support in what we expect to be a time for reviewing the accomplishments of the past, the challenges of the present, and the hopes and aspirations of the future.

Other announcements will be made from time to time, and you may expect to hear further on this matter from

Harvey A. Andrus

Harvey A. Andrus, President

MID - YEAR COMMENCEMENT

"Today you have earned more than honor, you have also earned grave responsibilities, and the degree you have received testifies to your ability and capacity to accept those responsibilities," charged Dr. Eric A. Walker, president, The Pennsylvania State University, told 102 graduating seniors at Bloomsburg State College mid-winter commencement.

At the mid-year commencement held in Centennial Gymnasium Tuesday, January 21, diplomas were presented to 102 grads. This number included 44 in the Secondary Curriculum, 28 in the Elementary Curriculum, 16 in Business Education and 3 in Public School Nursing. In addition 2 persons received the Master's degree in Elementary Education.

In the absence of President Andruss, who had been delayed in Panama, Dean John A. Hoch, Acting President, presided over the convocation.

Others taking part were James Creasy, Senior Class Advisor, S. Lloyd Toumey, Director of Business Education, Royce O. Johnson, Director of Elementary Education, C. Stuart Edwards, Director of Secondary Education, Donald F. Maietta, Director of Special Education and Robert C. Miller, Director of Graduate Studies.

Nelson A. Miller, chairman of the Department of Music, led the audience in the singing of the Alma Mater. William K. Decker presided at the organ and led the College Choraleers, who sang "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor," by Berlin-Ringold.

John J. Serff, chairman of the Department of Social Studies, was Honorary Marshal.

The speaker was Dr. Eric A. Walker, President of the Pennsylvania State University. Extracts from his address follow:

"To default on the acceptance of your responsibilities is to deny our society the fair return it expects—and has a right to expect—on its investment in your education."

"Because leadership will be expected of you, you will occupy honored and privileged positions, your opinions will be respected and you will have many opportunities to help fashion a better life for all of us.

"Each of us has something to offer society that no one else can give. By neglecting our personal responsibilities, we rob others of the full realization of their birth rights. To preserve equal opportunities for all, then each has an equal opportunity to do his best, an equal opportunity to serve mankind to the limits of his ability. A person who can lead others wisely and does not is as blameworthy as the person who could have prevented a crime and does not."

Dr. Walker pointed out that it is not always easy to know what to do to discharge one's responsibilities. He referred to Sparta of Ancient Greece who was so proficient at winning victories but in the long run didn't know what to do with them. As a result, during one of the most productive and creative periods mankind has ever known she failed to produce a single man of genius or to make a single contribution to the advancement of civilization.

"In our own age," Dr. Walker continued, "man has discovered a means by which he has won some spectacular victories in his eternal struggle with a harsh and unfriendly environment. This means consists of a dynamic technology working hand-in-glove with basic science. Within just the last two decades, these two potentially powerful forces have achieved a closer working arrangement than ever before in the history of man. The resulting victories have tremendous implications, both for good and evil in the future of mankind.

"They have given us the ability to create for ourselves the sort of life we should like to live which is of extreme importance in evaluating the impact of science and technology upon our civilization. We have, today, a huge surplus of productivity that is not needed to supply the American people with the fundamental necessities of life. We have won a tremendous victory in the struggle for room and food. This victory has been won through a happy marriage between technology and basic science. And we know, that this combination can bring us greater victories in the future.

"There are, it seems to me, basically three ways to use this excess productivity. In the first place, we can convert it into even more leisure time for the American people. This leisure time amounts to nothing more than partial unemployment if it is not used wisely, either for the benefit of the individual or for that of society.

"In the second place, we can use this productivity to design and produce even more consumer goods—goods for which the consumers recognize no need until after Madison avenue, backed up by all the imposing forces of a $12,000,000,000 a year advertising industry has explained it to them.

"Finally, we could convert this productivity into more public schools and services — into more and better schools, into improved highways, into slum clearance projects, into city planning, and the like.

"Science and technology are only tools. For progress in human use of human beings we must have tools. But, unless they are considered wisely, tools can be as harmful as they can be beneficial. This fact measures the responsibility of leaders in our society. It measures your responsibility as the future leaders in your communities.

"In discharging your responsibilities for leadership, no one can advise you as well as you will be advised by your own conscience. I should, however, like to leave you with one thought. Face up to your responsibilities courageously but humbly. Exercise your leadership firmly but not arrogantly. Temper your intelligence with wisdom and your knowledge with tolerance. Above all else, base your decisions on a sense of values that places the man before the job, the larger good before the selfish interest, and your self-respect before material expediency."

The cover of this issue shows the front approach to North Hall, which will soon be razed to make room for a new men's dormitory, to be known as South Hall. The dormitory now standing on the site of the old barn, now known as New North Hall, will carry on the name of the familiar campus landmark.

During the Commencement exercises, Dean John A. Hoeh, acting president, in the absence of Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, conferred the degrees and awarded the diplomas to graduates.

At the close of the ceremonies, diplomas were presented to the following:

BSC SUMMER STUDY ABROAD

A "summer study abroad program" for foreign language students of all colleges will be offered this summer by Bloomsburg State College. Dr. Carl D. Bauer, BSC chairman of the Department of Foreign Languages and director of the "summer abroad program", went on a two-week trip to Madrid, Dijon (France) and Mainz and Heidelberg (Germany) to make the final arrangements to insure a good, well-balanced program.

Courses in speech and composition, culture and literature, will be offered and students will be placed in courses according to previous language training. At least two semesters of college are desirable for acceptance.

Nine credits will be given by Bloomsburg State College to those students showing satisfactory progress. Weekend tours will augment the daily instruction with many theatre, museum visits, and dances planned.

The three study tours are as follows:

Tour A—The University of Dijon, France, July 20-August 31.

Tour B—The University of Mainz, Germany, July 20-August 31.

Tour C—The University of Madrid, Spain, June 29-August 30.

Additional information may be obtained by writing to Dr. Carl D. Bauer, director of Bloomsburg "abroad program," Box 81, Bloomsburg State College, Bloomsburg, Pa.

Eleven members of the class of 1908 were present at the fifty-fifth reunion of the class last Alumni Day. The following names were omitted from the list of those present, as published in the July issue of the Quarterly: Alberta Handley McGowan, Scranton; Thomas Francis, Scranton; William Rarich, Philadelphia and Saida Hartman, Washington, D. C.

TRAINING IN 48 SCHOOLS

Outlying schools cooperating with Bloomsburg State College in its student teaching program are a vital part of the over-all educational program. During the first semester there were forty-eight schools from twenty-two towns in Pennsylvania, representing 12 counties, participating in the student teaching program at BSC.

The curriculums involved in this program are special education, business education, secondary education, and elementary education.

The largest number of schools, including elementary and secondary, representing single towns are the seven from Berwick, Columbia County, and the seven from Levittown, Bucks County. Bloomsburg ranks next with five schools followed by Selinsgrove with four. The rest of the towns cooperating are Danville, Allentown, Langhorne, Milton, Williamsport, two each; Elysburg, Central, Bethlehem, Falsington, Watsontown, Port Trevorton, Shamokin Dam, Jersey Shore, Pine Grove, Montoursville, South Williamsport and Port Carbon, one each.

DR. ANDRUSS DELIVERS MESSAGE ON PANAMA

In the President's Convocation at the beginning of the second semester, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, President of Bloomsburg State College, stated that while the students of Bloomsburg State College are preparing to be teachers and are preparing for other professions or to eventually raise families, students in colleges of other nations are looking to other countries for help.

He indicated that it is interesting to note that many of the students of the University of Panama are 25 to 30 years old, part-time students who hold down jobs while getting their education and sometimes travel many miles daily just to attend school.

In amplifying the theme of his speech "What Can We Learn from Panama," given at Centennial Gymnasium, Dr. Andruss frequently admitted, "I don't think we have learned anything yet."

He pointed out that the negotiations between United States and Panama have bogged down and it may take sometime to iron out the situation. He didn't believe the key to the solution is the re-writing of the 1903 Treaty, but we should lean towards the following goals: (1) Not to lump all the Central and South American countries together as a unit but consider them separately each with its own problems; (2) we must have more Americans that do more traveling, more diplomats who are multi-linguists to be able to understand other countries' problems and more readily help with their solutions; (3) the United States is going to have to stop handing out foreign aid the way we have been, thus stop building up our economy by dumping our surpluses on other nations in the form of foreign aid.

"When you have to choose between principles and popularity, I'll take principle" Dr. Andruss continued. This principle must be a result of diplomacy that earns the respect of all concerned.

Dr. Andruss spoke of the complicated political structure of Panama that embraces some 23 political parties and has 7 presidential candidates in a election year. He implied that the extremists in Panama want the Canal taken over by Panama, as the Suez Canal was taken over by Egypt in recent years. He further pointed out that the initial controversy over the flag raising incident had nationalistic overtones, but a day or so after the rioting, communistic direction was evident. An interesting fact, he stated, is that there are approximately 20 professors at the University of Panama willing to stand up and be counted as communists.

Dr. Andruss related the following rather harrowing experience on the opening day of the rioting while staying at the El Panama Hilton Hotel. He and Mrs. Andruss were having dinner on the other side of Panama City from the hotel in a restaurant where an ex-president of Panama was having a special dinner from over 100 guests. The rioting started in the nearby streets and the lights in the restaurant were put out. The ex-President and his guests disappeared in no time and Dr. and Mrs. Andruss were hurried to a special room and locked in for protection. Later, they deemed themselves fortunate on being able to return to the Hotel by taxi without personal contact with the rioters.

Dr. Andruss mentioned that on his far east trip, prior to Panama, it was a shocking experience to learn of President Kennedy's assassination and that it was apparent wherever he went in the Far East, the non-Caucasian people thought President Kennedy was a friend.

Dr. Andruss concluded by informing any students considering diplomatic careers or foreign country assignments that they take foreign languages and go where they can use them to gain experience in the language.

BSC TO OFFER TRAVEL STUDY THIS SUMMER

A foreign travel course, "The Life and Culture of Western Europe," will be offered by the local State College this summer from late June to early August. Fifteen countries will be visited in this approximately 7-week travel seminar that will be featuring history, government, science and industry, fine arts and social studies.

According to Professor Henry R. George, Department of Social Studies, BSC, the course has been planned with the objective of understanding. He feels it is important in today's world to understand the culture, history and current movements of the countries to be visited. The countries will include England, Belgium, Switzerland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Germany, Liechtenstein, Austria, Yugoslavia, Italy, San Marino, Monaco, France, Spain, Morocco and Portugal.

Professor George has had extensive experience in observing and studying world cultures. His service as consultant to foreign governments, contributions to publications, and lengthy residences in Europe, Africa, Asia, and the Arctic have greatly enriched his cultural studies. He directed the very successful 1963 Bloomsburg Seminar in Europe.

On completion of the course, 6 hours of credit towards Graduation, Permanent Certification, or Graduate degree will be granted. There will be a limited number of non-credit auditors. Additional information concerning academic requirements and tuition fees may be acquired by writing to Professor Henry George, Bloomsburg State College.

Elton Hunsinger, dean of men at Bloomsburg State College, delivered the keynote address at the Annual Founders Day Dinner sponsored by the Wilkes-Barre Area Council of Parent-Teachers Associations at Coughlin High School Monday, February 10.

THE CENTENNIAL PROGRAM - 1939

Inasmuch as the year 1964 marks the 125th year of continuous existence of the College under various names, it may be of interest to recall the activities of the Centennial celebration held at the College in 1939. The following article appeared in the Morning Press in its issue of May 30, 1939:

Administrators, faculty and students of the Bloomsburg State College were ready last night for the influx of alumni expected as the College is joined with resident of the town and county generally, in beginning a two-day celebration of its hundredth year of service.

Friday and Saturday are general alumni days. Friday will be known as Alumni-Community Day, and on this day a special effort will be made to have alumni and friends of the College in town and county attend the program.

The Centennial will open at 10:30 Friday morning with the inspection of all College facilities and exhibits of the College and Training School activities capable of visual presentation. Because of the fine history and tradition of the institution these exhibits will be most interesting.

At eleven o'clock in the Alumni Room, Mrs. Margaret Jenkins MacCachran will present to the College and Alumni Association a memorial picture of her father, Francis H. Jenkins. Graduates will recall that Professor Jenkins was for many years a member of the faculty and later Bursar of the institution.

At 3:30 a splendid program of sports will be given by the Department of Physical Education in the new gymnasium. The Bloomsburg High School gym team will also participate in this exhibition.

In the auditorium at 7:30 a program of unusual interest will be presented. It will open with a pageant, and this will be followed by reminiscences of the "good old days." The ancient feud between the Philologian and Calliepian Literary Societies will be revived after the presentation of two one-act plays formerly presented by the Philos and Callies. Following the auditorium program, reunions of various organizations, sororities and fraternities will be held in various rooms of the College.

At eleven o'clock on Saturday, the general alumni meeting will be held in the new gymnasium. At this time reports, by classes, of the Centennial Student Loan Fund will be received. Alumni Loan Fund memorials will also be presented and accepted in behalf of the Association.

The class reunions will begin with a luncheon in the college dining room at 12:30. It is planned to make this a time of real festivity. Paper hats and tin horns will play their part in arousing the enthusiasm of the "Old Grads." Following the luncheon, class reunions will be held in rooms assigned for that purpose.

At 3:00 a baseball game between the college nine and the centennial all-stars will be played on the diamond. An alumni team will also play the college team in tennis.

Perhaps the outstanding event of the celebration will be the Centennial Banquet to be held in the college dining hall at seven o'clock. It is expected that the Governor of Pennsylvania will be present. Judge William R. Lewis, of Scranton, will preside as toastmaster. There will be group singing and dinner music. Following the banquet, a program will be given in the auditorium. At the same hour, the alumni dance will be held in the new gymnasium.

The largest representation of alumni in the history of the institution will be on the campus May 26 and 27, honoring one hundred years of educational service to American youth.

SPRING ARTS FESTIVAL

The third annual Spring Arts Festival this year will get underway with a mime presentation by Tony Montanaro on Monday, April 27, 1964, at 8:15 p.m. in Centennial Gymnasium. Mr. Montanaro in his performance at Bloomsburg during the Pre-Session last summer received one of the most enthusiastic receptions ever accorded a visiting artist. As a result of this response, the committee was asked to consider having Mr. Montanaro return to campus.

Mr. Donald Winer, Curator of the Everhart Museum in Scranton, Pa., will be the speaker in assembly on April 28, 1964 at 2:00 p.m. in Carver Auditorium. He will be speaking on "Building A Collection", and will bring with him a collection of oils, watercolors, and drawings from the permanent collection of the Everhart Museum, which exhibition will represent a variety of periods, styles, and techniques. This exhibition will be open during the entire week, in the lobby of Waller Hall. Following Mr. Winer's lecture there will be a Gallery Talk and tea in the lobby of Waller Hall. In conjunction with the art emphasis of the Festival, the film, "The Titan", about the life and work of Michelangelo, will be shown in Carver Auditorium on Saturday, May 2, at 3:00 p.m.

The Festival program this year is expanding in size, in variety of events, and in the quality of the performing artists and groups. Added to the offerings are a poet and literary critic. Mr. X. J. Kennedy, poet-in-residence at Tufts University, will be reading and singing his poetry on Thursday, April 30, 1964 at 8:15 p.m. in Carver Auditorium. Mr. Kennedy is the author of a book of verse, "Nude Descending the Staircase," he has published variously and is currently poetry editor for "Paris Review."

In assembly at 2:00 p.m. on April 30, 1964, Mr. Arthur Mizener, of Cornell University, will be speaking on "Fitzgerald As Historian of the Twenties." Mr. Mizener is the author of F. Scott Fitzgerald's standard biography, "The Far Side of Paradise," and is eminently qualified to speak on this topic. In addition Mr. Mizener has published various critical articles and books, including an article on Chaucer that has become important in the bibliography of Chaucerian studies. His most recent book is "The Sense of Life in the Modern Novel."

One of the most interesting events of the Festival will be the Bloomsburg Players' production of "Taming of the Shrew," in the improvisational style of the Italian commedia del' arte. This play is especially fitting in this, the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth. It is a play that has always had both popular and academic appeal. Under the direction of Mr. Michael J. McHale, who comes to Bloomsburg this year with a very impressive directorial background, this production should prove a very enjoyable evening for those who attend. The two performances of the play will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 28 and 29, 8:15 p.m. in Carver Auditorium. Student sand faculty here at Bloomsburg should have an added interest in this play, as Dr. Serony, Chairman of the English Department, last winter had published in the "Shakespeare Quarterly" an article dealing with the "supposes" theme in the play.

In conjunction with the Festival, the Evening Entertainment Program of the college is sponsoring on Friday, May 1, 1964 at 8:15 p.m. in Carver Auditorium the Ethel Winters Dance Company, which will be presenting a program in modern dance. This supplement to the events of the week is welcomed by the students and faculty planning the Festival.

The Festival committee is especially proud to announce the appearance of the Curtis String Quartet on Saturday, May 2, at 8:15 p.m. in Carver Auditorium. Comment about this group would be superfluous, since they are so highly and widely recognized in musical circles.

The final event of the week is a choral program by the Choraleers and the Madrigal Singers, under the direction of Mr. Decker, also new in Bloomsburg this year. Mr. Decker's ability with choral groups has already been in evidence in the assembly programs in which they have sung.

All the events of the Festival are free to the student body, the faculty, the community, to visitors from other campuses and other communities, and the Festival committee takes this opportunity to invite and to urge all interested to attend as many events as possible.

Earl R. Strange '20

Earl R. Strange, for thirty-seven years a teacher in the commercial department of the Pottstown High School, died June 10, 1963, at his desk in his classroom, of a heart attack.

Born in Minersville, he was the son of the late John and Laura (Roberts) Strange. He was graduated from the Minersville High School in 1917 and immediately enlisted in the Army. He served with a field artillery unit during World War I. He took a leave of absence with a Red Cross unit in the Hawaiian Islands.

After World War I, he came to Bloomsburg, and was graduated in 1920. Following graduation he taught in the high school in Lewistown, before going to Pottstown as a business teacher in 1927.

He is survived by his wife, the former Geraldine E. Clark, three sons, a sister, and a brother, and seven grandchildren. An active churchman, he was a member of Christ Episcopal Church, Pottstown. He was a vestryman there for the past twenty years, and secretary of the Board at his death.

His social memberships included the following: Stitcher Lodge 254, F&A.M., B.P.O. Elks Lodge 814, George Amole Post 47, American Legion, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Boyertown; Lehigh Consistory, Rajah Shrine, Legion of Honor, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, Pitman Masonic Club, Loyol Order of Moose, Philadelphia Firc Co., Montgomery County Justice of the Peace Association, the National Education Association and the Pennsylvania State Education Association.

Because of Mr. Strange's outstanding contributions to the life of his community, the Pottstown Mercury, in its issue of June 11, printed the following editorial tribute at the time of his death:

There's a roomful of trophies at Pottstown High to remind coming generations about the good work of Earl R. Strange, the commercial teacher who died suddenly Monday.

But those cups aren't necessary. Mr. Strange had so many other fine qualities besides his ability to lead that his monuments in his friends' memories will be more lasting.

Mr. Strange died in harness. A teacher here for 35 years, he passed on as he lived—in the classroom. It seemed almost coincidental that if he had to go, he would take the journey into the infinite on the last day of school! He wouldn't think of missing a day from his desk!

The energetic school master, public servant, justice of the peace, and fraternalist took on many extra-curricular chores. He didn't seem to mind the load until a year ago when he suffered a heart attack. His friends told him to ease up, even to retire, then. But he kept pushing because he was natured that way. He was a dynamo of energy.

The thousands of Pottstown school children who passed through school in the past 36 years will recall him as an able commercial subject teacher. But most remember him or his safety drill teams.

A former drill sergeant in three Army posts, Mr. Strange came to Pottstown from Lewistown in 1927. He knew drill formations so well that he decided to tie them in with safety teams. He formed his first safety patrol team in 1931, a year after the late Orton C. Beacraft originated the first.

Mr. Strange did such a great job as drill master that Pottstown High's teams overwhelmed all opposition or a quarter of a century in national competition in Washington. He dropped these drill team duties in 1955.

He had similar success with Elk lodge teams. He drilled them so well, they also became national champions, and Mr. Strange took his showplace drillsters to many far and near events.

With all this work, his school, his team, he still had time to serve his community as councilman, and even was a candidate (albeit a losing one) for burgess. He quit his councilmanic post because he moved. But he kept contact with borough hall affairs by becoming a justice of the peace.

Mr. Strange was one of the most popular of high school teachers. He took a leading role in the Educational union, for many years was one of the negotiators who bargained or various benefits with the school board. He was a successful negotiator.

He had a sunny disposition, always was willing to go out of his way to aid a friend. His pupils revered him. His compatriots admired him. His friends loved him.

His passing will create a void in Pottstown life.

February 8, 1964

BSC 55 West Chester 50

Bloomsburg State Colleges' quintet was hard pressed, but came through with a surge in the final half of its game to overcome a tough West Chester five, 55-50. The Rams battled the Huskies on even terms throughout the first half and went off the floor at intermission with a 1 point lead at 28-27. The contest remained close until the final two minutes when the locals clicked well enough to penetrate the Ram defenses and build a comfortable margin as the seconds ticked away the final quarter.

BSC 70 Kings 62

Bloomsburg Huskies, clicking especially well in the first half and being sparked at critical points by the excellent shooting of Jeff Garrison, a senior from Abington, defeated King's College Monarchs 70-62. It was the second win of the season over King's as the Huskies, still striving for a PSCAC eastern division cage crowd, enrolled their tenth triumph in fourteen contests.

February 14, 1964

BSC 68 Millersville 70

Bloomsburg State College Huskies were just about eliminated from a shot at the Pennsylvania State College Conference title as they were upset at Millersville State, 70-68. The BSC quintet got off on the right foot and led 42-33 at halftime, with Millersville's Kometta keeping the home team in the contest as he scored 20 of his total 30 points during that stanza. The locals pulled to their lead with 4 minutes remaining in the half after the contest had been pretty much nip and tuck.

December 14, 1963

Wilkes Tourney

Bloomsburg State College saw two of its team—Joel Melitski, 123, and William Robb, 137—take individual championships in the thirty-second annual Wilkes wrestling tourney at Wilkes-Barre, the first Huskies ever to achieve such honors.

New York Athletic Club, with a large and well balanced team, took the team honors with 79 points but Russ Houk's Huskies made an outstanding showing in the field of 340 collegiate, athletic club and unattached amateur wrestlers by placing second with 63.

Bloomsburg this year, with three boys in the finals and one in the consolation finals, compiled 63 points, 10 more than the team garnered last year when it took the title—the first State College ever to acquire the team title.

New York A. C., which had such a wealth of talent in the tourney that in the 167 and unlimited it provided both of the finalists, took four individual titles, Bloomsburg had two and Cornell, University of Michigan, Ohio University and Ithaca one each.

ded Wilkes Tourney, registered four pins, four decisions and a draw.

BSC 16 Southern Illinois 23

Southern Illinois, smarting from a loss to Bloomsburg State a year ago, eked out a 23-16 wrestling victory over the Huskies in a close duel staged on the mats at Centennial Gym. The match was undecided until the final bout, when Southern Illinois' heavyweight ace, Cristoff, pinned Leo Viard, Husky freshman, in the first period. The loss was the first for BSC in its last 23 matches and evened the series between the two teams which will meet on December 11, 1964, at Southern Illinois.

BSC 22 Rochester I. T. 8

Bloomsburg State College wrestlers rebounded from a loss at the hands of Southern Illinois, and defeated Rochester Institute of Techonology 22-8 on the losers mats. Only 10 matches were contested and one of these, the 157, Bloomsburg won on forfeit.

BSC 22 E. Stroudsburg 9

Bloomsburg State College Huskies, wrestling before the largest home crowd of the season at Centennial Gym, defeated East Stroudsburg State College in a highly contested meet, 22-9. —

BSC 6 Lock Haven 23

The Bald Eagles of Lock Haven State got claws into the hide of the Bloomsburg Husky on the Haven wrestling mats and shook them so thoroughly that a decisive 23-6 triumph resulted for Hubert Jacks' boys. The Eagles, who were defeated during a quadrangular meet last December and last year lost in the dual meet held on the hill, were building up for this one all winter and they were ready.

A capacity crowd in the Lock Haven field house, including a good sized delegation from here, saw the Huskies stay in the running only through the early matches.

Pennsylvania State College Conference

Bloomsburg State College wrestlers, in a display of powerful team strength, won the Pennsylvania State College Athletic Conference mat crown for the third straight year and for the fifth time in the last six years.

The charges of the capable Russ Houk, placing boys in the first four in each of the 10 weight divisions, wrapped up the crown when Joel Melitski, a senior from Somerville, N. J., pinned Bob Guzzo, one of the stars of the rapidly improving East Stroudsburg team, in 56 seconds of the second period in the 123.

The 4 points garnered in that achievement, regarded by many as one of the upsets of the tourney was a brilliant piece of work by Melitski who has been a stand-out all season, and put the Husky total beyond the reach of the challenging Lock Haven Bald Eagles.

The team point score: Bloomsburg 104, Lock Haven 83, East Stroudsburg and Clarion 27 each, Mansfield 24, Slippery Rock 21, Millersville 19, Edinboro 16, Indiana 10, California 1.

Lock Haven got four individual champions, Bloomsburg three, and Edinboro, East Stroudsburg and Mansfield one each.

BSC 13

It was the first venture of the Huskies into the lair of one of the established mat giants of the NCAA and while the showing of the Maroon and Gold was regarded as satisfactory by the majority of the local fans, the disappointment to achieve more in the middle weight classes, and thus gain victory, was keen.

One was a 400-yard medley relay with Beltz, Billet, Fox and Young going the distance in 4:31.2 and the other was in the 200-yard back stroke where Beltz recorded 2:31.2 to better a mark of 2:33 set by Nelson Swartz in 1964. BSC 35 Lock Haven 60

Bloomsburg Husky swimmers, able to take only 2 of the events and losing both relays, went down to a 60-35 defeat at Lock Haven. The victories were recorded by Dick Steidel, the star BSC diver, and by Jim Young in the 50-yard free style.

The Huskies had considerable all around strength but could not compete with the brilliance of some of the Bald Eagle tankmen. In 5 of the events, Bloomsburg swimmers took both second and third.

BSC 29 Lycoming 66

Lycoming College swimmers defeated the improving Bloomsburg State College tankmen, 66-29, at the Lycoming pool. Although the Huskies were defeated, they set several new school records against the strong Lycoming team.

Bill Turley placed first in the butterfly for a new BSC mark and finished second in the 200-yard breast stroke in 2:44.4 to set a new Bloomsburg record also. A fourth BSC record fell in the 400-yard relay where Lomis, Fitzpatrick, Fox and Young completed the course in 3:59.2.

A fine long letter has been received from Pauline Nelson (Mrs. Herbert C. Brockman), who lives at 1420 South 37th street, Kansas City 6, Kansas. She writes as follows:

"For sixteen years I taught fifth and sixth grades in the schools of Thompson, Pa. Part of the work was teaching music in the seventh and eighth grades also. The evenings were spent in working with some high school girls in basketball. For about ten years I coached the High School basketball team.

"During the summers from 1929 to 1939, I returned to Bloomsburg to work for my B.S. degree. With the few credits that I was able to receive in extension work from Penn State and the summer work, I received the B.S. in the summer of 1939 at Bloomsburg.

"I spent two summers working with the Girl Scouts of Fall River, Mass., in their camping program. Louise Roushey, a graduate of BSTC, was the Executive Secretary there at that time.

"In the Spring of 1945, I left Pennsylvania to join the faculty at Kalamazoo, Michigan, in the public school system. I taught the fifth grade the first year, and the fourth grade after that. During my first two years there, I taught the music for grades 3, 4, 5 and 6. It was here that my credits in Audio-Visual work proved beneficial. I think I was the only one in our building who had had any Audio-Visual experience. Thanks to Bloomsburg again.

"These years passed quickly, and in the fall of 1948, I was married to the best Methodist minister in Kansas! He was at Wellsville, Kansas, where we stayed until the spring of 1951, when the Bishop appointed him to the church at Shawnee, Kansas, where the task was to start a building program in a rapidly growing area. We spent five years there, and then we were sent in 1956 to Neodesha, Kansas, to another building program. In three years, the program was completed. We think that it is the prettiest Methodist church in Kansas!

"June, 1961, found us in Kansas City at the Metropolitan Avenue Methodist Church.

"During these fifteen years, my husband has served as Conference Missionary Secretary. This brought us into the fellowship with many missionary leaders and projects. It was at the Jurisdictional Conference that we met Dr. Paul D. Womeldorf '12 and his lovely wife (Eudora Walton '11). When I heard him speak I thought that the accent sounded familiar and that his mannerisms were Eastern. Sure enough, we found that both he and Mrs. Womeldorf had attended Bloomsburg, so we developed a lovely friendship with them then. We always talk school when we are together.

"I have served twice as a Conference officer for our Women's Society of Christian Service and have worked in Audio-Visual workshops from the local church level to the Jurisdictional level.

"It's always good to hear from home!"

This issue of the Quarterly is being sent to all Alumni for whom we have addresses. If any of your friends tell you that they did not receive a copy, tell them to send their address to The Alumni Office, Bloomsburg State College, and a copy will be sent to them.

It is the hope of the Board of Directors that, by reaching the entire body of the Alumni at least once a year, a great number will be induced to become active members of the Association. The Constitution of the Association states that only those whose dues are paid for the current year are entitled to vote at the annual business meeting.

Out of over 8,000 living Alumni, only about 1600 are active members at the present time. This proportion is entirely too small. The Association is committed to support the College in as many ways as possible, as stated on the back cover of the Quarterly. By joining the Association, you are making an investment in the future of the College.

If you are not a member, why not, while you are in the mood, fill out the blank below and send it with your dues to the Alumni Office?

Please enroll me as an active member of the Alumni Association of the Bloomsburg State College. I enclose:

ATTENTION, ALUMNI!

Historians and statisticians, concerned with higher education, have had a field day during the past twenty years recording and analyzing the record number of high school graduates who have poured into the colleges and universities of our nation.

On the other hand, administrators of these colleges and universities have been and are still beset with the problems of providing classrooms, dormitories, equipment, qualified faculty, and library facilities to accommodate these surges in enrollment.

Time, money, and careful planning have been prime factors in the task of providing opportunities for all the qualified applicants who desire a college education. These factors are particularly critical in sustaining a four-year undergraduate program as well as graduate programs leading to the Master's degree.

To help meet the need for adequate funds, both private and public institutions of higher education, have of necessity turned to alumni and friends for financial support. It is interesting and encouraging to note that loyal alumni, at one of our sister institutions, have contributed $10,000 each year, for the past three years, to help their alma mater meet needs for which State appropriations are not available.

Your alma mater is proud of the large number of its graduates who have sent their children, grandchildren, nieces, and nephews to Bloomsburg to complete their undergraduate studies. It is also gratifying to note the number of alumni who are returning to the campus to earn the Master's degree.

Your alumni association has pledged its support to the college to purchase library books and to provide scholarships and loans. Will you help us to serve you and members of your family?

Your contribution, large or small, will help maintain the highest standards at Bloomsburg.

BLOOMSBURG STATE COLLEGE

ONE HUNDRED TWENTY-FIFTH
ANNIVERSARY (1839-1964)

"Time moves onward, leaving us the Golden Year."

If the past is but a prologue to the future, we pause from time to time to mark certain occasions in our memory.

Those who founded the Academy in Bloomsburg in 1839, following a depression, had no visions of greater things to come than the education of the oncoming generation.

In 1856, the incorporators of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute felt that an organization of private citizens could improve the Academy. The intervening panic probably delayed the selection of a site at the end of Main or Second Street for the erection of Institute Hall in 1867.

Two years later, a Bloomsburg Literary Institute became the Normal School of the Sixth District of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

When the first century of education at Bloomsburg was commemorated in 1939, those who attended the different events gave little thought to the next quarter century as they were trying to identify the signposts of the past.

We are now engaged in a program of expansion, which will probably dwarf those of the last twenty-five years.

However, it seems that we need to find out where we have been and where we are before we decide where we want to go.

For these and many other reasons—sentimental and educational—we are celebrating during the college year 1964-1965 the one hundred twenty-fifth anniversary of the institution now known as Bloomsburg State College.

Realizing our debt to the Academy, the Literary Institute, the Normal School and the State Teachers College, and all those who had a part in their development, we will face the Future with greater assurance when we have an understanding of the many debts we owe the Past.

Will you join your Alma Mater in commemorating these anniversary events?

THE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT, 1964

More than 2,000 relatives and friends, many standing, packed the Centennial Gymnasium of the Bloomsburg State College for the graduation exercises at which Lt. Gov. Raymond P. Shafer gave the address and 279 were awarded degrees of Bachelor of Science in Education.

Dr. Harvey A. Andrus, president, awarded the degrees. The class was presented by Dean of Instruction John A. Hoch and those of the faculty presenting the candidates from the various divisions were Dr. S. Lloyd Touniey, business education; Dr. Royce O. Johnson, elementary; C. Stuart Edwards, secondary and Dr. Donald F. Maietta, special education.

Music was in charge of Nelson A. Miller and William K. Decker.

Immediately after the awarding of the degrees a member of the class, Thomas Delovich, Lopez, was commissioned a second lieutenant in the U. S. Marine Corps by Captain Frank Mitchell.

The address of Lt. Gov. Shafer follows:

'Torch of Responsibility'

"In ancient Greece the most exciting times to many were the great competitive games, testing the prowess of various citizens in a variety of athletic events. These spectacles, which came to be known as the Olympic Games, started only upon the arrival of a torch from Mt. Olympus, the flame of which was kept forever alive. One of the greatest honors a young man could have was the privilege of carrying this torch on a portion of its long journey.

"You who are graduating today have been given the privilege and honor of carrying forth another type of torch. And while the flame is different, the honor and responsibility are even greater. The fire is that of knowledge, of intellectual curiosity, of wisdom, kindled by thousands of men and women before your time, kept burning by thousands of educational institutions including most specifically your own Alma Mater, nurtured by your family, your friends, and by your own personal inner motivation.

"Today is one of the most significant moments in your entire lifetime, and I am privileged to have the opportunity to share it with you. Today marks the achievement of one of your goals, initiated for most of you less than four short years ago. While in one sense it is an ending in a larger sense it is a beginning, for you, who sit here today, on the brink of maturity, having been caught up in the excitement which comes with seeking knowledge. The sheepskin you receive should be more than just written evidence of the completion of your academic course—it should be a spur, a stimulus, an exhortation.

Life Series of Puzzles

"If you have discovered more about yourself and your potentialities and your role in the scheme of civilization, you must also have discovered that life is a series of puzzles, puzzles which seek solution.

"We all know that effort rides piggy-back on hope. The world is a complex puzzle of man's effort riding piggy-back on the hope that solutions are possible. People, politics, business, labor, space, industry, education each has its own set of complexities. The demands upon you as graduates in the year 1964, will be complex and varied and exacting. And they will increase rather than diminish.

"If I am to do more than just be a part of the ritual in today's events, I should like to suggest three things which might assist you as individuals in seeking solutions in meeting the challenge, in facing the future.

'Be Realistic, Unafraind'

"First, view the world about you realistically; second, don't be afraid to make decisions; and third, assume individual responsibility.

"Emerson once said, 'A man is measured by the angle at which he looks at things.'

"The comparative peace and tranquility of our own community should not blind us to the potential civil explosion festering the racial clashes in various parts of the United States. The super abundance of food and other material comforts we enjoy in our own country should not blot from our minds the fact that millions of other human beings in other parts of the world are ill clothed and ill fed. The personal freedoms of our way of life—Government with the consent of the governed—should not lull us in to any false sense of security, since more than half of the population of this globe lives under a totalitarian yoke, under a philosophy which believes and teaches that men need masters.

'Use Growth for Accuracy'

"You have been growing in knowledge. Use this growth to perceive accurately all facts. You will spend the rest of your life sorting the vital and useable from the fringe material.

"When the first American pioneers started the western movement they loaded the covered wagons to utmost capacity. Every inch of space was piled with trunks, chairs, bedsteads, and all the essentials of homemaking. As they slowly moved across the trails the hills became higher and higher. The pioneers knew it was necessary to sort their belongings and rethink the value of some of the items. All along the trails, we are told, there were chairs, tables and trunks which had been set out through the process of sorting, and when the end of the trail was reached, only the vital essentials were left in the wagons.

"You, too, are beginning such a trip. The experience of sorting is before you. Your collection of facts and knowledge will culminate in a mature philosophy of life. Discard those which you find are low or unimportant or unnecessary and cleave to those which will stimulate and ennoble you. Knowledge undergirds democracy to meet the challenges of today's world. Someone has said progress of the world actually begins with me: When my human relationships are dipped in kindness, when equality stretches from my front door around my community, then my design for human dignity includes the whole world.

'Don't Fear Decision'

"Second, don't be afraid to make decisions. Decision making is seldom easy. It has been difficult since the first time someone asked you, "Will it be chocolate or strawberry", through "Do you take this woman to be", and into "Which job shall I take" and "What shall I do with my life". Added years do not ease the demands of decisions. While it is true that in decision making, for as we mature we become more aware of the responsibility which follows decision.

"When you decided to attend college, you decided to live by the rules of this institution. When you registered in a particular course, you decided to pursue that subject diligently. To join a group or a committee is to decide to affirm the existence and action of such a group. Decisions confront each of you as you sit here today. I only wish I might be able to give you a formula whereby you would be guaranteed the right answer.

"Sometimes asking questions will help. Rotary International uses such a method and thousands of men around the world have found the following set of questions useful to them in their personal and business decisions: One, is it the truth? Two, is it fair to all concerned? Three, will it promote better understanding? Four, is it beneficial to all?

"'Non translatable' is a term we see in print on driver's licenses, voting cards and complimentary season tickets. It is also printed across our decision making. No one can do it for us.

"From the very beginning we have understood that man was created as the highest feature of God's creative act. That which we are thinking about at this very moment, man's ability to decide, to choose, is the distinguished feature which lifts man

Be Honest With Self

"Third, assume individual responsibility to be honest with yourself and to the abilities which you have been given.

"Some parts of our personality have been inherited and some times we acquire through living. But remember that deep within each of us lies a potential which no one but ourselves can touch.

"Communication is the by-word of our age. Educators, engineers, businessmen and churchmen all seek to communicate. America is wired together to make perfect communication facilities possible.

"In the years ahead there may be many obstacles to complete fulfillment of your potentialities. All the wiring may be right, the degree of knowledge may be indisputable, but communication may be lacking because values, motives and the maturity may be lacking. The responsibility for this will rest upon you and you alone. Assume this responsibility now.

Opportunity Is Greatest Gift

"The greatest gift that has been offered to you from your college has been to present you with a package of facilities and opportunities. Now that you have opened the package with the greatest care and deliberate intention you have seen that its priceless contents have emerged as training to think. Use that training. Realize that man is inadequate and that even though he has always been so and may always be so, he should continue his struggle for the meaning of life and for the adaptation to it.

"We realize that man has only nudged the elements, scratched the surface of fighting disease, and merely prodded human relationships. All the time, however, his drops of knowledge were trickling into greater oceans of the unknown. Yet little by little man has picked up pebbles on the beach and, even though he had no blueprint, he has built one civilization after another. All of this has been the achievement of individual human beings. Men who have thought and men who have acted. Bergson, the philosopher, when asked to send a message that would sum up his years of study of the human scene and give younger men some guide, wrote: "Think, as men of action; act, as men of thought."

"It was recently observed that if a painting on canvas seems beautiful at first glance, closer inspection reveals that it is a combination of light and dark colors, overlapping and recessive planes. When combined, these planes build up values that miraculously achieve great richness. Even such ordinary articles as baskets and bricks come alive through the mastery of the artist's touch.

"Perhaps no other figure in history suggests more light and dark, more depth and reflection than Abraham Lincoln. The winsome appeal of personality, his unrelenting optimism, his inflexibility of purpose are brushed together with stark personal tragedies and a full scale war.

"Through all the light and dark, through all the overlapping and recessive planes of his life, Abraham Lincoln maintained a sense of proportions, chose values that were abiding and developed a philosophy which shows through all his attitudes. The American canvas is infinitely more beautiful from the brief brush strokes of his life.

"Yes, Lincoln was a man who viewed the world realistically, who assumed individual responsibility, and who was not afraid to make decisions. All of us, inspired by this great man, and by doing the same things, may be able to add a few touches of beauty and richness to the moving mural, which is life."

FACULTY MEMBERS GET SUMMER STUDY GRANTS

Lee C. Hopple and David A. Superdock, two Bloomsburg State College faculty members, have received grants from the National Science Foundation for studies applicable towards their Doctor's degrees. In both instances, all expenses will be provided by the National Science Foundation.

Hopple was one of twenty college professors from nationwide applicants for the eight-week course in cartography to be held this Summer at the University of Washington, Seattle. The course, from June 29 thru August 21, will cover all phases of modern cartography, allowing ten graduate credits.

Hopple is a native of Pottsville and graduated from Kutztown State College prior to receiving his Master of Science degree in Geography from the Pennsylvania State University in 1960. The ten credits he will receive this summer, along with his previous graduate work at Penn State, will enable him to receive his doctorate the latter part of August. Hopple and his family plan to motor across the country to Seattle.

Assistant Professor Superdock, who has been a member of the BSC Physics Department for four years, received a Science Faculty Fellowship for studies towards his doctorate degree in Physics. He will study for three summers at the Pennsylvania State University. Selection was made on a competitive basis with approximately 2,000 applicants for 400 grants.

The Freeland native graduated from Bloomsburg State in 1954 and received his Master of Education degree from Penn State in 1960 under a previous fellowship grant from the National Science Foundation. He has also taken additional graduate work at Bucknell University.

90 SUMMER COURSES, WORKSHOPS, SEMINARS

A total of ninety courses will be offered by Bloomsburg State College at its three 1964 Summer Sessions, according to John A. Hoch, dean of instruction. Thirty-five courses will be offered during the pre-session from June 8 to June 26, 40 courses in the main session from June 29 to August 7, and 25 in the post session from August 10 to August 28.

The courses are in the fields of art, biology, business education, botany, chemistry, economics, education, English, foreign language, geography, history, mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, speech and speech correction, psychology, sociology and zoology.

In addition, the following workshops and seminars will be offered at the Main Session: Workshop will be in selected subjects in elementary education, in general and analytic chemistry, in organic chemistry, in newer methods of teaching the physical sciences, in speech and hearing problems, in problems and methods of special education and in summer theatre.

Seminar will be in new practices in elementary, health and physical education, and in the physical sciences.

All workshops carry six semester hours of credit with the exception of those in chemistry in which six to eight semester hours of credit may be earned.

The Summer sessions are open to students at Bloomsburg and other colleges and universities and to public school teachers. The College reserves the right to cancel any courses for which there is not sufficient registration. Students from other colleges must submit letters of course approval from the Deans or Registrars of their institutions.

Tuition fees are $12.50 per credit hour for Pennsylvania residents and $20 or out-of-state residents. Activity fees are $3 for the pre-sessions and post session and $6 for the main session.

Mrs. Germania Henriquez, technical elementary assistant in education in the Dominican Republic, arrived on the Bloomsburg State College campus Monday, April 13, for a three-week stay in conjunction with her ten-month internship program at Penn State University. This is part of the Latin American Education Program at Penn State which is an agency for international development.

BACCALAUREATE

The degree to which you succeed in life depends upon the quality of your faith, Dr. Luther H. Harshbarger, professor of religious studies, the Pennsylvania State University, told members of the graduating class of the Bloomsburg State College at baccalaureate services held in the Centennial Gymnasium. Around 1,400 attended.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, read the Scriptures. Donna Rothermel and Karen Leffler sang "In His Hands Are All the Corners of the Earth".

In his message on "The Years in our Days", Dr. Harshbarger said:

'Distillation of Experience'

"As graduating seniors, you stand now in a position to ask crucial questions for which you have been receiving answers for four years without having asked the questions. It may seem to you that you stand at the brink of a cruel world, looking back nostalgically at four years and dreaming of the future.

"If one reflects deeply enough, he may get an impression of his life that is far less of chronological sequence than of an imperfect palimpsest of experience upon which what is old has not been erased to make room for the new—rather the new appears thorough it; the old and the new taking color from each other, the child from the man, the man from the child, so that in certain moods we seem to carry in the cup of our hands the distillation of our total experience.

"Such can be the effect of a graduation. There one can see all life in its shining or mourning in those precious hours, where the past looks through them and is contained in them. The years are included in the day. In this moment, one can see how life is interwoven; how it becomes a mosaic of encounters and the events of our existence. Each event is meaningless if taken out of the picture and examined in isolation, but events together create a pattern. The years are in our days now.

'Moments of Decision'

"Such moments call for a decision, since life reaches a climax. Forces have long been preparing to meet at a point of ultimate significance and now the decision must be reached. In this moment of decision, we learn how the past informs the present and shapes the future, and our task is more that of a painter than a photographer in our effort to discern and single out and stress that which is of the essence of our own natures. Then it seems that like Moses, we stand at the brink of the Promised Land, always ineluctable and unattainable. In this moment, we stand in double danger; we may take refuge in nostalgia, hankering for things just because they are past and not because they are necessarily good. "If we cannot forget our past, we have a closed future. The days are in our years. Or secondly, we may engage in utopian dreams of the future trying to move faster, impatient to see what is ahead. Actually, we cannot escape into the past or dream of the future; we stand always under the judgment of the present; each moment fashions our destiny.

"Or we may see this moment as one of opportunity. As T. S. Eliot puts it, 'Time is our choice of how to live and why'. Here one deals with both the past and the future under the judgment of the present. Here we see ourselves as being on the way, each day challenged and questioned by the future, each day encountering new situations and new possibilities, between the cauldron of failure and budding promise', but whatever happens is eternally significant. In these moments, the boundaries of life are merged with the arises of eternal destiny. And we see ourselves not as accidents in cosmic history but as offsprings of the love of God.

"No matter what plans you have or the future, how great your intellectual abilities, your powers to organize, your abilities to handle others, the use to which you will put these things will depend ultimately upon the quality of your faith. If you and I are to register in the 20th Century it means that behind the brilliant brain and carefully trained mind, the normal exterior, laughter, and argument must be hard discipline. Charm, good manners, a college degree, aunerence to the general tenets of Judaism and Christianity will help us get by no doubt, but they will not begin to shape the mosaic of our years. But if we live as persons who know the meaning of life, the years are in our days."

FOLK SINGING GROUP

WINS ACCLAIM

The Parlor City Singers, a folk singing group which originated at Bloomsburg State College, has been winning acclaim throughout northeastern Pennsylvania performing for civic groups, benefits, business and professional organizations.

The talented group is comprised of Barbara Szymanek, Warminster; George Cunningham, Mahanoy City; Rick Skinner, Bloomsburg and John Kerlisch, Berwick.

The group is specializing in the field of popular folk music as that sung by the Kingston Trio and the Chad Michel Trio. They hope eventually to accumulate their own collection of authentic folk music—a venture which requires much time, patience and research. Meanwhile, they plan to work on their original arrangements and interpretation of popular folk songs and ballads.

ALUMNI DAY

Bloomsburg State College graduates, many accompanied by members of their families, started arriving in town late Friday afternoon and were on hand in goodly numbers Saturday for the various functions on the campus and around the community.

As usual the honor class of the festivities, 1914, "stole the show."

Members of the fifty-year class were guests of the general Alumni Association at a dinner in the College Commons at seven. Members of the classes of 1913 and 1915 were, in turn, guests of the fifty-year class.

Members of the class of 1909 and all graduates who hold the Alumni Association Distinguished Service Award were also invited to attend those enjoyed festivities at which Howard F. Fenstemaker, president of the general graduate body, presided.

Dr. Marguerite F. Kehr, dean of women at the Bloomsburg State College for a quarter century, and Howard F. Fenstemaker, retired member of the BSC faculty, and now the head of the graduate organization of the College, were presented with the Meritorious Service Awards by the Alumni Association.

The awards and the announcement that the graduate festivities next spring will be held the first weekend in May were highlights of the general meeting of the association in the College Commons on Saturday afternoon.

This was the second year in which the general alumni meeting and luncheon were combined, a change that was made possible as a result of the accommodations of the Commons.

Presentations

Dr. Kehr, who after her long period of outstanding service to the College has retained her interest in the local institution of learnings and in contact with hundreds of its graduates, recalled in her acceptance that she had accepted the local post on a temporary basis. That "temporary" period extended from 1928 to her retirement in 1954. Mrs. Verna Jones observed in the presentation, "Dr. Kehr has meant a great deal to all of the women with whom she came in contact during her wonderful service here."

Prof. Fenstemaker, thirty-seven years on the BSC faculty, received his award from Dr. Kimber C. Kuster, also a retired member of the faculty and the holder of a similar award.

Dr. Kuster referred to the alumna president as being a talented teacher and outstanding man "who was inspired thousands of his pupils who are now serving humanity all over the world."

Prof. Fenstemaker in his acceptance expressed his thanks, pointing out that it was the action of the board of directors who had insisted that he be the recipient although he had cast a negative vote.

Name Directors

The association elected directors for three years Howard F. Fenstemaker, 1912; Mrs. Elmer J. McKechnie, 1935; Earl Gehrig, 1937; Frank Furgle, 1962 and Glenn Oman, 1931.

The board at its reorganization renamed Fenstemaker, president; Charles H. Henrie, vice president; Mrs. McKechnie, secretary and Gehrig, treasurer.

$31,145 In Loans

Earl F. Gehrig, treasurer, reports that in the past year receipts for general operation were just four dollars less than the expenses, evidence of the "tight" budget. There is a general balance of $2,431.

There is now $31,145 out in loans to students. In the Mary McNinch Fund there is $136,715 and in the various other loan funds $38,159. The association during the year also granted some scholarships.

A number of the holders of the Meritorious Service Awards were present and recognized.

Role of Alumni

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, observed that the College is in a state of change and that the alumni will also have to change to meet needs and he was confident that they would.

He spoke of the growing appreciation of the role of the State Colleges and said the state must recognize that if we are to have colleges of superior stature then we must pay for such a program.

The president recalled that Bloomsburg once had a student body predominately feminine but that since 1937 there have been more men than women on the campus each year and there are now more engaged in other occupations than in teaching.

He spoke of the need for an active alumni and in regard to the support of the graduate body asserted the College expends for the alumni program more than the association does from its general treasury.

Dr. Andruss said "this institution is changing and we are asking the association to change with it and I believe that it will."

He said next year the Alumni Day festivities will be the first weekend in May, the change being made in the belief that the earlier date will attract more of the graduates. It was pointed out that many are teaching and that late May is exceptionally busy period for teachers.

The president spoke of federal loans to students in the amount of $300,000 being carried on the hill and said that with the mounting costs of education the demand for loans has increased. He noted teachers are now being recognized more and more for their worth and that with the salaries increased those who borrowed while in school are in a position to repay the loans after graduation according to the terms without too much if any difficulty.

Mame E. Morgan, Scranton, ninety-five, a member of the class of 1895, was the representative of the oldest class in attendance.

Many responded to roll call. Gen. Idwall Edwards, USAF retired, responded for the class of 1914, the honor class. The class of 1909 had twenty-two attending.

Carl Blose, Bethlehem, class of 1924, reported that this class had thirty-nine per cent of its living members back. There were seventy-three members in attendance plus more than a score of husbands, wives and guests.

BSC OFFERING IN-SERVICE FOR BIOLOGY TEACHERS

Through a $7,500 Grant from the National Science Foundation, the Bloomsburg State College will offer an In-Service Institute in Modern Biology for high school biology teachers living within commuting distance of the college. It will open with sessions from August 17 through August 28. Weekly Saturday morning meetings will be held through the fall and spring semesters of 1964 and 1965.

The main purpose of this institute is to give the biology teachers an opportunity to gain competency in the newer emphasis of modern biology and to acquaint them with the philosophies and techniques of BSC Biology.

Twenty participants will be selected from junior and senior high school teachers who are teaching biology or expect to teach biology in the near future. A preference will be given to those with two or more years minimum background in molecular, cellular and ecological levels of biology who want to become familiar with BSCS Biology; and who live within commuting distance of the campus. Financial assistance will include travel allowance, book allowance, and tuition and fees.

Lecturers for the various topics in modern biology will include members of the Bloomsburg State College biology staff, under the direction of Dr. Donald D. Raab, and a number of off-campus lecturers will be used from other colleges and schools. In addition to the classes and lectures, laboratories and field trips will be conducted.

Requests for application forms should be addressed to Dr. Donald D. Rabb, Director of In-Service Institute of Modern Biology, Bloomsburg State College, Bloomsburg.

BSC Observing 125th Anniversary

When the Bloomsburg State Teachers College alumni assembled at "the friendly college on the hill" back in 1939 to participate in the observance of the centennial of this institution of learning they had much to look back upon with pride, and a basis on which to build confidence for a bright future.

But there was little evidence at that time of the great changes and developments that were to come in the quarter century ahead. Few if any envisioned anything comparable to what has taken place and is in prospect.

The main features of the 125th anniversary observance are going to be presented in the fall, probably around homecoming.

Milestone for Andrus

This is anniversary time, too, for Dr. Harvey A. Andrus who has been at the helm of the college, now Bloomsburg State College, for over a quarter century—twenty-six years to be exact—and during the period when the expansion has been far greater than in the entire first century of its existence.

Curriculum

While the physical changes on the campus are the most noticed, the changes have been in the curriculum. It is a result of these that all other things have developed.

In the centennial year of '39 the college was offering four years of work leading to a Bachelor of Science Degree in elementary, secondary or business education. The College still offers degrees in these fields plus special education.

Now there are also offered at the College curriculums in the humanities, natural sciences and social sciences leading to the Bachelor of Arts Degree.

There is a program of graduate studies in elementary, business, special education and English. Application is pending for the graduate programs in social studies, including geography.

Campus Grows

In the quarter century the campus has been enlarged from 60 to 107 acres, principally through the acquiring of the land of the Bloomsburg Country Club which is to be the site of a junior college.

Buildings added to the main campus through construction or purchase have been Sutliff Hall, New North Hall, College Commons, addition to heating plant and the Dillon house. Two girls dormitories are being constructed and will be completed in the fall.

Budget Increases 9 Times

The College budget is nine times as large today as in 1939. Then it was $292,824, with the state paying $149,574 and the students $143,150. Now the total is $2,571,230, with the state paying $1,265,001 and the students $1,306,229.

Construction at the time of the centennial amounted to three-quarters of a million dollars and included Centennial Gym, Navy Hall and the improvement of the heating plant.

Today there is a $5,191,000 allocation for a major program which will include a new library, auditorium, another men's dorm to go up where Old North Hall is, an athletic field and the extension of utilities.

Personnel and Salaries

Wages are up eight times, from $207,489 to $1,700,248. The non-instructional personnel has increased from forty-four to 107; faculty members from forty-seven to 134.

Of the present faculty thirty-six, or thirty per cent, have doctorates and two-thirds holds masters' degrees.

Enrollment

Fifty counties of the Commonwealth are represented in the present student body of 2,132. In 1939 there were forty counties represented with the total enrollment 670.

The number graduated here this year is 279, three times the size of the class of '39, and the total to be graduated here this year, 470, is the highest in the history of the College.

Cost Comparison

Along with the broader curriculum and the larger student body there have been increases in costs.

Back in '39 when we were coming out of a depression and about to enter a world war the contingent fee was $36 for the year. Now the basic fee is $125 per semester. The housing fee was $126 per semester; now it is $306 for board, room and laundry. The activities fee has gone up from $10 to $25. Books and supplies have tripled from $20 to $60.

In centennial year business students paid six dollars extra and out of state students $105 additional. Now business students pay $12 extra, special education students $10 extra and out of state students $20 per semester hour of credit.

There were seventy men and 390 women living on campus in '39. Now there are 206 men and 452 women residing there today and this number will go up when two women's dorms will be opened.

The library has increased from 15,000 volumes in 1939 to 60,000 on campus today plus 25,000 on rental under arrangement to use facilities of the town library.

It has been an almost unbelievable quarter century of progress and development. And many of the Alumni who haven't been back for a time are going to spend most of their time wandering about and conversing on that theme so traditional with alumni functions, "Do you remember when?" It certainly is different now.

SUGGEST MORE ALUMNI BRANCHES

Suggestion has been made that branches of the Alumni Association should be developed in the following areas:

Long Island, Binghamton, Baltimore, Allentown, California and Detroit area.

The Alumni office will be glad to furnish lists of people living in these areas. Who will start the ball rolling?

IVY DAY

"In our constant striving to meet these new demands of our present society let us not be too hasty in our judgments of older society and institutions", Gerald Howard, Carbondale, 1963 president of the BSC Community Government Association, admonished in his oration at the traditional Ivy Day ceremonies as he posed the question, "Will we be the last BSC class to witness Ivy Day?"

Beware of False Concepts

In speaking to his senior classmates and other students of the college, he pointed out that our society is making tremendous demands on education—referring specifically to the space age education. He continued by stating that some false concepts have arisen out of the scramble for a better type of education and the fact that something is old doesn't necessarily mean it is to be discarded or thrown out. He cautioned everyone that we must examine our system of education as well as our individual sets of values before we make any rash judgments about anything.

Howard stated "Many of the finest concepts of education are as old as the hills of time, and yet we continue using them simply because we have not found any better method. The Constitution of the United States of America is 175 years old and yet we do not replace this just because of its age. To go just a bit further, our graduation exercises at this institution are quite old, and yet we do not replace them just because they are aged. Are these valid consulsions? I am not quite sure but they do definitely show that we must sit back and examine our morals and sets of individual values.

'What You Know Counts'

"Our society is placing more and more value on education. It is no longer whom you know that counts, as it was a few years ago. It has finally come to the point and rightly so, that it is what you know that counts. Perhaps we can learn something from the Ivy we plant here today."

"I am sure that you will agree that we could have picked a more impressive symbol as far as looks go. Ivy is small and its color is rather insignificant, but if given enough time it will grow and dominate the entire scene. If we were to let this ivy grow on this building and returned in twenty years it would have climbed up and expanded itself to dominate the building. Given enough time, it will eventually cover the entire building and become an entity to itself.

"There most definitely is something to be learned from this ceremony. If we as educators apply ourselves to our professions as the ivy applies itself to the building, we would assure our society of nothing but the best possible educational system in the world. In twenty years how many of us will dominate the scene of our careers? If we are given a sufficient length of time, do you feel that we will be masters of our fates? These questions can be answered only by time, and our individual will to succeed.

"We are engaged in a profession that is at the present at the crossroads of its future. Will it progress and prosper as it rightly should?

"It is up to us, you and me, to see that it progresses to meet the new demands that are placed on it. In our constant striving to meet these demands let us not be too hasty in our judgments of older society and institutions. Since we are the products of our ultra-modern society we are prone to be rash in our judgments of these entities. Let us never forget that someday our society and our institutions will be judged obsolete by our posterity."

BSC GRADUATE GIVES ADDRESS

The Eleventh Annual Spring Conference of the Pennsylvania Council for Geography Education was held at Kutztown State College, Kutztown, on Friday and Saturday, April 24-25.

Dr. Bruce E. Adams, head of the Department of Geography and Professor at Bloomsburg State College, is the first vice president of the Pennsylvania Council for Geography Education while John Enman, Professor of Geography at BSC, is on the board of directors. "Functional Geography and the Expanding Population" was the theme of the meeting.

Saturday's address was delivered by Dr. Henry J. Warman, at the second general session. Dr. Warman, of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., is a graduate of BSC and holder of the Alumni Award of Merit. He spoke on "The Pilot Study in Geography and Its Significance for the Secondary School Program."

WHEN YOU CHANGE YOUR ADDRESS

It costs us ten cents each time you fail to give us your change of address.

One at a time, these changes do not seem to be very much, but multiplied by thousands they make a large sum.

You can save us the expense by notifying the Alumni Office immediately when you change your address.

By so doing, you will assure yourself of receiving all publicity that is sent our from the College.

PRE-SESSION RECORD HIGH

Seven hundred eighty-one undergraduate students registered for the three-week summer school pre-session at Bloomsburg State College, John A. Hoch, dean of instruction, reported. Late registrations were expected to boost the total to approximately 800. This is an increase of almost 150 students more than the number who registered for the three-week session in June, 1963, and represents the largest pre-session enrollment in the history of the college.

Classes began for an estimated 130 graduate students on Thursday, June 18. Last year, there were 105 who registered in the graduate school for the pre-session.

Fifty-three members of the college faculty and administrative staff were on campus during the three weeks to provide instruction in the college classes and to work in the special education centre with clients enrolled in the speech and hearing program sponsored by the Bureau of Vocation Rehabilitation.

Four artists and lecturer were scheduled to present an outstanding Concert and Lecture Series during the Summer Sessions. The first program was presented on Wednesday, June 17, by the Newport Jazz All Stars. Other programs were presented by Tran Van Dinh, Washington Bureau Chief of the Saigon Post; Marshall Izen, pianist-humorist, and Drew Pearson, newspaper columnist who recently returned from his second exclusive interview with Premier Nikita Krushchev.

LEGISLATORS VISIT BLOOMSBURG STATE COLLEGE CAMPUS

Bloomsburg State College has more than twice as many applicants for admission as can be accommodated at the opening of the 1964-65 term, state senators and assemblymen from the service area of the school were told on a recent visit to the campus.

They had an opportunity to view some of the work at the College, including a visit to a session of the student government council, and see some of the building now underway.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president, and others of the administration outlined what they are working to accomplish and some of their problems.

The president said that more unity of action is needed by the fourteen State Colleges and suggested that this might be crystallized by having one individual in Harrisburg divorced from any particular school but working for the group. This would enable him to present the situation with respect to all of these schools and to marshal facts and figures that would set forth the problems in bold relief.

After visiting the student council meeting, viewing the campus and enjoying a social hour with faculty and students in the Husky Lounge, the legislators met in the Alumni Room with Dr. Andruss, trustees and heads of the various departments of the College.

Dean of Instruction John A. Hoch in presenting Dr. Andruss pointed out that this is the twenty-fifth year of his administration which he referred to as "the golden years at BSC." The lawmakers viewed models of the auditorium and library to be erected on the site of the present athletic field, and saw a drawing of a men's dormitory to be built on the site of the present North Hall, with work to start this year.

Dr. Andruss said that the plan established through 1970 is already outdated. That called for an enrollment of 4,000 and in the 1964-65 term there will be around 2,500. The student population will level off at that figure because there will be no accommodations for more until the building catches up with the demands for entrance.

With regard to the present objective of 100,000 books for the library, a question was raised by one of the guests if the cost of securing that many volumes at one time would not be prohibitive. It was explained that the project has been started and adding the books will continue for some time.

Paul Martin, fiscal director, spoke of the budget problems. He said that when BSC sends to Harrisburg the operating budget which it has fashioned it is always cut to some degree, with no reason given in most cases and with no opportunity for the College to state its side. As a result, he said, there is often a lack of classroom equipment and times when there is a period of several months before these supplies are provided.

C. Stuart Edwards, director of admissions, said the higher institutions of learning are now experiencing the population explosion of the years immediately following the close of World War II. This year there will be thirty per cent more graduating from high school, twenty per cent more seeking admission to college than a year ago.

This spring twenty-three per cent more applied for admission forms than in 1963 and there have been 1,700 completed applications. The College has facilities to admit only 800.

Edwards said that this pressure for admission is going to increase annually through next four to five years. Among the reasons are that private schools are not expanding their physical plants and are increasing costs, especially tuition.

Dean Elton Hunsinger reported that BSC has steadily increased the percentage of its graduates in Pennsylvania. Of the class graduating this year, there will be fourteen per cent less leaving Pennsylvania to teach elsewhere than in '63.

Dr. Andruss explained that many of the students come from the anthracite areas where population is dropping and teaching positions are decreasing.

As a result, the College has established teacher training centers in Bucks, Delaware and Montgomery Counties and since this was done it has been placing an increasing number of its graduates in those sections.

The educator said the problems facing the State Colleges as presented in the discussion are serious and they must be faced now and corrected if these institutions are to hold their rightful place in education.

The lawmakers were guests at dinner in College Commons at which time they were presented to the student body.

GRADUATES OF BSC ELIGIBLE FOR AAUW

Women graduates of Bloomsburg State Teachers College and Bloomsburg State College are now eligible to become members of the American Association of University Women, according to an announcement by Harvey A. Andruss, president of BSC.

The College, as of May 22, was officially placed on the qualified list of the AAUW. It is now eligible for corporate membership and will receive in September a letter from the general director of the Association describing the purpose and benefits of such membership and inviting the local college to become a corporate member of this international organization for college women.

Colleges and universities must meet special requirements in order for graduates to become members of the American Association of University Women.

GSA GRANT FOR COLLEGE

The General State Authority in Harrisburg allocated $60,725 for planning and designing a science classroom building at Bloomsburg State College as part of an extensive building program during the 1965-67 biennium.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, college president, said the building, expected to follow the architectural pattern of Sutliff Hall, will be erected on a portion of the present athletic field which will also be the site of an auditorium and library.

RECEIVED TWO COPIES?

Our attention has been called to the fact that several copies of the April issue of the Alumni Quarterly were delivered to the same address. In one instance, it happened that both husband and wife are Alumni, and that one of the members has graduated in the old two-year course and latter received her degree.

All mail sent to all graduates of BSC is addressed on a machine. The plates are separated according to the year of graduation. When letters are sent to the members of a separate class, the same plates are used. One who has graduated twice from BSC will have two class reunions, and should be notified both occasions. It is therefore necessary that the address plates be kept intact.

If you are one of those who receive more than one copy of the Quarterly, you can help publicize BSC by giving the extra copy to someone who might be interested in coming to Bloomsburg. You might also place a copy in your town library or in your high school library.

DANVILLE NATIVE IS AUTHOR OF NOVEL

A novel "To String the Child," written by Robert Baylor, Danville native, went on sale at bookstores throughout the nation in April.

Baylor draws upon his experiences in the Danville-Montour County areas and later service in the U. S. Navy during World War II for material in the novel.

The author is an alumnus of Danville High School and Bloomsburg State College. He is a teacher of English literature and journalism in Mt. San Antonio College, Walnut, Cal.

The novel is dedicated to his wife, the former Mary Shultz, also a native of Danville. His mother, Mrs. Bertha Baylor lives in Riverside.

CLASS REUNIONS

CLASS OF 1909

There was a remarkably fine attendance by the class of 1909, largely through the efforts of Fred W. Diehl, retired superintendent of the Montour County Schools, long a trustee at BSC and a former president of the alumni.

The educator sent his classmates notice of the forthcoming reunion at Christmas time and again at the Easter season and over the weekend there were twenty-two of the fifty-five year class on hand. Their program started with a dinner at the College Commons and continued busy through the following day.

Attending: Walter Welliver, Harold Moyer, Bloomsburg; Marjorie Ress Penman, Kate Seasholtz Morris, of Philadelphia; Bertha Welsh Conner, Jessie Fleckenstine Herring, Orangeville; Martha H. Black, Evanston, Ill.; Bess Hinckley, Riverside; Harriet Toland, Fred W. Diehl, Danville; Mary Hughes Lake, Carbondale; Lloyd T. Krum, Flemington, N. J.; Enola Fairchild, Nanticoke; Elizabeth Fagan, Bristol; Mary Edwards Shuman, Kingston; Anna Kuscke, Scranton; Kathleen Major Brown, Lehman; John Klingerman, Mainville and guests, Mrs. Walter Welliver, Miss Marjorie Penman, Miss Kathryn Morris, Clair Conner, Mrs. Fred W. Diehl and Mrs. Lloyd T. Krum.

Honor class of the reunion was 1914 and the members were entertained at a dinner in College Commons and kept on the double quick reviving memories of the school days and touring the campus.

The class secured for the Saturday festivities the Central Joint High School band, Roy Troy, directing. This unit presented a special half hour concert from 11:30 to noon on the court house plaza of favorite tunes of the twenties' that was thoroughly enjoyed.

The band then headed the class in a parade on Main street to the Commons for the general alumni luncheon and program. Peter Sincavage, Sugar Notch, was the sign bearer in the procession which paused at the main entrance to the College for a class picture taken in front of Carver Hall.

President Fenstemaker of the alumni encouraged the class to support the alumni fund and to otherwise aid in the advancement of the college.

Dr. Kreitzer, regional coordinator of education at Dallas, Texas, stressed that college education in our generation is what a high school education was in the past. He pictured this era as one of radical change—describing it as a great wave as significant at the Civil War—that we must accept and then accomplish our job of guiding and to controlling it through education.

Messages were read from members throughout the United States who were unable to attend. Plans were made for the thirty-fifth year reunion.

Harriet Kocher is the manager of a new Howard Johnson motel opening up in the Washington, D. C., area. She reports that there will be free coffee and doughnuts there for all members of the class of 1939.

AVE ATQUE VALE

(Goodbye and Farewell)

TO ONE with whom we labored, under whom we studied, and or whom we cared;

TO ONE who acknowledged what God gave to her and did something with it;

TO ONE who gathered from the storehouse of knowledge and put handles upon it so others could use it;

TO ONE who pursued the letter of the law. At times we didn't always understand, but of this we could be sure: she would not veer from her course;

TO ONE who was loyal to the Institution that invited her to teach. The classroom was her throneroom; her students were her subjects;

TO ONE who had a passion for scholarship, and sought to make contagious the "joy of study" in others;

TO ONE who was rigid in discipline without losing the respect of her students;

TO ONE who cared for students not only during years when they paid tuition fees, but followed them with deep concern wheresoever they moved from the campus paths;

TO ONE about whom one of her majors so recently said: "While helping us to find a philosophy of history, she kept before us a need for faith in the Divine;"

TO ONE who so often expressed the hungers of her heart as she hummed and sang the great hymns of the Church in her office. I shall never forget one that was built around that eternal question that each of us must always be asking: "Will there be any stars in my crown?"

TO ONE who passed through the Valley of Shadows in ways we shall never fully understand. Only can we trust in Him who knows;

TO ONE for whom, O Lord, we seek Thy favor now and always, and may she hear from Thy lips as well as from ours: "Well done, good and faithful servant;"

O MAUD PEET LAUGHLIN

Because you lived, we have learned; Now that you have left us, we carry on.

Ave atque Vale! Goodbye and Farewell!

PENNA. STATE COLLEGES SWIMMING MEET

West Chester State continued its domination of the Pennsylvania State Colleges swimming meet as it won the event, held at Slippery Rock for the fifth straight year.

The Rams garnered an even 100 points, far surpassing their nearest competitors. East Stroudsburg just nosed past the host Rockets, for second place. The Warriors picked up 63 1-2 points to Slippery Rock's 61 1-2.

Lock Haven was fourth with 39, Millersville had 14 and Bloomsburg with 10 was sixth. Cheyney, which entered only 2 swimmers did not register any points.

Bloomsburg picked up the bulk of its points in the relay events. In both the 400-yard medley and 400-yard free-style they finished fifth to pick up a medal and four points.

HOUK NAMED FOOTBALL COACH

Russ Houk, well-known wrestling coach at Bloomsburg State College, has been appointed head football coach of the Huskies, according to an announcement by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the college.

Houk, who also serves as athletic director, succeeds Walt Blair, who directed Husky gridiron fortunes since 1957. President Andruss also pointed out that Houk would continue to coach the Husky matmen.

Coach Houk, who was named N.A.I.A. Wrestling "Coach of the Year" in 1962 and 1963, is one of the nation's top grappling mentors. Bloomsburg matmen have won five wrestling titles in the Pennsylvania State Colleges Athletic Conference and two national titles in N.A.I.A. competition (1960 and 1962.)

His dual meet record of 68 wins and seven losses during his seven years as head coach of Bloomsburg State College wrestlers is among the finest in the nation. He has produced 23 Pennsylvania State College individual champions and eight N.A.I.A. champions.

The new Husky grid coach is not a stranger to football. He was an outstanding lineman at Lock Haven State College under Coach Hubert Jack, also one of the nation's best-known and most successful mat teachers. Houk coached high school football at South Williamsport and Muncy before making a decision to devote all of his time to coaching wrestling. He tutored outstanding high school wrestling teams at South Williamsport and Muncy before moving to Bloomsburg in 1957. He served as assistant football coach at BSC from 1957 to 1961.

In making the announcement that Houk would take over the head football coaching chores, President Andruss stated that a decision had not yet been reached as to who would comprise the rest of the coaching staff. However, the new coach will have to review and study the varsity and freshman programs before making recommendations for assignments of assistants to aid him in rebuilding Husky grid fortunes.

Last season's Maron and Gold footballers picked up three victories in eight outings, although they managed a 14-7 win over East Stroudsburg in the season finale to salvage a little glory from an otherwise disappointing campaign.

A product of Lincoln High School in Ellwood City, Coach Houk attended Duke University and learned his first intercollegiate football lessons under one of the country's outstanding grid teachers, Wallace Wade, but he transferred to Lock Haven State College and won varsity letters in football, wrestling, and track. He holds the degree of Master of Science Education from Bucknell University, and has completed additional graduate study

Donald F. Ikeler, Bloomsburg native and for forty years co-publisher, president and general manager of The Evening Star, Peekskill, Pa., has retired and the interest of Mr. and Mrs. Ikeler in the publication has been taken over by Mr. and Mrs. E. Joe Albertson and sons, J. Donald Albertson and Larrabee Albertson.

The editor emeritus is the brother of Miss Atta Albertson, East Third street, and Mrs. E. M. Oman, Market street.

The Star carried this article, written by Dorothy Krumeich, on Ikeler's retirement from his outstanding career as a publisher:

Donald F. Ikeler, whose retirement as general manager of this newspaper was announced today, is a co-founder of the publication and has served as president of the Peekskill Star Corporation for nearly 40 years of its existence.

With E. Joe Albertson, long-time editor, he came here in 1924 and the two purchased The Evening Star which then had a circulation of 1,500.

In the interim, the staff has grown from the original handful (about 8) in the old headquarters at 988 Main Street to a total of 52 employees.

The retiring official was honored by the new management at a farewell party before he left his desk at which he has solved myraids of Star business problems over the years.

His retirement plans? "None, as of now," Mr. Ikeler says—except for a vacation in Florida in the near future.

"I have hundreds of things I have to do; much catching-up on things I'd like to do," is his general summing up of plans for the future.

It is certain, however, that he will continue the active participation in community organizations that he assumed with his newspaper duties.

Since forty years come September, when the new Evening Star masthead first appeared, Mr. Ikeler has held membership in the Peekskill Rotary Club and the Cortland Hook and Ladder Company. He has served as president and has held many other important posts in both organizations. In the lodge field, he is a life member of the Masons. He is on the Board of Trustees of the Peekskill Military Academy, and has been a director in the First Federal Savings and Loan Association for a quarter century, from the time it was a small upstairs office in the Sutton Building and known as the People's Savings and Loan Association.

Ikeler was a member of the committee which compiled the first City of Peekskill charter, when the community changed its village status almost twenty-five years ago.

A veteran of service in World War I, he was active during the Second World War in Operation Skywatch, which manned airplane observation towers here during the tense years.

Ikeler's entry into newspapering came about almost inadvertently.

He was educated to teach, on the college level, and did before he entered the Army in 1917.

While in the service, his hometown Bloomsburg (Pennsylvania) The Morning Press suggested that he write a column on the doings of service men, which he did for five months before entering Officers' Training School at Camp Meade, Maryland.

He was discharged with the rank of first lieutenant in January, 1919. It was a poor time (mid-term) for openings for teachers and he accepted an offer from the "Gettysburg Times" to become its editor, an association which he continued for five years.

It takes about that length of time for "printers' ink" to get into the blood; but usually longer for a newspaperman to start looking for a paper of his own.

Ikeler started such a search, and one of the prospects was the old "Star", started by the late Richard E. Coon in 1922, with equipment that had been used to print another local newspaper, "The Evening News" which had suspended publication.

Ikeler and Albertson, also a teacher who had completed sixteen years in high-level school administration in the Philippines, and later in Peru, took over Coon's paper in September, 1924.

Both Ikeler and Albertson came from Bloomsburg, where both graduated from the then Normal School. Ikeler went on to Gettysburg College and received a bachelor of arts degree in 1915.

He was an instructor in English for a year at St. Olaf's College, Northfield, Minn.; the following year taught freshman English at his Alma Mater college—then went into the Army.

"Star" promotion, with Ikeler in charge from the business end, has never been flamboyant.

"The basic policy has been to publish the best possible newspaper," he says. But sponsorship has been given in former years to Soap Box Derbies and marble playing tournament for youngsters, and to a baseball team for men. Ikeler helped manage the diamond nine.

The Ikeler's have lived at 147 Hudson Avenue for almost 39 years of their years here. Mrs. Ikeler is the former Miss Carrie Stout, from Stroudsburg, Pa.

First of all this letter is being written not from Tokyo but from a little town in Malaysia called Port Dickson. If you look at a map of Asia you can find this town about 50 miles south of Kuala Lumpur, 30 miles north of Mallacca and 21 miles across the water from Indonesia. It seems that about three weeks ago in Japan I was invited to serve as a consultant for a seminar in Malaysia entitled "Education in Asia." It is supported by the Quakers. It was quite unexpected and I hastily jumped at the chance. On May 3rd I took off for Hong Kong, Bangkok, Penang, Kulala Lumpur and Port Dickson.

Ten days of our three week conference have gone by and this meeting has been one of the most valuable experiences for me in the Orient. Forty people are here representing India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Thailand, Vietnam, Malaysia and the Philippines. Each day two consultants give lectures along with a discussion in small groups. Through this way I am able to get an unusual amount of information and keen insight into the problems and developments of education in Asia from those who are a part of it. As an example a Pakistani girl yesterday gave a report on the problems of women's education in Muslim Pakistan where the girl traditionally is secluded. A man from Ceylon described the current effects on education as a result of colonialism.

We are somewhat isolated at a very nice Methodist Rest Center, 10 miles from Port Dickson. The ocean is about 50 feet from my room. The temperatures hover around 90 degrees but the ocean breeze keeps us surprisingly comfortable. The daily schedule includes an afternoon swim and we then go at it in the evening again with talks about each country. I have presented two lectures so far concerning Japanese education and its role in developing Asian education, and trends in educational development throughout the World. I'm supplementing the lectures and discussions with a series of interviews with various headmasters from each country. All in all, from a professional point of view, it is a relaxing but very busy ideal opportunity to bring myself up to date on Asian education. I have not been down in this area since my 1961 and 62 tours.

The Quakers support these seminars in Asia each year to develop international understanding. I must say that in this small way with 40 people, it is quite successful. For example, yesterday on our way home from visiting a rubber plantation, a very friendly Indian boy sat on the bus next to a Thai girl and struck up a conversation. Very slowly the girl revealed that in Thailand parents threaten their children that if they don't behave they'll get an Indian after them. It seems therefore that this girl has never spoken to an Indian before yesterday because she was afraid of them. It has been noticeable that the Thais have been staying away from the Indians, so the Indians have quietly been asked to consider ways to break this down.

Another incident has been the friendly relations between the Muslim Pakistanians and the Hindu Indians. One girl said she had never before had an opportunity to meet freely with Hindus and explained that in these few days her hatred of the Hindu Indian had undergone an emotional change. This idea of bringing people together in a relaxed mood for a fairly long time has great possibilities. Our evening recreation periods are thoroughly enjoyed by the Buddhist Thais, the Philippine Christians, the Hindu Indians, the Pakistan and Malaysia Muslims, The Ceylonese Buddhists, and the Malaysian Chinese Buddhists. And then there's me. I do offer the Quakers my deepest admiration for this program and the opportunity it has provided me.

Through the contacts made here, after the conference ends next week I will spend a little time at the University of Malaya, then on back to Bangkok to visit UNESCO, take a quick trip 400 miles up to north Thailand to Chiangmai by a 14 hour bus ride, back to Bangkok, and on to Hong Kong, maybe a day's stopover in Manila and on back to Tokyo. Friends from the seminar are making all kinds of arrangements for each other to stay over in their cities. For example, I'm staying at a student center in Bangkok for fifty cents a night while the regular hotels are terribly expensive there. The same price goes in Chiangmai. These contacts are invaluable. I will reciprocate in Tokyo.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

When BSC graduates receive their copies of the Quarterly, it is a common practice to turn immediately to the Alumni News to see if there are any items concerning members of their class. Many times they have been disappointed.

During the past year, we have made an effort to see that as many classes as possible are covered. In many cases, we are obliged to say merely that "so-and-so lives at such-and-such a place." Such items are usually of interest to members of your class, but your classmates would like to know more.

How do you happen to be living where you are living? What are you doing there? What is your husband's (or your wife's) occupation? If you are married, what is your husband's (or your wife's) name? Are there any children? How old are they? What are their names? Have you done any graduate work? Where?

When you receive the yellow sheet that says your subscription has expired, you will note that there is a blank space for NEWS. If the space is not large enough, there is plenty of room on the back of the sheet.

Publication of such information will often lead to correspondence with other Alumni, which in turn will strengthen old friendships and perhaps establish new ones.

This will, in an indirect way, benefit the Alumni Association and the College. It will give you a greater desire to come back to the campus, and also to participate in the Alumni Branch in your area.

Alumni Day has come and gone. Favored with excellent weather, it was a very pleasant affair. The attendance was good, but it should have been better. Every one seemed to be enjoying himself.

There were some aspects, however, that were disheartening to your officers. Only 77 graduates signed for membership at the Alumni desk. The class of 1924, however, proved to be a brilliant exception. Through the efforts of Edward Schuyler, 43 additional memberships were added from that class alone.

In the twenty-five years that have elapsed since the Centennial in 1939, the enrollment at the College has more than tripled. This is not the case with the Alumni Association. The present membership of the Alumni Association is less than one-fifth of the number of living graduates.

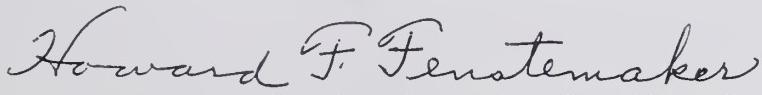

This is probably due to a pattern that has prevailed for a long time. The great majority of Alumni who attend their class reunions every five years take out their membership for one year, and then forget about it until reunion time comes around again. Thus, there is a turnover of more than eighty percent in the membership every year.

Another disheartening feature of this year's Alumni Day was the fact that many Alumni attended class reunions off campus and never came to the campus at all. This is difficult to understand. At one of the class reunions held Saturday night, less than one-fourth had attended the Alumni meeting.

The Quarterly is financed entirely out of dues. The treasurer's report showed that expenses were four dollars over the income, which shows how tight the operating budget is. All funds designated for loans and scholarships must be used for those purposes only; we cannot draw from those funds to defray operating expenses.

There is an enormous amount of work to be done to run our Alumni Association. The officers of the Association, who serve without compensation, can hardly be expected to devote the time necessary for this work to be done. Clerical help has to be hired, and this adds to the operational expense.

This year marks the 125th anniversary of the College. It is hoped that a great number of Alumni will assume the responsibility of helping to aid the growth of the Association. We appeal to the members of the Association to maintain their membership year after year. This year, we also ask that you induce as many of your Alumni friends and classmates to join the Association. If you wish further information concerning procedure, please write to the Alumni office.

ATTENTION, ALUMNI!

Historians and statisticians, concerned with higher education, have had a field day during the past twenty years recording and analyzing the record number of high school graduates who have poured into the colleges and universities of our nation.

On the other hand, administrators of these colleges and universities have been and are still beset with the problems of providing classrooms, dormitories, equipment, qualified faculty, and library facilities to accommodate these surges in enrollment.

Time, money, and careful planning have been prime factors in the task of providing opportunities for all the qualified applicants who desire a college education. These factors are particularly critical in sustaining a four-year undergraduate program as well as graduate programs leading to the Master's degree.

To help meet the need for adequate funds, both private and public institutions of higher education, have of necessity turned to alumni and friends for financial support. It is interesting and encouraging to note that loyal alumni, at one of our sister institutions, have contributed $10,000 each year, for the past three years, to help their alma mater meet needs for which State appropriations are not available.

Your alma mater is proud of the large number of its graduates who have sent their children, grandchildren, nieces and nephews to Bloomsburg to complete their undergraduate studies. It is also gratifying to note the number of alumni who are returning to the campus to earn the Master's degree.

Your alumni association has pledged its support to the college to purchase library books and to provide scholarships and loans. Will you help us to serve you and members of your family?

Your contribution, large or small, will help maintain the highest standards at Bloomsburg.

ACHIEVEMENT OF ALUMNI

"By a small sample we may judge the whole pieee" — Cervantes

Where do we find ourselves when we wake up and find ourselves on a stair? There are stairs below us which we have ascended. There are stairs above us, which seem to go upward and out of sight.

Certainly Emerson, in writing these lines as an introduction to his "Essay on Experience," did not expect them to apply to twenty-five years spent as President of a small college which has grown larger.

Pausing to survey the steps which have been taken before proceeding higher, one bold fact emerges. The achievement of our Alumni is the greatest evidence of development and growth of our College.

The shadows cast by our Alumni of the last quarter century is heartening to many through the land and among them

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss Completes 25th Year As President Bloomsburg State College

This year marks an important milestone not only in the history of Bloomsburg State College but in the life of Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, who completes his twenty-fifth year as President.

Dr. Andruss became acting head of the institution Tuesday, August 29, 1939, at the age of thirty-seven and has remained in that post, consecutively, for a longer period than any of his predecessors. He succeeded Dr. Francis B. Haas, who had resigned to become Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The many problems which beset administration in general and higher education in particular a quarter century ago were not unknown to the young president. Dr. Andruss had been a public school administrator at the age of nineteen; in the years that led to 1939, he had served as a university instructor, college department head, and dean of instruction. A graduate of The University of Oklahoma, he earned the Master of Business Administration degree at Northwestern University, and the Doctor of Education degree at The Pennsylvania State University.

A crystal ball might have helped one to forecast some of the events and problems of the next quarter century. But the matter of charting a constructive course of action was going to require more than mere crystal gazing could supply.

From the time he came to Bloomsburg in 1930 to establish and head the Department of Business Education, Dr. Andruss had worked closely with Dr. Haas. Both men had sought for solutions to the problems suffered by institutions of higher education when the "Great Depression" began to affect every phase of American life. They were aware of the suggestion, made by some, that a number of Pennsylvania's fourteen State Teachers Colleges be closed for the sake of economy.

When the national government took steps to mobilize the nation's resources and revitalize the economy, aid was made available to state and local governments for the construction of certain public buildings. Toward the end of Dr. Haas' tenure, three buildings and addition to the heating plant had been completed at a cost of $750,000 through the joint efforts of the Federal government and The General State Authority.

The substantial completion of these buildings were evident during the Centennial Celebration in May, 1939. At a later time, the Centennial Gymnasium was dedicated with Dr. Francis B. Haas and Governor Arthur James as speakers. This was the first time since 1869, when Governor John Geary helped dedicate the building that preceded the present Waller Hall, that a chief executive of the Commonwealth had come to the Bloomsburg campus.

One of the most pressing problems, calling for decisive action on the part of President Andruss and the Trustees in the Fall of 1939, was to find a way to get adequate funds to equip, open, and operate the three new buildings—Centennial Gym, the Junior High School (now Navy Hall) and the Maintenance building.

In less than two years, the international crisis became more acute when Hitler's mechanized legions sliced into Poland. The world prepared for the grim realities of a hot war.

The plight of higher education was described in a report "Five Years are Finished, 1940-1945. What of the Future?" From part of an article written by Benjamin Fine regarding the effects of war on 17 typical Liberal Arts Colleges, Dr. Andruss noted that "Enrollment of civilian students has decreased to about 15 per cent of normal, the faculty has been depleted, course offerings have been slashed, extra-curricular activities have been reduced or abandoned, many colleges are operating at a financial loss, and buildings, plants and equipment have deteriorated and need repair."

The forward-looking policies of the Board of Trustees and the college administration have been summed up in these words, "During the four-year period of War Programs, the college taught 1,000 people to fly, had 500 Navy Officer Candidates, housed 2,000 students for Engineering, Science and Management War Trainees, and offered courses to nurses from the Bloomsburg Hospital. This enabled the college to offer employment to the faculty, maintain the college plant in times when material was available only on priority, make a substantial contribution to the war effort, and develop the Aviation Program.

From 1940-1955, more than $2,000,000 was spent for construction, major repairs, and the purchase of equipment and machinery. But the greatest boom in building has occurred in the past decade. The College Commons, New North Hall, Sutliff Hall, East and West Dormitories were completed; the Library was moved to the site of the former dining room; allocation of funds were approved for a new Library Building, a new Auditorium, and New North Hall; the capacity of the Heating Plant was doubled.

In 1940, there were 718 regular students enrolled at the college. This grew to 2,176 during the past year. The number of full-time faculty has increased from forty to 150.

In the past twenty-five years, one can also find significant changes in the program of instruction. The number of curriculum divisions was increased from three to four (Special Education was added); an Arts and Science program was initiated, leading to the bachelor's degree; a graduate program, leading to the Master of Education degree, was developed and approved in the areas of Elementary, Business, Special and Secondary Education.

If the past is but a prologue to the future, students and alumni can look forward to more changes and growth as they join in celebrating the 125th anniversary of their Alma Mater and the 25th year of Dr. Andruss' tenure as President.

HOME-COMING DAY

Although the attendance at the events of Home-Coming Day was somewhat reduced by the rainy weather in the morning, the day was a very successful one.

Registration of Alumni began at 8:30, and the new women's dormitories, East Hall and West Hall, were open for inspection until 10:30. At 10:30, appropriate dedication ceremonies were held in Carver Auditorium.

Luncheon was served in the College Commons at 11:30, and following the luncheon, the Home-Coming Parade got under way. This was perhaps the largest Home-Coming Parade in the history of the College. Inasmuch as the Bloomsburg High School was celebrating their Home-Coming on the same day, the two institutions cooperated to make a very colorful display. In the parade were the Millersville Band and the guest bands of Central, Bloomsburg, Ashland, Millville, Benton, and Danville.

These bands combined between the halves of the football game for a mass feature that was thoroughly enjoyed.

Buoyed by the return of the Alumni, the Bloomsburg Huskies put on their best display of gridiron pyrotechnics of the season, and made the day complete with a 20-6 triumph over the Marauders of Millersville. The victory, coming after four successive defeats, served to complete the success of the day.

The annual get-together was held in Centennial Gymnasium after the game, and was largely attended. Alumni enjoyed themselves to the utmost, greeting their old acquaintances.

The day closed with a dance in Centennial Gymnasium, with Lee Vincent's orchestra providing the music.

125th Anniversary Convocation

An outstanding event of Anniversary Week was the convocation held in Centennial Gymnasium Thursday afternoon, October 15.

The convocation staged in connection with the double anniversary was one of the most impressive ceremonials ever held on the campus of the College. Educators, public officers, and present and former trustees of the College were present as honored guests, and occupied seats in the front of the gymnasium.

The events of the day were begun with registration and a coffee hour in the lobby of New North Hall. This was followed by a luncheon in the College Commons.

An academic procession consisted of the faculty, delegates from twenty-four colleges, and the members of the Class of 1965, all in academic costume. The great variety of colors on the hoods presented a striking picture as the procession made its way up Second Street in the sunshine of a beautiful autumn day.

William Decker, of the Music Department, was at the organ and played the Processional March, March and Cebell (Suite in C, by Purcell). The Invocation was given by Gustave W. Weber, President of Susequehanna University.

President Andruss introduced the platform guests, and greeted the guests in the audience. Mr. William A. Lank, President of the Board of Trustees, then presented the Honorable William W. Scranton, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Governor Scranton, an ardent supporter of education in Pennsylvania then noted that there are now eight projects on the drawing board for Bloomsburg State College which will cost an estimated $9.5 millions. Governor Scranton declared "Every Pennsylvanian can look with pride on what this day is for this institution of learning."

The chief executive pointed out that the major part of Pennsylvania's annual budget is used for education, and said that colleges should enable every young person to receive as much education as his ability permits.

The Governor challenged the students to do something with their education. "To do this," he said, "you must make up your minds and then go on to the fulfillment of your plans. We have made progress in almost every phase of life, except in the field of human relations and the science of government. It is up to you to take us into the world of the future with all its dangers and frustrations. But it can be a world of human brotherhood and truth if we want it so and make it so."

Following the Governor's address, the College Choraleers sang "Choose Something Like a Star," text by Robert Frost and music by Randall Thompson. The chorus was under the direction of William K. Decker.

Mr. Lank then presented His Excellency Sivert A. Nielsen, Norwegian Ambassador to the United Nations, who spoke on the topic, "Education—A Bulwark of Peace and Democracy." He said that education is one of the most effective tools that can be employed to aid in developing countries to make a choice of government. Only when ignorance, prejudice, and social injustice have been removed, will democracy and peace have a chance to prevail."

Following the singing of the Alma Mater, the benediction was given by the Reverend Lane D. Kilburn, President of King's College.

As a recessional, Mr. Decker played "The Heavens Declare," Marcello.

John A. Hoch, Dean of Instruction, was the Marshal of the Procession and bearer of the College Mace.

PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION

The first event marking the 125th Anniversary of the College and the 25th year as President took place in Centennial Gymnasium Wednesday evening, October 14, was the President's reception and ball. A large crowd of student and faculty members met President and Mrs. Andruss as they passed down the reception line, which consisted of President and Mrs. Andruss and the various Deans of the College. The gymnasium was attractively decorated for the affair. Les and Larry Elgart's orchestra provided music for dancing.

TWO BUILDINGS DEDICATED

Appropriate dedication ceremonies dedicating the two new women's dormitories, East Hall and West Hall, were held in Carver Auditorium on Home-Coming Day, Saturday, October 17.

The Master of Ceremonies on this occasion was Mr. John A. Hoch, Dean of Instruction. The invocation was given by the Reverend Robert C. Angus, Pastor of the Bloomsburg Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Mary Decker, of the Department of Music, sang "God Is My Shepherd," by Dvorak. Mrs. Lois Sturgeon was at the console.

Dean Hoch presented Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, who spoke briefly, commenting that this was the first time that a women's dormitory was opened on the campus in seventy years. This makes it possible for the first time in years to have a majority of the students living on campus.

Dr. George Hoffman, acting Superintendent of Public Instruction, congratulated all present for the high standards being maintained at Bloomsburg. He also congratulated Dr. Andruss on the completion of twenty-five years as President of the College.

The principal address of the morning was given by Mr. A. J. Caruso, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania General State Authority, who revealed that planning for the construction of three new men's dormitories.

Mr. Caruso then presented a symbolic key to new buildings to Mr. William A. Lank, President of the Board of Trustees.

Remarks were made by Miss Ellamae Jackson, Dean of Women and by Miss Jean Zenke, President of the Association of Resident Women.

The audience joined in the singing of the Alma Mater, led by Mr. William Decker, and the Rev. Mr. Robert C. Angus pronounced the benediction.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER

A testimonial dinner in honor of President Andruss, on the occasion of his twenty-fifth year as President of the College was held in the College Commons Thursday evening, October 15, 1964. The event was sponsored by the Faculty Association.

Members of the Board of Trustees, the officers of the Alumni Association were invited guests.

Before the dinner, Mr. Gerald H. Strauss, President of the Faculty Association, welcomed the guests, and Mr. John S. Scrimgeour, Chairman of the 125th Anniversary Committee, gave the invocation.

In the program that followed the dinner, Mr. C. Stuart Edwards, Director of Admissions, served capably as Master of Ceremonies. After the introduction of Guests, Mr. William A. Lank, President of the Board of Trustees, paid a tribute to President Andruss and to the great work that he has done during the past twenty-five years.

Howard F. Fenstemaker, President of the Alumni Association, then presented to President Andruss the Distinguished Service Award of the Alumni Association. This award had been granted since 1948, to not more than two distinguished Alumni or former faculty members who have rendered outstanding service to the College. Mr. Fenstemaker also presented a gift to Mrs. Andruss.

Mr. Strauss then presented a fine movie camera and other accessories to President Andruss as a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is held by the faculty. He also presented a gift to Mrs. Andruss.

President Andruss, in his response, expressed his appreciation of the tributes that had been accorded to him, and spoke briefly on the traditions of the past, the accomplishments, of the present, and the plans for the future.

The citation on the certificate presented to President Andruss reads as follows: "Consecrated Educator. Distinguished and Courageous Administrator. Inspiring Leader in the Pursuit of Excellence. A Great Institution stands as a Monument to His Ideals, His Vision, and His Dedication."

A booklet prepared as a souvenir of the occasion has this tribute to President Andruss:

"It can be truly said that the measure of an institution is frequently the measure of the man who has guided it through a period of growth and change. In this respect, Bloomsburg State College has been singularly fortunate. During the past twenty-five years, the College has grown in size, scope, and prestige under the dedicated leadership of Dr. Harvey A. Andruss. A man of combines to a remarkable degree the qualities of vision, and common sense, he has guided the College skillfully through this

SUMMER COMMENCEMENT

The four responsibilities which cannot be shirked but must be faced by an educated man, were pointed out Wednesday, August 5 by Dr. Otalo L. deFrancesco, president of Kutztown State Teachers College at Summer Commencement exercises held in Carver Hall auditorium.

These responsibilities, he said, are to build a free world, increase the amount and widening scope of knowledge, assume a moral imperative and dare to be yourself.

Four Master of Education Degrees and ninety-two Bachelor of Science in Education Degrees were bestowed by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College.

"Your first responsibility is to build a free world," Dr. deFrancesco stated. "Indifference to the social, economic, and ethical problems of our own nation and of the world is tantamount to a resignation from the human race—an attitude which cannot be accepted by educated men and women.

"Science is at work, for evil or for good, and its march will not be stopped. Only the direction and harnessing of its power by educated men will determine its total effect."

In indicating the second major responsibility, he stressed that "With a college education, one is obligated to increase the amount and the widening scope of knowledge itself. This responsibility must be contributed through personal research, by discovering new truth, by interpreting old truths in relation to new situations, and by otherwise enriching your own lot and that of others through constant accretion and evaluation."

The need to assume a moral imperative was the third responsibility with which the noted educator charged the graduating students. "Educated men and women," he said, "must strive to understand the meaning and the impact of material progress in relation to the good of society."

In his final admonition, Dr. deFrancesco reminded the students that as a college graduate, "You must dare to be yourself. This is as much to say: don't choose the easy road, the beaten path, the expected mode, the conventional way." He concluded by saying, "The fluidity of ideas in our time, the constancy of change, the advances made on all fronts of human behavior almost forbids the educated to accept a way of life other than the creative, individualistic, experimental and temporary. For how long? Not too long as the life-span suggests; sooner or later, those who have lived courageously find their life's compass and swiftly and confidently reach port."

NEW LIBRARY

The General State Authority in Harrisburg has requested bids for construction of a new library on the Bloomsburg State College campus.

The building, a square two-story brick structure with stone trim, will occupy a portion of the old athletic field with the entrance near the site of home plate on the baseball diamond.

It will be across Spruce street between Navy Hall and the Benjamin Franklin School, adjacent to the tennis courts and near Sutliff Hall.

Its corners will be towered. One will house a passenger elevator; another a freight elevator; the third a stairway that will provide easy escape in case of fire; and the fourth will be used for utilities.

The center section, or core of the building, will have accommodations to seat approximately 750 readers and along the interior walls, between the corner towers, stack shelves will be built to care for over 100,000 volumes.

In speaking of the new library Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, college president, said that the cost of general construction is expected to exceed one-and-one-half million dollars.

He said this does not include architects fees, equipment, moving and essentials.

Architects for the library were Price and Dickey, Media, Pa., and they have planned it so that additional stories may be added when required.

It is expected that eventually 125,000 volumes will be stacked in the building and Dr. Andruss said that this will double the present number of volumes.

He added that this will be the first library built on the campus in the 125-year history of the college.

Some year ago, when first started, a library occupied a dormitory wing on the second floor of Waller Hall annex. Later it was moved to the dorm's first floor and now is in the former dining room and kitchen area.

BSC HOST TO EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

On Saturday, October 10, Bloomsburg State College was host to the Eighteenth Annual Conference for Teachers and Administrators. Approximately 1500 educators from schools in Pennsylvania and neighboring states attended the conference.

Dr. Edmond Amidon, Associate Professor of Educational Psychology at Temple University, was the guest speaker at the general session in Carver Hall Auditorium. Previous to the general session, demonstrations and discussions in Business Education, Elementary Education, Secondary Education, and Special Education were presented in various classrooms on the campus.

A beautifully illustrated brochure is being prepared as a souvenir of the 125th anniversary of the College, and also of the 25th anniversary of Dr. Andruss as President of the College. This brochure will be sent to all Alumni who have five-year memberships and life memberships in the Alumni Association. Five-year memberships are $10.00 and Life memberships are $35.00.

$27,000 IN GRANTS FOR RETARDED CHILDREN

Two grants, totalling $27,000, have been awarded the Bloomsburg State College by the United States Office of Education, Washington, D. C., to assist in the preparation of professional personnel who will teach mentally retarded children.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, was informed of the award in a recent letter from Dr. Ralph C. M. Flynt, associated commissioner for Educational Research and Development, United States Office of Education.

One grant, amounting to $18,000 provides five undergraduate traineeships for full-time students, enrolled as seniors, during the academic year beginning September 1, 1965.

The second grant, for $9,000, will make it possible for the College to award five short-term traineeships to students enrolled in the twelve week Summer sessions program during the period from June 1, 1965 to August 31, 1965.

Students who are designated as traineeship recipients will receive stipends to pay expenses other than tuition and fees.

The program of studies, which led to the grant by the United States Office of Education, was developed cooperatively by the faculty of the Division of Special Education under the direction of Dr. Donald F. Maietta, and was approved by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss and the Board of Trustees of the College.

2,452 ENROLL AT COLLEGE

Two thousand four hundred fifty-two students completed enrollment for the Fall semester during the registration period in September.

This is nearly 300 more than the total enrollment for the semester which began in September, 1963. Late registrations were expected to bring the total to more than 2,460, according to John A. Hoch, Dean of Instruction.

Men students continue to out number their female counterparts by the slim margin of 1,236 to 1,216, respectively. Freshman and new students total 896, and sophomore, junior and senior students number 1,556.

GETS DOCTOR DEGREE

W. Bradford Sterling, associate professor of Geography at Bloomsburg State College since 1947, was awarded the Doctor of Education degree during commencement exercises at Pennsylvania State University. His thesis dealt with, "The Evaluation of Columbia County's Schools: A Geographic Investigation."

A native of Antwerp, New York, Dr. Sterling received his elementary and secondary education in the public schools of that community prior to entering the State Normal School at Plattsburg, New York. During his teaching career in Middleport, N. Y., and Dunkirk, N. Y., he earned the Bachelor of Science degree at the University of Buffalo.

His graduate study at Syracuse University was interrupted in 1941 when he enlisted as a flight instructor in the Army Air Corps Enlisted Reserve. He accepted an invitation to work for the National Research Council Department of Aviation Psychology prior to working for University of Tennessee and, later, for Ohio State University.

A year after he joined the faculty at Bloomsburg, he completed the requirements for the Master of Science degree at Syracuse University.

Dr. Sterling completed the course work in Education and Geography at Pennsylvania State University during the 1961-62 college term while on sabbatical leave.

His professional affiliations include membership in the American Meteorological Society, Phi Delta Kappa fraternity, the American Association of University Professors, Torch International and the Pennsylvania State Education Association.

Dr. and Mrs. Sterling reside at Light Street Road, Bloomsburg.

Dr. Hilda E. Tinney has been appointed assistant registrar at Florida State University. She had served as secretary to the faculties there for the past six years. Dr. Tinney has been a member of the staff of Florida State University since 1949 and was formerly assistant to the dean of students. She will continue to serve as secretary to the faculties and as editor of the University catalogue. In her new post she will also have administrative supervision over transcripts, microfilming, veterans affairs and selective service.

Dr. Tinney is a graduate of Bloomsburg State College, with a master's degree from New York University and a doctor of education degree from Teachers College of Columbia University. She began her career at Florida State as director of the Student Union. She formerly taught at Berwick Senior High School, leaving that faculty to enlist in the WAVES during World War II.

Teacher Retired After 45 Years, Finds New Career

Eight years after her retirement as a teacher in the Northumberland area schools with a distinguished record of 42 years of exemplary service, Miss Nora E. Geise, Northumberland R. D. 1, is unwearied in well-doing. As a matter of fact her activity as a volunteer worker at Selinsgrove State School and Hospital, only one facet of her "second career" has been so outstanding that she has been singled out for special recognition by members of that institution's staff.

As a school teacher Miss Geise was noted for her personal concern for the children who came under her instruction. After eight years of service in the elementary grades she was for 34 years on the faculty of Northumberland Junior High and as will be attested by her thousands of former students, was a powerful factor in molding their characters.

In her devotion to the children of the Selinsgrove State School and Hospital with its population of 2,100 mentally retarded, Miss Geise as a volunteer worker two and one-half days a week has been no less devoted in her commitment. Indeed the quality of her unremitting and compassionate service has been such that she has been accepted by the institution's staff members as a shining example. "Like Miss Geise" is a common afterthought when reference is made to the need for a volunteer worker.

This was apparent when, during the filming of "The Toymakers," a documentary film at the State School and Hospital, the director, with tears glistening, said, "We'll film Miss Geise on her regular visit with Jeannie, no special props (setup) needed." That particular scene from the film, reproduced in several publications, shows the retired school teacher tenderly holding a mentally retarded girl with the caption: "Jeannie has known little love in her eight years. Adult volunteer is filming sequence in hope Jeannie will respond well."

And the children do indeed respond. Staff members point to a little boy whose life has a new dimension, words learned to convey his special needs, thanks to the love and patience of Miss Geise. A group of young boys cries, "Grandma! Grandma" as she approaches. Eager young arms are extended to her as she tours the institution and with a new sparkle in her eyes, she says, "If I have any contribution to make in my remaining years, I believe it may be with these people whose needs are so great."

Known to men and women throughout Pennsylvania whose children are at the State School and Hospital, Miss Geise is looked upon by them as a saintly person and they look forward to the days when she serves as a receptionist in the visiting room.

As might be expected, Miss Geise looks upon her volunteer service as a routine matter. She would recoil from mentioning how many thousands of hours of her time she has given in this labor of love. She would not be inclined to discuss the deaf mute girl who has been enabled to take part in a party game because one has been specially invented with her in mind, or the fact that little Eddie's dark, tormented world was made calmer by her gentle touch, although he could not see or hear her. But she summed up her philosophy in a written report to the education director on a special study made to see how blind, retarded children may be reached, beginnin: "I thank God for eyes that see and an average mind."

The sentiments of the State School and Hospital Staff are eloquently expressed in these words: "The psychologist may call it charisma, the artist may call it beauty, the minister may call it Christianity, the person in need may call it kindness, but we simply say that something good happens to one who has the rare privilege of knowing Nora Geise."

Her service at the Selinsgrove institution is typical of the life of this dedicated woman. Deeply interested in Christian education along with the total program of the church from girlhood, she has served years on end as a Sunday School teacher, was instrumental in departmentalizing the Sunday School of Trinity Lutheran Church, Northumberland R. D. 1, of which she is a lifelong member, and for many years has headed the youth division of the Northumberland County Sabbath School Association. She has been a counselor-teacher at Camp Lanesatka, sponsored by the state Sabbath School Association.

In community life, she has served as a school director, was one of the founders of the Northumberland Junior Red Cross, and has served as a member of the boards of directors of the Susquehanna Valley TB and Health Society and the Northumberland County Society for Crippled Children and Adults.

An outstanding figure in Northumberland Grange 218 for more than 50 years, she has been repeatedly honored by that organization and took the lead in organizing the first Junior Grange in this section of Pennsylvania.

Northumberland County Chapter of the PARC in 1960 honored Miss Geise for her "countless hours" of meaning-

AAUW OPENS MEMBERSHIP TO BSC GRADUATES

An invitation to join the Bloomsburg Branch of the American Association of University Women is being extended to all qualified women college graduates in the area.

Bloomsburg State College has recently been put on the AAUW approved list of qualified colleges, according to President Harvey A. Andruss.

Basis of AAUW membership is a recognized baccalaureate or higher degree from an institution on the AAUW list of qualified institutions. A higher degree from an approved institution supersedes a baccalaureate from one not qualified.

Women graduates of the college are eligible for AAUW membership if they have completed the equivalent of a 4-year degree program leading to a baccalaureate degree. Such degrees have been awarded at the local college since 1927.

Those who wish more information or who wish to make application may get in touch with the membership committee, Miss Ellama Jackson, BSC, Mrs. Harold R. Miller, Mrs. Myles Katerman, Miss Helen G. Andres, Mrs. Robert M. Jordan or Mrs. Kimber C. Kuster, chairman.

Miss Dorothy M. Stradtman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Stradtman, Sr., Bloomsburg, and Robert Dayton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dayton, Red Rock, East Chatam, N. Y., were married Saturday, June 27 in St. John's Lutheran Church, Stewartstown, R. D. 2.

The Rev. Gerald Krum, brother-in-law of the bride, officiated at the ceremony. After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Titusville, Pa.

The bride graduated from Bloomsburg State College in 1961 and has been a teacher of special education in the Reading schools. Her husband, a graduate of North Carolina State University, class of 1959, is employed as a national sales representative for Bell Equipment Co., New York City, ful assistance to the mentally retarded—and she has added appreciably to that distinguished service in the intervening years.

In 1961 she was honored by the Pennsylvania Grange as the outstanding citizen of her community.

The Pennsylvania Sabbath School Association in 1962 cited her for more than 50 years service as a Sunday School teacher.

The October, 1955 edition of The Pennsylvania Herald, a Christian publication probably comes closest to an appraisal of this unusual woman's concerns and service when, in discussing her hobbies of collecting candles and dolls, it observed that her real hobby, which allows scant time for diversion, is helping others.

COLLEGE CLOCK BOUGHT THROUGH TURKEY DINNERS

History Credits William H. Housel,
Former Steward, with Idea

MORNING PRESS MAY 20, 1939

To the students and most of the faculty to today, the clock on the tower of Carver Hall is merely a convenient timepiece. To the old-timers, however, it is a symbol of the cooperative spirit that went into the laying of the foundations of the present Bloomsburg State Teachers College.

Money for the clock was raised in one week, all through the endeavor of the united college community. Teachers, students, administration and staff all had a part in the acquisition of this device which now has become essential in life "on the hill."

Now and then one of those who glance at the clock may call to mind a turkey dinner stand operated at the Bloomsburg Fair Grounds just after the turn of the century. If it hadn't been for that particular stand, where delicious meals were served throughout the four days of fair week, the clock on the hill might not today be tolling forth the hours.

The clock was paid for through turkey dinners prepared and served by students and staff of the college. The turkeys were roasted at the college and then taken to the stand. Teachers and students waited on tables.

The idea originated with William Housel, who, many will say, "was responsible for the whole thing." Mr. Housel for fifteen years was steward at the college and was a progressive force on the campus throughout that time. He suggested the acquisition of a clock and followed it up with the idea of a turkey dinner stand to be operated in the Fall of 1901, during the principalship of Dr. J. P. Welsh.

The project "went over big," although it was the first and probably the last time that the college ever conducted a diner stand at the fair grounds. The year happened to be a good one, and the weather was excellent. The stand was located near the old exhibition building on the grounds. The college served "all they could feed" and earned enough to pay for the bell, which cost in the neighborhood of five hundred dollars. It was purchased in 1902, the first outdoor clock owned by the college. One of the moving spirits in the project was William B. Sutliff, who later became Dean of Instruction. Mr. Sutliff wrote an article about the proposed bell for publication preceding fair week, so that the Bloomsburg Fair attendants knew what the aim of the turkey project was.

At the time Carver Hall was remodeled, the tower was built as it is now, but with only blind windows where the clock faces are. The clock faces are installed in each of the windows on three sides, but difficulty was encountered when it came to the side facing the women's dormitory, Waller Hall. Because the side roof of Carver Hall, extends above the level of the first row of blind windows, this clock face could not be seen if installed at the same height as the others.

The answer to the problem was found in the placing of a smaller clock face in the row of blind windows which extends around the tower almost thirty feet above the other clocks. The fourth side of the clock, facing the pine grove, is therefore high above the others but is run by the same mechanism as the rest.

The clock is attached to the bell, which was purchased through subscription in 1867. The bell can be rung separately, but marks the hours by the use of a hammer attachment to the clock.

Before the clock was purchased, the bell was rung by the janitor at chapel time, which was then 8:30 in the morning. It was also rung for the one o'clock class in the afternoon.

For many years, it was the faculty's responsibility to see that students got out of bed at an early hour. Each morning, when heads of sleepy students were still buried in their pillows, a faculty member or a student would march through the halls, clanging an old hand bell. The fellow who could sleep through that clatter really deserved a few hours' extra snooze.

A push button in the principal's office was used to mark the end of classes for many years. The button operated bells throughout the school and was later replaced by the automatic system now in use.

Since 1902, the clock has proved of benefit not only to students hurrying to and from classes, but also to town residents who use it to set their watches and listen for its clear tones to mark the hours.

ELSIE YORKS JONES

Never before in the history of the institution which bears the name of Bloomsburg State College have three members of a family served on the Board of Trustees.

The recent passing of Mrs. Elsie Yorks Jones, who was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Bloomsburg State College from 1942 to 1957, brings to the minds of those interested in the history of the Normal School and the Literary Institute that her father, F. G. Yorks, was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Normal School, and her brother, Milton K. Yorks, was a member of the Board of Trustees from 1940 to 1942.

The Board of Trustees of Bloomsburg State College, at a recent meeting, passed the following Resolution relative to the service of the members of the Yorks family as Trustees:

REBA BREISCH STEPHENSON '08

Mrs. Reba Stephenson, of 102 W. Wanola, Kingsport, Tenn., who died recently, devoted her life to teaching.

After her official retirement in 1960, she took upon herself the task of teaching a class of functionally illiterate patients at Holston Valley Community Hospital how to read and write.

The program later was adopted by the city school system and transferred to Robert E. Lee Elementary School, where Mrs. Stephenson continued as the instructor, hospital sources recalled.

Before that she taught at Andrew Jackson Elementary School for 18 years, from 1942 through June 1960. And before that she served for several years at a substitute teacher in various city schools.

Mrs. Stephenson became associated with the hospital as a member of the Women's Auxiliary in which she did voluntary work in the pediatric ward and at Wilcox Hall, the nursing home that operate under management of the hospital.

As a teacher she was especially interested in the training program for practical nurses, a joint venture of the hospital and the vocational education department of the city school system. The library used by the student nurses had never been catalogued. Mrs. Stephenson helped set up a card catalogue for the library.

She then became interested in patients with little formal schooling who had never effectively learned to read and write. When they were unable to work because of their physical disabilities time was heavy on their hands, and several of the patients welcomed the opportunity offered by Mrs. Stephenson to make up this lack in their lives.

This project came to the attention of the Altrusa Club, which along with several other organizations made arrangements for her to have a regular time for teaching. A meeting place for the class was set up in Colud Apartments before the city school system absorbed the program and moved it to Lee School.

Recently she had been teaching a half-day class for adults twice a week in the city's vocational education program, receiving pay for the work she had started as a volunteer.

Her work at the hospital received special recognition. A citation that accompanied an award she received said:

"She has been working twice a week for some time cataloging the books and periodicals in the library of the practical nursing school. She has gone about this task in such a quiet, unassuming and efficient manner that the service she gives is truly a gift of the hand as well as the heart."

Mrs. Stephenson was born in Ringtown, Pa., and taught school in Washington, D. C., before coming to Kingsport.

She was an active member of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church and a member of Phi Iota Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, an honorary society for teachers, in which she held several offices at various times.

NEW ATHLETIC FIELD

(Morning Press, April 27, 1964)

Time marches on and with it comes changes.

Included in the scheme of things is the moving of the athletic field at the college.

We personally do not know of all the fields that were used by "the friendly college on the hill" but if the format continues in the future as in the past it is a certainty the field designated by the adjective "new" will always be to the east of the one which it replaces.

Some of those whom we came in contact with through the years told of the time when the athletic field was located to the north of Carver and Waller Halls in that space where many May Day fetes were held in the spring and where years ago the classes had those bloody battles over which class would paint its colors on the posts that held the lamps that lighted the way from the main building to Science Hall.

Now much of that area is devoted to dormitory space for such a purpose. Science Hall, constructed in the early years of the present century, is slated to be removed.

When we first became interested in the athletic program of "Old Normal", the outdoor athletic events were on that plateau along Light Street Road that was dubbed Mount Olympus.

At that time it served as a football field in the fall and a baseball field in the spring. There was also a track laid out on the red shale.

There were no bleachers for football through many years. The folks just moved along the bordered sidelines. That sort of a setup gave the appearance of a large crowd. Had there been bleachers the throng on hand would have appeared much smaller.

From the early days of the field, however, there were bleachers for baseball, some along the third base side, some—built again the bank—along the first base side and a wooden grandstand behind home plate.

As football grew in popularity bleachers were constructed to provide accommodations of this type but they were the collapsible type.

There never was a field house connected with that center. The only building of that nature on the field was a small wooden shanty which actually was a storage shed for equipment used by the grounds crew.

Before the field was cast in a supporting role to the present athletic field it was considerably improved by a WPA project during the depression thirties.

During that time the gridiron was turtle backed, drainage installed and the track put in first class condition.

It wasn't too long after that improvement, however, that progress pushed the field into the background. First Navy Hall was erected on campus and took a slice off the field. This was most noticed by the track boys for it shortened the quarter mile oval. Football and baseball by that time had moved to the present location.

The late Dr. E. H. Nelson, one of the top men in the state in the field of physical education and a lover of all sports, was especially interested in baseball.

When it came time to lay out the present diamond he borrowed the plans used for the diamond at Shibe Park, now Connie Mack Stadium in Philadelphia. The result was one of the finest diamonds in the region.

There were baseball schools held there from time to time by scouts for big league clubs. They thought the field ideal for their purpose. They could have a game going and still be conducting instruction in various phases of the game on other parts of the field.

It was on this field that the BSC elevens of the decade that followed World War II turned in an outstanding record. In that period they played some of their games at Athletic Park, usually at night, and one—that with West Chester in a title winning year—at Berwick. A few night games with Mansfield were also staged on the Berwick field but usually home base was the campus.

The field about to be abandoned for the auditorium and the library was the first that had any adjacent parking area. It was the first time such an area was really needed. Much of the space is used day in and day out.

Sculptor Ruth Hutton Ancker of 61 Delmore avenue, Berkeley Heights, N. J., has been selected by Fairleigh Dickinson University's Florham-Madison, Campus magazine "University Woman" as among 130 outstanding New Jersey women.

In a special issue entitled "Women of New Jersey" commemorating the New Jersey Tercentenary, contributions of women in various fields are noted.

Mrs. Ancker is well-known both throughout the United States and in Europe. One of her larger compositions "Enchainment of Past and Future" has been purchased by Fairleigh Dickinson University and is displayed in the library of the Florham-Madison Campus.

Mrs. Ancker's bust of a woman was used in the cover design of the maiden issue of "University Women." It was judged by the magazine editors to reflect the air of serious contemplation characteristic of the modern educated woman.

Among works Mrs. Ancker completed during the spring of 1963 when she worked in Rome is a bronze figure of St. Francis of Assisi for St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Murray Hill, which is the focal point in a Memorial Garden.

In January Mrs. Ancker exhibited her work at The House of Fine Arts in Summit. During the past year her work also has been seen in the Graulich Gallery, Art-o-Rama, Highgate Gallery, Robbins Gallery, and the Ward Eggleston Galleries.

Mrs. Ancker has been called "a highly accomplished sculptor, who has created serene figures whose gestures and expressions suggest that each has a poetic, philosophical nature."

Prepared by Fairleigh Dickinson women students, under the guidance of Dr. Lois Pratt, associate professor of sociology, the "University Woman" is published quarterly.

ALUMNI DAY, 1965

The date of Alumni Day has been set for Saturday, May 8, 1965. Alumni Day has, in the past, been observed at the close of the college year. The change to an earlier date has been deemed advisable by the College administration and the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association, because many of the Alumni now teaching are busy with the activities incident to the close of their school year during the last two weeks in May. It is hoped that the change will make it possible for many more Alumni to come to the campus to attend their class reunions.

The College sends out, to all graduates for whom we have correct addresses, a general announcement outlining the activities of the day. This is an invitation to ALL graduates to come to the campus and join in the festivities.

The success of the various class reunions, however, will depend upon some person or persons in the class who will take the initiative in arousing interest for the reunion, and also in making the necessary plans. The Alumni Office will be glad to give all the necessary assistance by providing class lists and taking care of the mailing. We hope that you begin immediately to make plans and get in touch with all members of the class, so that everyone will know what is going on.

Alumni Day in 1965 should be the biggest ever. It will make the climax of the 125th anniversary year of the College, and also the 25th anniversary of Dr. Andruss as President.

The following classes will be in reunion: all classes to 1900, 1905, 1910, 1915, 1920, 1925, 1930, 1935, 1940, 1945, 1950, 1955, and 1960. We hope you will be there.

BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

THE AGE OF AUTOMATION

Mankind has always resisted change. Many times this resistance is a combination of fear, inertia, or what some people would call sheer laziness.

It seems that man can invent machines faster than man is willing to be trained or educated to use these new machines or devices.

Sometimes, in the past, a man has not only resisted change but has tried to destroy the machines which he could not learn to operate. French workmen jammed or dropped their sabots (wooden shoes) in the new machines to stop them, hoping frequent repairs would result in their discarding the new machines. Farmers, for many years, continued to prefer horse drawn machinery and implements rather than buying tractors. They knew about the habits of the horse but the mysteries of the internal combustion engine were just too much for them to learn without a great deal of pressure.

Today, education in all its processes faces the same problem. New machines, procedures, devices and methods of instruction cannot be made effective as long as teachers insist on teaching the same old things in the same old way.

While the young usually adopt new ideas, machines and ways of doing things on account of their sheer novelty, the experienced refuse to adapt the more recent machines and methods, saying that they have not proved themselves. Until they do, they refuse to use them.

This age of automation is made possible through education and training, or reeducation and retraining, and in the future we must not allow ourselves to be beset by the fears, inertia, and the laziness displayed in the past.

For these reasons we reorient and rearrange subject matter in the various fields or disciplines. We use language laboratories and audio-visual aids in a time when students graduate from high school and come to college with probably the equivalent of what the college sophomore had a generation ago. "New occasions teach new duties. Time renders ancient good uncouth." The challenge in the age of automation is really the challenge of education of all people on all levels to change but particularly on the college level to do new things in a new age.

AN INTERVIEW WITH DR. WALLER

(Morning Press, May 20, 1939)

One need not talk long to Dr. David J. Waller, Jr., President Emeritus of the Bloomsburg State Teachers College, to realize that in his mind the college on the hill stands today as a monument to the memory of Professor Henry Carver, more than to any other man. Carver Hall, you'll recall, was named after him.

Likewise Dr. Waller does not hesitate to state that Henry Carver helped his career more than any other individual, "as he did many of the boys whose lives he touched." Speaking in his ninety-third year, there is no doubt in Dr. Waller's mind, as he goes back over the long procession of school men he has himself known and influenced, there is no question but that Professor Carver was the master, school master of them all.

So far as the history of the Bloomsburg State College and its predecessors are concerned, Dr. Waller has personally lived through all but a few years of the century associated with those institutions that make the background for the educational service given this community. True, the old academy at Third and Jefferson streets, the forerunner in the field of higher education in Bloomsburg, was established in 1839, seven years before Dr. Waller was born, but there had been little wisdom back of that. The first teacher proved a failure. Then along came C. P. Waller, a graduate of Williams College and an uncle of Dr. David J. Waller, Jr. He was here two years and in those years raised the course to an academy stature. He was later to become a president judge of Pennsylvania courts. Followed then several years of indifferent service.

That it could not have been much of a school at the time is best evidenced by the fact that when Dr. Waller's father, Rev. David J. Waller, first sent his son to school, it was not to that newly established academy, but to a Mrs. Drake—a Snyder before she was married.

"Her school," said Dr. Waller, "was situated on Main street, where Snyder's Run crossed the street. The run had not been covered in that day and an open bridge spanned the street."

"Jim Ramsey, Dr. Ramsey's son, Bill Abbott and Bill Snyder I recall as other pupils. The seats faced the wall. I recall that when I went there the first day I hadn't the least idea what to do."

"Mrs. Drake gave me a slate on which were rows of figures running into five numbers and almost a foot long. She told me to add them up."

"I didn't know the first thing about addition. One of the boys did the problem, and I confess I came off with flying colors on that first day. It was probably a bad start."

His first recollection of corporal punishment in the school came when the teacher gave "Bill Snyder a lickin'."

He didn't remain there long, but was next sent by his father to a classical school founded by B. F. Eaton in 1854 in the Primitive Methodist church, at the corner of East Third and Iron Streets, now the site of St. Columba's Church.

"I was there only a short time, I recall, and my most outstanding recollection of that school is the fact that I, among others, was scheduled to give a recitation. My parents and a number of other parents were in the audience. When it came my turn to recite I forgot what I was supposed to say. My parents weren't too much encouraged with my work that day."

It was out of the success of this classical school that there developed, "The Bloomsburg Literary Institute, but it had a precarious existence for several years, changing both site and heads.

"Inability to discipline was one of the greatest difficulties a succession of teachers experienced. The school had a Princeton student in theology here one year—before I entered the school. One of the boys stood the teacher on his head. The latter's watch fell from his pocket, and the boy ground it under his heel. That was a climax to the poor discipline.

"Then along came Henry Carver to save the day. He chanced to come into town on a pleasure trip. He was introduced to a number of town men and finally persuaded to stay and open up the old academy. He had headed an academy and had also headed the preparatory department of the University of California. He was the ideal man for the job, as Bloomsburg was soon to learn.

"That old academy building had its length running parallel to Third street. Of brick and two stories, a hall ran through the middle of the first floor. In the rooms on that floor the lower grades were taught. The second floor was one large room.

"Henry Carver was a widower at the time. One arm, shot off in a hunting accident, was missing. He used an iron hook attached to the elbow. He was then in the prime of life. With him when he came were two daughters, both of whom taught in the academy.

"When Henry Carver came, discipline as automatically restored. He inspired confidence and respect. He ruled because of these rather than by an iron hand.

"The enrollment grew by leaps and bounds. Bloomsburg considered itself fortunate to have such a man. But Professor Carver saw greater things ahead. He served notice that unless more adequate quarters were provided, he would not return. That placed the situation squarely up to Bloomsburg. He told the board that when he returned in the Fall he would have plans for two buildings, and they could take their choice. But unless they decided to go ahead he would have to leave.

"He came back with his plans. He told them one of the buildings could be built for $15,000. They didn't believe his figures. They wanted Carver, but they couldn't see that much money.

"I'll take the contract to build it myself at that figure," Professor Carver stated. They couldn't get away from that man.

"And build it he did. He not only built the building, but he was largely responsible for raising the money. Building and furnishings complete cost $24,000 by the time they had finished. He kept in close touch with the subscriptions, and when this subscription or that didn't come up to the figure he thought it ought to be, he would hitch up his horse, drive out to this farm or that, and raise the subscription. The man had an amazing personal magnetism.

"During those months of building he was frequently away from the academy, and following devotional exercises he would announce: 'Mr. So and So will hear the Latin class today, or the geometry class, whichever it might be. And the classes went ahead as systematically as though he were there with an eye on all the proceedings. I mention that to give you an idea of the spirit with which he had fired the student body.'

"We had a bell on top of the old academy and this was always rung for the exchange of classes by a boy employed for that purpose. During all that building I never witnessed any disorder—any shoving of shoulders and that sort of thing—during all the class changes.

"Clint Swisher, from out near Jerseytown and for many years a prominent university professor in Washington, D. C.; George Elwell, Charles Unangst and John Clark were among the boys then preparing for college. "I recall that upon one occasion John Clark thrust a new meerschaum pipe under the nose of Clint Swisher, who always detested tobacco. He caught the pipe with his hand and threw it out the window. John walked quietly from the room, recovered his pipe and took his seat. Professor Carver got to hear of it when we came back to the academy. It chanced I was the one in charge at the time.

"The others escaped criticism which was heaped upon me because I had not administered the needed punishment.

"It was a great day when we marched from the old academy up the middle of the street—trustees, faculty and student body, headed by the Bloomsburg Band—to the new building on the hill. It was to be some years later before it was to be known as Normal Hill. Even then we all recognized Professor Carver as the spark-plug of the undertaking."

"What about the story of the bell for Carver Hall for which Charles Unangst, George Elwell and yourself raised the money?" the reporter wanted to know.

Dr. Waller laughed. "That was more of the amazing magnetism of Henry Carver. His philosophy was that the individual could accomplish whatever he set out to do, if sufficiently determined. He had all the boys who expected to go on to college imbued with that idea.

"It was just after the new building had been dedicated. The term had closed. Examinations were over. It was a Saturday morning and we looked forward to the opening the following Monday of our last term of school here before leaving for college. The three of us were walking together up Main street. At the Episcopal church corner we met Professor Carver, coming down town.

"We stopped to talk. There was nothing we enjoyed more than being with him.

"Well, there's the new building and there's the tower, boys," he said. "But there is no bell in it. Now, we have to have a bell—and a good one. We want no cheap bell. The courthouse and the Presbyterian Church have good bells. We want one just as good, if not better. Now, hustle along and raise that money today for the bell. You three can do it. It would cost $1,200 at least."

"That was a jolt just as we thought ourselves tired and needing relaxation. But we took counsel of the father of one of us. He gave us some good advice. We started out. We began to get subscriptions. It wasn't long before the word was noised about town that we were out to raise the money for the bell in a one-day drive. The little town became interested. As the hours wore on everybody wanted to know how we were coming along. By nightfall we had the money." The bell, weighing 2,171 pounds, came later.

The interviewer mentally pictured the spirit of the amazing community, a village not much more than a quarter Bloomsburg's present size—back in the days when there was very little money and giving not only $24,000 to provide better educational facilities for its youth, but topping it with a $1200 gift in a one-day drive by a trio of boys. And back of it all, as Dr. Waller emphasized time and again, was the amazing spirit of this man, Carver.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction J. P. Wickersham, coming from Wilkes-Barre, chanced to note the beauty of the valley and the first building of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute on the hill. He stopped over in Bloomsburg, became more impressed with the possibilities of the school and its location and took the initiative in suggesting that a normal school be added. That meant an additional building, and more subscriptions. It was when the board had decided they needed $70,000 for land and building that aging Harry Carver came along and took the contract to erect the building for $36,000. Again it was Henry Carver who was the mainspring back of the subscription drive.

"I was in college when he left, but I never forgot the lessons of common sense and good order he left with me.

"I was to see him later and to learn he had duplicated in New Jersey the same remarkable things he had done here. I recall hearing that when he had a board of trustees there who hesitated to launch an undertaking to which he was committed, he pledged his word that if they carried through he would have President Grant there for the dedication. And he carried out his word.

"Charles Unangst, who became a distinguished New York lawyer, was one of those who 'swallowed his doctrine.' He had filled Charlie with the idea he could go through college, and he did the very thing, without any financial backing. Charlie had been a leader in declamation here and when he got to Hamilton College he found the college stressing public speaking. Charlie tutored the other boys and financed his own way. Can't you see what that sort of leadership meant to a boy?"

It was easy to get Dr. Waller to talk of Henry Carver, but he had little to say of the great part he played through twenty-seven years in spreading the name and fame of the Bloomsburg State Normal School.

He had graduated from Lafayette College in 1870, and tutored there for a year after which he attended the Union Theological Seminary, graduating there in 1874. During the year 1874-75 he became pastor of the Logan Square Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia and there an epidemic of diphtheria swept through the family, costing the life of a child and leaving Dr. Waller with a throat affection. It was feared for a time he would do no public speaking.

Mrs. Waller and he returned to Bloomsburg to recuperate. His condition improved and he was prevailed upon to take over the pastorate of the Orangeville, Rohrsburg and Raven Creek Presbyterian churches.

It was about a year and a half later that Mrs. Waller and he were driving to Bloomsburg and had reached the outskirts of town when Daniel A. Beckley, driving toward them, stopped his horse and remarked he was on his way to see Dr. Waller at the time. Mr. Beckley had for a long time been a strong influence in the school.

They arranged to meet at the house of Dr. Waller's father, and there Mr. Beckley, on behalf of the board, offered him the principalship of the Bloomsburg State Normal School. There were considerations that inclined him to accept, but he was not willing to take up the work with the division then existing on the board. It was then that Judge Elwell jumped into the breach, and declared that would be handled. There was submitted to Dr. Waller a letter in Judge Elwell's handwriting, agreeing that if he would accept the principalship there would never be a line of division on the board. That promise was kept to the letter. The letter itself is still in existence.

Followed then thirteen years of steady development of the school under Dr. Waller's guidance. The procession of principals following Professor Carver's resignation was at an end. The same admiration and respect that Professor Carver had won became even more pronounced as the years of Dr. Waller's principalship progressed.

Then came the invitation from Governor Beaver to accept the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. He accepted and served for three years, the election of Robert E. Pattison as Democratic governor and his refusal to sign Dr. Waller's commission creating an unpleasant situation.

He had earlier turned aside repeated invitations from the Indiana, Pa., State Normal School to take over the principalship of that school, declaring himself disinterested in any other work while state superintendent. That office relinquished, he agreed to go to Indiana, and remained there from 1883 to 1906 during which the school likewise went ahead by leaps and bounds.

When Dr. Judson Ferry Welsh, who had succeeded Dr. Waller here, resigned to become dean at Pennsylvania State College, the board of trustees sought the return of Dr. Waller to his first scholastic love. The invitation reached him at his summer cottage at Windermere, Canada. It was late one evening that

95 PERCENT ARE TEACHING

A survey of the 468 members of the Class of 1964 at Bloomsburg State College shows that 95 per cent of the 416 graduates available for teaching have accepted teaching positions. Graduates not available for teaching positions include twenty-nine who are in graduate school, fifteen who are serving in the armed forces, and eight who are married.

The report, prepared by Elton Hunsinger, director of placement, lists 396 graduates who went directly into teaching and twenty graduates who have accepted other employment.

A year ago, when complete statistics were available for the Class of 1963, the placement report also showed that 95 percent of those available had entered the teaching profession. Of the 360 available, 342 accepted teaching positions.

According to Hunsinger's complete report for the Class of 1964, the Bachelor of Science degree was awarded to 189 students in Secondary Education, 136 in Elementary Education, 44 in Special Education and four in Public School Nursing.

The Division of Special Education leads all others with a 100 per cent record in both 1963 and 1964. None of the graduates in Special Education accepted employment other than teaching and the demand for these graduates greatly exceeded the supply. Ninety-eight and a half percent of the Elementary Education group went into teaching while Secondary Education placed 95.3 per cent and Business Education reached 88.8 per cent. Three of the Public School Nurses went into teaching and one accepted a position with an industrial concern.

The number of students entering graduate school has increased from fourteen in 1963 to twenty-nine in 1964. These students are working for advanced degrees at institutions of higher learning in nine different states, including Pennsylvania, Kansas, Indiana, Alabama, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Ohio, and Tennessee.

John M. Clark, then secretary of the board of trustees, entered The Morning Press office, telegram in hand, with the information that Dr. Waller had accepted.

That was in 1906 and he continued at the helm of the institution, inspiring thousands of young people who came under his influence, until 1920 when he retired to become President Emeritus of the institution with which he had been identified as student and as head.

Just as he has lived to see Bloomsburg grow from a hamlet so has he lived to see the institution on the hill become one of the best known teachers colleges in the country in his ninety-three years.

COLLEGE CONDUCTS INSTITUTE

Twenty-five teachers are attending the in-service Institute in Modern Biology for high school biology teachers conducted at BSC during the college year of 1964-1965. The in-service program is sponsored by a grant of $7500 from the National Science Foundation. Classes are conducted in Navy Hall every Saturday morning.

The major purpose of the institute is to give the biology teachers within commuting distance of the Bloomsburg campus an opportunity to gain competency in the newer phases of modern biology and to acquaint them with the philosophy and techniques as followed by the Science Department of BSC.

The following areas of modern biology have been selected for consideration in this institute: molecular and cellular biology, microbiology, physiology, ecology, genetics, and evolution.

FOOTBALL - 1964

The 1964 football season may be considered a year of transition. This was Russ Houk's first year as head football coach, and it was also the first year in which the Freshman rule went into effect. The Freshman squad played their own season, and a fine string of new players will be available next fall. The elimination of the Freshmen from the Varsity squad resulted in a loss of depth. The victory over Millersville on Home-Coming Day, however, helped to make the climax of Anniversary Week a very successful one. The following are the scores for the season, with two wins, four losses and two ties:

Sept. 19—BSC 7, Lock Haven 13
Sept. 25—BSC 7, Mansfield 19
Oct. 3—BSC 10, Brockport, N. Y. 26
Oct. 9—BSC 0, West Chester 54
Oct. 17—BSC 0, Millersville 26
Oct. 24—BSC 7, Cheyney 7
Oct. 31—BSC 20, Kutztown 13
Nov. 7—BSC 0, East Stroudsburg 69

DR. FRANK LAUBACH HONORED

'Morning Press "Passing Throng" Column

At a time when many less active in life have long been in retirement, Dr. Frank C. Laubach, Benton native and world famed missionary-educator, keeps moving right along.

He has now rounded out four score years and in that time he has become one of the best known and most honored men in the world.

It is highly probable that there is no one in a position of national authority anywhere who would refuse to meet with him, for all of the leaders are familiar with his work and what he has done to remove illiteracy.

Honors have come from all parts of the globe to this man and he has taken them all in his stride and gone on to greater accomplishments.

His home community has signs along the main arteries of travel leading into the borough noting that it is his birthplace and it is probable few folks who pass those signs, regardless of where they come from, do not know of the work of this man.

A graduate of the Bloomsburg State College in 1901, he was recognized by the graduates of the local institution of learning a few years ago by being presented with the Distinguished Service Award. It is certainly true that despite the many distinguished sons and daughters of BSC few if any have done more to increase the happiness of all peoples of the world than this man. On the occasion of the commencement at which the award was made he also delivered the baccalaureate sermon and it was a thought provoking message.

He has spoken in this community often, one occasion being on December 7, 1941—Pearl Harbor Day. He mentioned at that time he had a scheduled meeting the following day in Washington with the Japanese envoys at which he hoped to start a program of understanding that would eliminate war between the two nations. The "stab in the back" by the Nipponese halted Dr. Laubach in his program of working for the betterment of mankind.

Dr. Marguerite Kehr, former dean of women at BSC and also the holder of the Alumni's Distinguished Service Award, sent along a clipping from the Washington Post that carried a photograph of Dr. Laubach, Abdoulaye Toure, counselor of the Mali Embassy, and the missionary-educator's wife and son, Robert, at the birthday party held in the capital city of our nation upon the occasion of the eightieth anniversary of his birth.

The article carried in the Post of that occasion follows:

More than 400 persons sang a rousing "Happy Birthday Dear Frank" last night to Dr. Frank C. Laubach, whose "Each One Teach One" method has helped reduce illiteracy in many parts of the world.

Dr. Laubach marked his 80th birthday at a banquet sponsored by the Laubach Literary Councils of Washington, Montgomery and Prince George Counties and Northern Virginia. The testimonial was held at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

President Johnson, who sent his greetings by telegram, joined Senators and Congressmen in wishing the educator happy birthday. Guests at the banquet, eighth in a series across the country, included Mrs. Dean Rusk, wife of the Secretary of State, and ambassadors of nations where Dr. Laubach has visited.

In his address, Dr. Laubach said that illiteracy is "the enemy beneath the enemies of poverty, hunger and racial tension." He said that once people can read and write the other, apparent ills can be cured.

The "Each One Teach One" method was originated by Dr. Laubach 35 years ago in the Philippines where he was serving as a missionary teacher.

"We don't depend on educated teachers," he explained. His role is to write primers using simple language and pictures to teach the rudiments of reading and writing. The pupils in turn teach others, spreading their knowledge by geometric leaps. Dr. Laubach has published his books in 312 languages and dialects and is credited with enabling millions of persons to read.

START WORK ON NEW LIBRARY FOR COLLEGE

Excavation began Thursday, November 12 for a new library building at Bloomsburg State College on the site of Mt. Olympus Stadium and at the point where the baseball diamond was located.

The new structure will cost approximately $985,000 when completed and will provide shelf space for more than 200,000 volumes as well as seating for 521 students.

The footers and frame for the three-story building will provide for the addition of a fourth floor when additional funds are available and expansion is necessary.

Some of the features which will be included in the library building are: lobby and display areas; staff rooms; conference rooms; a children's library; film storage area; treasure room, curriculum materials areas; phonograph listening area; reference room; archives; an elevator; a dumb-waiter for lifting books.

The entrance to the ground floor of the building will be on Spruce street; another entrance will be located at the east side of the building at the second story level. The exterior walls will feature cavity wall construction faced with red brick.

The addition of shelf space and seating capacity in the new library will play a vital part in the expansion of the undergraduate and graduate program curriculums at Bloomsburg State College.

Jan Presseda, Bloomsburg State's outstanding runner from Milton, took individual honors and the Husky team was second to team champion West Chester in the annual Pennsylvania State College Athletic Conference cross country race at Cheyney on Saturday, November 7. TOWN NATIVE GETS AWARD

Dr. Haldan Keffer Hartline, a native of Bloomsburg, received the $5,000 Albert M. Michelson Award at Case Institute of Technology. Dr. Hartline, a professor of biophysics at Rockefeller Institute in New York City, was cited for noteworthy research on sense organs . . . and especially for classic discoveries in the physics and biology of visual perception.

Dr. Hartline is well known in this area where he was born and raised. He was the son of the late Prof. and Mrs. D. S. Hartline, both former members of the Bloomsburg College faculty. Prof. Hartline was one of the "old guard" of the Normal School.

Dr. Hartline was last in Bloomsburg when a boulder was dedicated to the honor of his father at Lime Kiln. That memorial had been arranged by the late Miss Elizabeth Low.

One of Dr. Hartline's major discoveries involved the isolation and study of the electrical activity of single fibres in the optic nerve of the horseshoe crab.

Techniques he developed revealed valuable information about the nature of information transmitted over the optic nerve and provided a method for studying the physical and chemical events in the light receptors that give rise to activity along the nerve. Dr. Hartline has taught at the University of Pennsylvania and Johns Hopkins University.

BSC TEACHER SELECTED FOR C OF C AWARD

The Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce has named a biology instructor at Bloomsburg State College as educator of the year for 1964.

Dr. Thomas R. Manley, who just last year moved into the college ranks after nine years at Selinsgrove High School, was honored at the chamber's annual meeting.

Starting at Selinsgrove in 1955, Manley's only facilities for biology were "a room and some outdated textbooks," but today the Selinsgrove program is one of the most advanced in the state, because of his efforts, the chamber said.

During Manley's tenure there, his students won three grand championships and three reserve championships in biology at the National Science Fair, and two state championships in biology, one in physics and a second in chemistry, at the Pennsylvania Junior Academy of Science competition.

Dr. Manley received his elementary education at McKeesport and attended the Fairmount Junior and Senior High School, Fairmount, W. Va. After graduating from Fairmount State College in 1940, he taught at the Fairmount Junior High School for a year before entering the United States Air Force for three years.

Following his military service, he earned his Master of Science degree from West Virginia University, Morgantown, W. Va. Prior to his recent position at Selinsgrove Area Joint High School, he had additional teaching experience in Mannington High School, Mannington, W. Va., and the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.

In addition, from 1946 to 1948, he was Director of the Wheeling Garden Center at Oglesby Park, W. Va., and also was in charge of the Champlain View Gardens, Burlington, Vermont, for a three-year period (1952-1955). This is the largest Gladiolus bulb business in the United States consisting of over 100 acres.

In addition to being the 1964 Teacher of the Year, he was also one of the 10 finalists in the National Teacher of the Year program (1964.) He received the 1964 citation from the Department of Public Instruction for the advancement of education (team teaching techniques.) In 1963, he was named Pennsylvania Outstanding Science Teacher. He also received several awards in connection with his plant growing abilities.

The Manleys reside at McKees Half Falls, below Selinsgrove, and have two children, Natalie, a sophomore at Penn State University and Carl, a freshman at the University of Pittsburgh.

F. R. Dreibelbis, Research Soil Scientist at the Coshocton county USDA Research Station retired from the federal service July 2. Most of his professional career was devoted to studies of soils and their effect on water management.

Mr. Dreibelbis, a native of Pennsylvania, attended Stanford university one year majoring in chemistry and spent three years at Pennsylvania State university receiving a Bachelor of Science degree in Agricultural Chemistry (1924). After two years at Ohio State university, he obtained a Master of Science degree in Soils (1928). Additional post graduate study as a Research Fellow was made at Cornell university in the field of Soil Technology.

Following his academic years, he was a member of research teams of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, assistant chemist, 1926-28, 1930-33; of the U. S. Soil conservation service, as Soil Expert, 1934-35; Soil Conservation Service and Agricultural Research Service, Coshocton, as Research Soil Scientist, 1935 to retirement.

From the start of the Coshocton Watershed Hydrology Research Station, Mr. Dreibelbis' contribution was recognized as being of high value.

During the development stages of the Coshocton Research Station, the first comprehensive agricultural watershed hydrology research station in the nation, he contributed largely to the plans for construction and installation of the now world renowned lysimeters—the first of their magnitude and sensitivity. The location of sites for scientific instruments, as well as the analyses of data, depended on his soil surveys.

The President of the Alumni Association relinquishes this page to Danny Litwhiler, Head Baseball Coach at Michigan State University.
Danny is the Honorary Chairman of the E. H. Nelson Fund Drive.
He received the Distinguished Service Award of the Alumni Association in 1948.

Dear Alumni:

Bloomsburg State College has grown much since we have graduated. It will continue to grow only if supported by the Alumni Association and such funds as the E. H. Nelson Fund. This fund has been established as an athletic scholarship fund.

Year after year we read of the exploits of the wonderful student-athletes who attended our fine school. Many of the fellows need financial aid to continue their education and represent Bloomsburg State College. We know you are proud of these athletes and what they are doing for us to keep Bloomsburg up in the college world.

Whether you called him "Doc," "Jack," or Doctor Nelson, he always answered with a smile. No problem was too big or too small for him. Any donation to an athletic fund, large or small, would have pleased him greatly. So it is with the Alumni Association, and those of us who are participating in the drive to raise this needed money. Please send your donation to Dr. William L. Bittner III, 33 Lincoln Avenue, Glens Falls, New York.

Sincerely,

Danny Litwhiler

THE BLOOMSBURG THAT IS TO BE (IN 1980)

College students, conditioned by a daily diet of international crisis, new developments in the world of science, and problems precipitated by unprecedented population growth, are often seemingly unmoved by the next announcement of the unusual.

The reaction was quite different recently when 2,100 students and faculty members heard President Harvey A. Andruss boldly outline the need and the plans for Bloomsburg State College to become a State University, accommodating 6,000 students in 1980. He cited, as part of the basis for his thinking, increasing enrollment pressures, the great number of applicants denied admission due to the lack of room and financial support, and the history of the plans for growth from 1,200 to 4,800.

Dr. Andruss reminded the audience that the first plans for Bloomsburg State Teachers College, more than 20 years ago, would have accommodated 1,200 students — approximately double the enrollment at that time. Less than a decade ago, the figure was raised to 2,000, and the target date was set at 1970; subsequently, plans for 3,000 were outlined in greater detail. It is now estimated that 2,800 students will enroll next September, and the number will reach or exceed 3,000 in 1966 — four years earlier than the 1970 target date. This has occurred in spite of the fact that only one-half of the buildings, planned for occupancy in 1970, will be ready for use in 1966.

The last proposal, made by former State Superintendent Charles H. Boehm, was that Bloomsburg should have 4,800 students — 3,000 on the present campus and 1,800 on the second campus.

Plans for the future, according to Dr. Andruss, must be prepared in relation to the master plan for higher education. The development of the community colleges, planned as two-year institutions, will need to be given consideration. When their graduates go to other colleges for their third and fourth years, our state colleges may have junior and senior classes larger in number than the freshman and sophomore classes.

Statistical reports show that only one-third of Pennsylvania's high school graduates go on to college; in some states the number approaches one-half or fifty per cent. "It seems to me," Dr. Andruss declared, "that Pennsylvania's enrollment could be increased by fifty per cent if opportunities are provided either in community colleges, state colleges, or other relatively inexpensive institutions, which students can afford to attend."

The new "Blueprint for Bloomsburg" will need to consider all these factors. It will need revision from time to time, along with the support of alumni, trustees, parents, faculty, and students, before an enrollment of 6,000 students is reached in 1980.

MID-YEAR COMMENCEMENT

Dr. Gustave W. Weber, President of Susquehanna University, was the featured speaker at the annual mid-year Commencement Convocation at Bloomsburg State College on Tuesday, January 26, 1965, at two p. m. in Carver Auditorium.

Eighty-seven seniors received the Bachelor of Science degree and the Master of Education degree was awarded to a graduate student majoring in Business Education. All degrees were conferred by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, President of the college.

A native Austrian, Dr. Weber received his early education in the public schools of Allentown, and was graduated from Allentown High School. He earned the Bachelor of Arts degree from Wagner College, the Bachelor of Divinity and Master of Sacred Theology degree from the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia, and the Doctor of Theology degree from the Episcopal Divinity School, Philadelphia. Wagner College honored him with the Degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1961.

"If you had tried for the last hundred, or thousand, or ten thousand years to pick an age in which to live or a time to go to school, you couldn't have chosen a better one. In no other day could you have selected more interesting men and women as your associates or been exposed to a better education; in no other hour in the world's history that I know or could you have picked a better time to graduate and to start wrestling with more really fine opportunities or more really dangerous problems crying to be solved."

With these words of optimism Dr. Weber gave to members of the senior class who received degrees and diplomas in the commencement exercises.

"What should your four years of college have given you? Was it not, as George Santayana once said, to find the 'spirit in things'. You came here, each of you, to be made 'skillful considerers of human things.' The phrase is Milton's; it is my text, and I hope you will remember it if you remember nothing else today.

"To be 'skillful considerers' is to know that the surface of things is often deceptive. It is to know that truth takes many forms and shows itself to us in strange and imperfect guises. To be 'skillful considerers' above all, is to seek out the spirits in things as Gar has placed them there.

"What we need today is not pessimists but constructive skeptics, the close reasoners who are willing to venture; we need also the hard realists who are willing to give weight to the open course as well as the barrier.

"I do not believe there is a single fault we could not correct or a single problem we could not solve once we concentrated upon them the full powers of which we are capable.

"There is one power without which all other powers are as the strength of the blind Sampson, and intellectual power is dammed up at its source. This is moral power, the animating force that is necessary to galvanize all the others. This is what is missing. Until we release and apply to our faults and our problems, the full moral power that is latent within us, we shall be a nation that does not know its own strength and, not knowing it, cannot employ it to achieve its own salvation or those ideas of universal freedom to which it dedicated itself long ago out of 'a decent respect to the opinions of mankind.'

"May I point out to you two keys to the release of our pent-up moral power. These are education and faith.

"No one can promise you certitude or ease of spirit in the stages of life now opening before you. No one can say that your years will be free of anxieties for the future. But God does spread at your feet, now in this momentous year, magnificent opportunities for spiritual and intellectual development and leadership. The race will not be to the swift but to him that can see the deepest into the spirit of things.

"The crowding generation that have left their mark on this school, the dedicated men and women who carry forward the college's great work, and we who are older in the calling watch you a little wistfully; we wish you well and wave you on."

Honors

Gerrold W. Hart, senior class advisor, presented those seniors who were to receive special honors. The presentation of awards was made by Dr. J. Alfred McCauslin, dean of students, and Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the college.

DR. CHARLES H. FISHER

Dr. Charles H. Fisher, principal of the Bloomsburg Normal School (now Bloomsburg State College) from 1920 to 1923, and during the period in which the local institution of learning conducted the largest extension course program in its history, died Dec. 8 at a retirement home in Des Moines, a suburb of Seattle, Wash.

Dr. Fisher was a professor at Swarthmore College, near Philadelphia, during his career and later director of teacher education in the Pennsylvania schools.

He came to Bloomsburg from the State Department of Public Instruction and left three years later to become president of Western Washington State College, Bellingham, Wash., resigning that position sixteen years later when a dispute developed over his defense of academic freedom.

Later he was a professor of educational administration at New York University and then dean of Huron College, Huron, S. D., from 1942 to 1944.

He returned to Washington in the last year of World War II to become war materials priority director for the state. His widow, Mrs. Mary Fisher, three sons and a daughter, survive.

The late Dr. D. J. Waller Jr. early in 1920 and then seventy-four, notified the trustees that he planned to retire at the end of the school term after serving Bloomsburg as principal for a total of twenty-seven years and during his tenures, 1877-1890 and 1906 to 1920. Dr. Fisher was elected the eighth principal on July 7, 1920.

At that time the Commonwealth set up new requirements for certification of teachers and there was an immediate demand for extension classes for teachers in service.

Within two years, Dr. Fisher reported, the enrollment in these classes reached 1770. An organizer of extension classes was added to the faculty and the school purchased two cars to transport faculty members to the twenty-three extension centers.

One of the most ambitious projects of Dr. Fisher's administration was the establishment of a bureau of educational research. The bureau ceased to exist after Dr. Fisher resigned to accept the appointment as president of Bellingham.

Mary Albertson Adams '89

Mrs. Elliott Adams, ninety-two, esteemed Berwick resident, died in the Berwick Hospital recently. She had been a patient there since October 20. Death was due to the infirmities of advanced age. Known in the Berwick area as Mrs. Mary E. A. Adams, she resided at Sixth and Pine streets. She was hospitalized several times during her illness. Mrs. Adams was born May 7, 1872, in White Haven, the daughter of Garret and Louise Jayne Albertson.

After graduation, she taught school in White Haven and in Binghamton, N. Y., until she married Elliott Adams, Berwick, October 17, 1897. After her husband's death in 1919, Mrs. Adams taught in the Berwick schools for some years. She was always interested in civic projects, was a member of the Presbyterian church and active there as long as her health allowed. She was a member of the D.A.R., the W.C.T.U. and the Evang. BUILDING PROGRAM

Major changes in the campus skyline reflected the continued growth of Bloomsburg State College during 1964—a year in which the college observed its 125th Anniversary, its 95th year of training teachers for the public schools, and the 25th year of Dr. Harvey A. Andruss' tenure as President.

Nearly $5,000,000 worth of major construction will account for some of the growth and change on the campus in 1965. Work on new buildings, along with the extension of utilities, is expected to exceed that of any previous year in the history of the college.

Construction will continue on the new million dollar library, started in November, 1964, and ground should be broken this Spring for the Auditorium and a Dormitory to house 300 men. The cost of the latter two structures has been estimated at $2,600,000.

Sports fans will be interested to learn that a new Athletic Field will include a football stadium and a baseball diamond. Development of these playing fields should begin in 1965 in the area East of Chestnut Street at a cost of nearly $600,000.

Another allocation of nearly half a million dollars for the extension of utilities will provide adequate facilities for new and existing buildings as well as others which are anticipated in the future.

Architects will continue, during 1965, to work toward the completion of designs for a science classroom building and two more dormitories for men. These three projects will ultimately entail the expenditure of another four and a half million dollars.

When the college opened its doors in September, 1964, the number of students exceeded 2,450. Although enrollment figures for the 1965-66 college year are tentative at present, it is likely that the number will reach 2,800, an increase of nearly 350. The addition of approximately 20 new faculty members in September, 1965, will provide an instructional staff of almost 170, and will generate new needs for housing as well as increased wages and spending for the community.

For nearly a decade, summer sessions enrollments have climbed steadily, accompanied by a proportionate increase in the number of faculty employed. Enrollment for the 1964 summer sessions was double the number of full time students on campus during the regular college year a decade ago. This trend should continue in 1965.

The college can point with pride to the contributions it makes directly to the economic health and vitality of the community; the institution must, however, be even more concerned with its obligation to provide increasing opportunities for young men and women to secure an education beyond high school.

This is both a difficult and an important challenge for 1965!

BLOOMSBURG PLAYERS STAGE 'RIVERWIND'

The Bloomsburg Players' production of "Riverwind," the off-broadway hit of 1963, was presented in Carver Hall November 12, 13 and 14. "Riverwind" is a musical play set on the banks of the Wabash River. It portrays the problems of youthful, middle-age, and mature love. Mrs. Farrell, played by Ruth Campbell, owns the Riverwind Motel. She lives with her teenage daughter, Jenny, portrayed by Susan Harper, who is being pursued by Tom Curtis, cast as the youthful handyman, John.

Into their lives come four travelers, Bert and Virginia, a college couple, played by Larry Gerber and Iva Klingaman; and Fred and Louise Summer, a middle-age couple whose marriage is on the rocks, portrayed by Rip Van Winkle and Elsie Moyer. The simple rustic order of Riverwind, a place blessed with the harmony of nature, eventually adjusts the problems of its guests.

Robert Richey was the director of "Riverwind"; Michael McHale, technical director; Miss Amy Short, business director; Mrs. Charles Jackson, musical director; Henry Fetterman, assistant to the director and stage producer; Dr. Melville Hopkins, director of the theatre.

An outstanding program by four talented young artists in "Kaleidoscope" launched the 1964-65 Civic Music Association season Wednesday evening, December 15 and was a fitting tribute to the late president, Dorothy N. Evans, to whom the current concert series has been dedicated. Carver Hall auditorium at BSC was well filled for the performance which presented Martha Flowers, soprano; Irving Barnes, baritone; Elizabeth Brown, mezzo-soprano, and Donald Coleman, tenor.

Kelly Wyatt was the capable musical director and pianist for the group.

GEOGRAPHY PRESIDENT

Dr. Bruce E. Adams, professor and chairman of the Department of Geography at Bloomsburg State College, was elected president of the Pennsylvania Council for Geography Education at the meeting of that organization at Pittsburgh. The group met as a geography roundtable in conjunction with the Pennsylvania State Education Association convention being conducted in that city.

Also in attendance at the Pittsburgh meeting was Dr. John A. Enman, professor of geography at BSC. Dr. Enman is a member of the council's executive board.

The state geography council is made up of approximately 200 teachers of the subject from all levels of education from elementary through college and university. It was announced the council will hold its annual Spring convention on April 30-May 1, 1965, on the campus of West Chester State College. The theme for the Spring meeting will be "Geography Education in the Limelight."

Dr. Adams is a native of Lock Haven, and completed his high school education in that community. He received the Bachelor of Science degree in Education from Lock Haven State College and advanced degrees from the Pennsylvania State University. His doctoral thesis was based on data describing "Geographic Education in the Public and Parochial Schools of a Four-County Sampling of Pennsylvania."

In 1941, he was appointed to the faculty of the high school in Canton, Pa., to teach geography and social studies. A year later, he entered the United States Army Air Force and served as a photo intelligence officer with the Eighth Air Force in the British Isles, Belgium, France, Luxembourg and Germany.

Following the completion of his military service in 1945, he returned to the Canton High School faculty, leaving in 1949 to accept a position in Williamsport in geography. He has been on the faculty of Bloomsburg State College since September, 1956.

In addition to the state geography organization he now heads, Dr. Adams holds membership in the Association of American Geographers, the National Council for Geography Education; he is a charter member of the Pennsylvania Outdoor Education and Conservation Association, Kappa Delta Pi, Phi Delta Kappa, BSC Faculty Association, Association of Pennsylvania State College Faculties, Pennsylvania State Education Association and the Columbia-Montour Torch Club.

"Desire Under the Elms" by Eugene O'Neill, was presented in Carver Auditorium on Wednesday evening, December 9. The well-known play was presented by the professional cast of "The Circle in the Square."

CONSIDER GRADUAL SHIFT BEN FRANKLIN TO CLASSROOM

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Bloomsburg State College, an item for attention was the provision of additional classroom space for a college enrollment of 2,800 full-time students for the year beginning September, 1965.

While a Science Classroom Building is being planned for the area now occupied by two tennis courts, it will be at least three years before the building will be available. Therefore, consideration is being given to the gradual transformation of the Benjamin Franklin Laboratory School for elementary pupils to a classroom building for college students.

At the present time the basement areas of the Ben Franklin building, which were more or less unfinished since 1930, are being used for the IBM Computer Center, a general assembly room for groups of 75 to 100, and a Day Women's Lounge; more recently several smaller rooms were set up to take care of the curriculum laboratory for college students in the elementary field, but have been needed for classroom purposes.

A letter was addressed to the Superintendent of Bloomsburg Area Schools by the President of the College on December 11, 1964, indicating that Bloomsburg should plan for its own junior or community college for this area. Also, the Bloomsburg Area School Board was advised that enrollment for the kindergarten at the Benjamin Franklin Building would probably not be accepted in 1965, and that there is also a possibility the first grade will be discontinued.

The phasing out of the campus laboratory school will be done in a series of steps so that the sending school districts can absorb the elementary pupils, and the college can reassign those faculty members who care to continue on the college staff.

While no definite commitments have been made, either regarding the use of plant or personnel, the Board of Trustees has been apprised of this situation for some months, and will approve the steps necessary to make it effective at meetings held between January and June, 1965.

The study of the utilization of space by the Shay Associates of Philadelphia has indicated that much of the classroom space of the college is sub-standard and, in many cases, overcrowded.

The study also indicated that the utilization of space is as high as can be expected within the limits of the classroom day and the fact that more than 700 students must commute daily from their homes to Bloomsburg.

Future growth of the college depends on solving the problem of increased classroom space, according to President Harvey A. Andruss.

Following is a copy of a letter mailed on December 11, to T. A. Williamson, superintendent and Dr. Henry J. Gatski, assistant superintendent of the Columbia County Schools; Warren L. Fisher, superintendent of the Bloomsburg Jointure; Rev. Robert C. Angus, past president of the local joint board, and Clark Kreisher, president of the local jointure:

Recent news items in the Morning Press lead me to clarify the position of the College in relation to its plan for the future regarding (1) A Junior College Division, and (2) The use of the Benjamin Franklin Laboratory School for classroom purposes.

No definite plans regarding a Junior or Community College can be developed by the Bloomsburg State College until the Master Plan for Higher Education is announced by the State Board of Education, not earlier than June 30, 1965.

We do not feel that the Bloomsburg Area School Board or the County Superintendent's Office should delay its decision with regard to cooperation with other Counties in the formation of a Junior College. To do so, on the basis of any assumption, may mean that Columbia County will be left without these facilities, and the College would bear the burden of their omission.

If the College is to increase its enrollment in September, 1965, it will need additional classroom space. This continuing need was called to the attention of the Bloomsburg Area School Board at a meeting held more than a year ago at the College. At the present time we are planning not to accept Kindergarten enrollments in September, 1965, and probably the First Grade will also be discontinued. This process of phasing out the campus laboratory school will be done in a series of steps so that the sending school districts can absorb the elementary pupils, and the College will be able to reassign the faculty members in this area.

In view of the changing conditions which face collegiate education on all levels in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, no one is authorized to speak for Bloomsburg State College, and its future plans without authorization from the President of the College or the Board of Trustees.

This letter is being written so that your reactions may be made available to our Board of Trustees at their meeting of January 22, 1965.

Sincerely yours,
Harvey A. Andruss,
President

P.S. The College is about to release a series of news stories defining its position, and your answer to this letter will be appreciated before the publicity is sent to the newspapers, radio stations, etc.

REPRINT BAKELESS WORK

(Morning Press "Passing Throng" Column)

"Christopher Marlowe was a man of the Renaissance, in love with life and equally in love with the world in which he lived," wrote John Bakeless in "Christopher Marlowe: The Man in His Time." To celebrate the four hundred year anniversary of Marlowe's birth, Washington Square Press is reprinting this unexcelled biography as a 90 cent paperback.

Mr. Bakeless was the son of the late Professor and Mrs. O. H. Bakeless, the former having served on the Bloomsburg Normal School faculty from 1890 to 1893 and from 1902-1928 and graduate of the class of 1897. He was one of the College's "Old Guard," of the first part of this century.

John Bakeless prepared for Williams College at Bloomsburg State Teachers College when it was a Normal School from which he was graduated in 1913. His first journalistic position was with The Morning Press for three years and at times while a student at Williams College. His mother was a graduate of Bloomsburg Normal School in 1884, and also served as a critic teacher in the Model School.

Christopher Marlowe in his life and work embodied Elizabethan England and the Renaissance. As a playwright, he created some of the most memorable lines and imagery in English literature. His monumentally heroic characters, such as Dr. Faustus and Tamburlaine, were the immediate forerunners of Shakespeare's epic heroes.

As a man, Marlowe was a prime example of the artist as Bohemian. All action, licentious, dissipated, he died in a tavern brawl at the age of twenty-nine.

To write this significant reappraisal of the life and works of a great Elizabethan John Bakeless examined every known original document bearing on Marlowe. Among the manuscript sources reported upon here for the first time are the Buttery Book of Corpus Christi, Cambridge, the last will of his murderer, and his father's only known signature. An extensive Bibliography, Appendices, Notes and an Index are also included.

Bakeless is a distinguished American author, teacher, journalist and lecturer. He holds a Harvard doctorate in English, a Harvard M. A. in philosophy and a Williams B. A. in philosophy. He has been New York correspondent for the Manchester Guardian, editor of The Living Age, literary editor of The Digest, and assistant professor of journalism at New York University.

Philip C. Flayderman, editor of the Washington Square Press comments:

"We think you will agree with the critics that this biography is a stunning picture of the man and his time.

EXAMINATION WEEK

An innovation which has been under consideration for some time was put into effect at the close of the first semester. The period beginning Wednesday, January 20, and extending through Wednesday, January 27, was set aside as Final Examination Week. During this period, the regular classes are cancelled, and the day was divided into periods of two hours each, for the purpose of giving comprehensive final examinations.

Dean of Instruction John A. Hoch has stated that every College Council since 1946, with the exception of the present one, has asked the administration to consider a final examination week. The councils that made this recommendation made three stipulations: (1) elimination of an excessive number of tests on any one day, (2) elimination of social activities that would hinder study, and (3) elimination of class assignments. The Faculty Association also recommended consideration of an exam week.

At the conclusion of the first examination week, an evaluation committee composed of students, faculty and administrative representatives will review the exam week, using the following as a guide for future recommendations: (a) Did exam week serve the purpose of being a fair indication of the student's progress? (b) Did both students and faculty co-operate (c) What other problems were created?

This innovation will cause some of the older graduates to recall, with more or less pleasure, the "State Board" examinations that were held at the close of each school year.

Few artists receive standing ovations at Civic Music concerts here, but that honor was accorded the noted bass-baritone, William Warfield, Wednesday evening, January 13, following an outstanding performance given in Carver Hall auditorium at BSC.

There was a capacity audience for this second concert of the Dorothy L. Evans Memorial Series which is expected to prove one of the finest series in the seventeen-year history of the Civic Music Association.

Seldom have local audiences an opportunity to hear a singer of such outstanding artistry as William Warfield. His magnificent voice and warm personality combined to provide an evening of music which will be unforgettable.

STATE COLLEGES NEED MORE SUPPORT

If the state wants to educate its residents then it has to provide the facilities and these cost money, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president at BSC, has preached that gospel of education for years.

During a session of the State School Boards Association held during the fall at Pittsburgh, Dr. Ralph Heiges, president at Shippensburg SC, said the commonwealth should increase state college allotments by $100 per student.

"This year, the commonwealth is providing support for current operations at the rate of approximately $650 per student," Heiges said. "In addition, the fees collected by each institution are a major part of its budget. Where else in the state or in this country are colleges being administered on the basis of $900 or $1,100 per student?

"This herculean task is being performed on each state college campus, and it is apparent that the quality of education at each college cannot be improved without more financial support.

"I say the minimum increase should be $100 per student—and it should come from the state, not the student, otherwise we shall be depriving many more young people of a college education."

Heiges' remarks are viewed by many in the Department of Public Instruction as a forewarning of the 14 college presidents' requests to the administration and the '65 Legislature. The Shippensburg president has long been one of the more articulate spokesmen for the presidents.

He was one of the three authors this year of "Vital Issues Facing the State Colleges," a collection of the 14 presidents' complaints and recommendations for meeting the enrollment increases in this decade.

In an effort to meet the higher education emergency, the administration and state Board of Education have begun half a dozen studies of various problems in that field and have employed Dr. Earl J. McGrath, former U. S. commissioner of education, to find a solution to the fiscal control dispute between the college presidents and state budget office.

Dr. Heiges called upon the school board members to help the state board in drafting the new master plan for higher education.

School board members, he said, "are the best qualified to advise the educational planners what is right and what is wrong with our educational system."

He urged their support for "the cause of strengthening the state colleges of Pennsylvania."

Dr. Heiges called for an immediate increase in construction funds to the 14 colleges.

"The 1963 Legislature authorized

STATE COLLEGE ALUMNI COUNCIL URGES BROADER STATE SUPPORT

The Council of Alumni Associations of Pennsylvania's 14 state colleges urged broader Commonwealth support of these institutions.

The council, representing more than 100,000 alumni of the institutions, issued a statement recommending:

"Necessary support to broaden the present offerings" of the state colleges;

Greater autonomy for the Council on Higher Education and the college presidents in budget matters, curricula, facilities and administration;

Legislation to insure that the colleges "can take advantage" of the provisions of the federal higher education facilities act;

Development of a "master plan" to enable the colleges to provide for an anticipated enrollment of 60,000 students by 1972;

"Holding the line" on fees charged state college students.

Council President Leon R. Lunn of Mansfield said the program was intended to help the state colleges take "their proper place in the state's higher education system."

The 14 state colleges are the only truly public colleges in Pennsylvania, and as such they should be the first concern of every official charged with responsibility for higher education in the Commonwealth," Lunn said.

"The state colleges are the best hope of the great majority of college-bound Pennsylvania boys and girls."

construction of almost $135,000,000 for higher education of which $37,235,000 or 27.6 per cent is allocated to the state colleges; 10.6 per cent to Penn State, and 61.8 per cent to private, state-aided institutions."

"The state colleges' allocation is inadequate and unfair."

Dr. Heiges was critical of persons who "do not know the situation" and claim that state college enrollments could easily be controlled "if we prevented students who could not do college work from being admitted."

More than 92 per cent of the students at most state colleges come from the upper three-fifths of their high school class, Dr. Heiges told the school directors.

He called for close coordination between the state colleges and the new system of two-year community colleges.

PROF. RUSSELL WRITES ARTICLE ON U. S. POTTERY

Professor J. Almus Russell, English Department, Bloomsburg State College, is the author of "American Pottery of Yesterday," published in the Antiques Journal of December, 1964.

This authoritative article places particular emphasis on Hyssongware, a once famous Bloomsburg pottery, and also on the much older but lesser known Greenwood Pottery, made in Greenwood Valley.

"Among the Hyssongwares treasured by Bloomsburg collectors are churns, batter-crocks, bacon pots, chamber pots, cuspidors, flower baskets, whiskey jugs, vases, sponge-cake pans, pie plates, pitchers, bowls, and water coolers," writes the author. "The larger pieces are usually marked."

This article has nineteen illustrations, with credit given to the owners of local Hyssongware collections who have been kind enough to allow them to be photographed: Edwin M. Barton, Miss Mary E. Brower, Columbia County Historical Society, Joseph Giger, Charles S. Hyssong, Harold H. Lanterman, Mrs. Eleanor Sands Smith and Miss Elizaeth White. Several pictures of the author's collection appear.

The Willard Yeager Museum, Oneonta, N. Y., contributed cuts of early Iroquois pottery which has been found along the banks of the Susquehanna river after the receding of flood waters.

On May 7, the Maroon and Gold Band, under the direction of Dr. Charles Carlson, will present two concerts at the New York World's Fair. About 70 members, including the Majorettes will participate in the concerts at 1:15 and 5:15 in the Tiparillo Pavilion. Dean Hoch and Dr. Johnson will act as chaperones.

Plans are also being made for a concert tour to be undertaken by the band. This tour will take the musicians to a number of high schools and civic organizations within a fifty mile radius.

Because of the interest of the Bloomsburg State College community, and particularly the Men Resident Students, the Christmas season was brighter for many youngsters in ten area hospitals, including the Selinsgrove State School. Toys for approximately 300 children were collected at a dance sponsored by the Men Residents' Council at the college. A child's toy was the only price of admission to the dance.

The toys were delivered on Wednesday, December 16, by Robert Farina, Philadelphia, President of the Men Residents' Council, Elton Hunsinger, Dean of Men, and Santa Claus, in the person of William Troutman, Minersville.

At a recent meeting of the Wilkes-Barre General Hospital Auxiliary, one of the highlights was a surprise honor paid to General Hospital's renowned and beloved "schoolmarm."

She is Mrs. Jared D. Montayne, 23 West Hollenback avenue. Mrs. Montayne will be remembered as the former Olive Kresge.

After serving 40 years as teacher to children patient in the hospital's pediatrics wards, Mrs. Montayne has resigned from that post, and was tendered a special, inspirational token of appreciation by the Auxiliary.

The token of appreciation—the way Mrs. Montayne preferred it—was the presentation by the Auxiliary of a beautiful record player to the children's ward—in her honor. On it will be mounted her name.

Mrs. Montayne will continue as chairman of the children's wards, and continue to carry on her fields of endeavor in behalf of all children who come to General Hospital as patients.

The story of General Hospital's "schoolmarm" may well qualify her for title "Inspirational teacher of the year."

For the last 40 years, Mrs. Montayne taught a special course in the "three R's" to give children patients enough tutoring so that when they returned to their regular classes at school, they'd be right up with their classmates.

The tutoring was predicated on the fact that up to recently the hospital stay of children was generally long enough to make such special tutoring necessary and desirable.

The children were taught only when they felt up to it, during their convalescence, and classes were strictly informal, placing emphasis on cheerfulness as well as instruction. Affection and love went into every part of the program.

That Mrs. Montayne is the ideal person to carry on this work was unanimous. In making the presentation of the record player, Auxiliary president, Mrs. Philip J. Morgan, declared: "For 40 years this beloved and dedicated teacher did her inspirational work. It is entirely fitting that she now continue to carry on her work for many more years as Chairman of the Children's Wards, performing still more works of love for our children patients."

Mrs. Montayne, a former teacher at Guthrie Building, and a native of Stroudsburg, has resided the past 66 years at the same West Hollenback avenue address, just around the corner from the hospital. Educated at Courtright Avenue School, Coughlin High School, and Bloomsburg State College, she taught 5th grade for 10 years at Guthrie, until married. Her husband, Jared D. Montayne, prominent local businessman, passed away 9 years ago.

It was in March, 1925, that Mrs. Montayne was asked by the auxiliary if she would take on the teaching project at the hospital. Since then she has become virtually a second mother to thousands of children who have been patients at General. With no children of her own, Mrs. Montayne says: "These hospital children are my children."

Mrs. Miriam Welliver Funk, wife of Jay Lee Funk, and a native of this community, now a retired educator, has been carrying on a program for the aid of retarded children that was recently featured in an interesting article in the Rosewell N. W., Daily Record.

It was called to our attention by Frcd W. Diehl, Danville, retired superintendent of the Montour County schools and one of the foremost educators of this area.

Fred provided us with this background on Mrs. Funk:

"She was born and reared in Bloomsburg. She attended the old model School at BSNS and graduated at the Normal School in 1918.

"Following this she taught school in Columbia County for several years, and then came to Montour County to be the teaching principal of the Mahoning Township School. When we set up our first special education class in Danville, Miriam became the teacher, a job for which she was especially fitted. since she is, from early childhood, a polio victim. During this time she married J. Lee Funk, who had been a special education teacher in Northumberland. Funk was a native of New Mexico, and when Mrs. Funk retired in 1953, they went to Roswell where they have since resided.

"Shortly after moving to Roswell Mrs. Funk was elected to teach a special education class in that city, a position she held until retiring two years ago."

The newspaper article on her work follows:

"Arts and Crafts are not hobbies with me, they're a way of life," Mrs. Jay Lee Funk told us the other day. After noting 700 small pictures matted and ready to be presented to retarded children at Los Lunas and its annex near Hagerman we understood what she meant.

Mrs. Funk began her Christmas project for the retarded immediately after the first of the year. Many friends brought her their Christmas cards and Bill Greenshaw and David Paint and Glass saved leftover mat board for Mrs. Funk.

After working as a teacher with the handicapped for twenty-four years Mrs. Funk is an expert at dreaming up simple and inexpensive projects which appeal to the less fortunate youngster. "Crafts can be expensive," Mrs. Funk stated but it is possible to be creative with items one can obtain as left-over scraps.

Some of the most eye-catching items she is creating at present are colored pencil drawings on the front of plain white note sheets. Her original and delicate renderings of blossoms are attractive enough to frame and we'll venture that friends receiving these notes will do just that with them.

Mrs. Funk, whose husband is an artist, became a nature lover in her native Pennsylvania. She began her teaching career in that state where for 35 years she pursued her work before moving to Roswell. For eight years she was a teacher of local handicapped children before her retirement. She attributes her interest in handicapped children to her own 64 years of lameness from polio.

For those with time on their hands and pennies in their pockets Mrs. Funk's words hold a message . . . "I have always looked for new ideas and tried to see what I could make out of cast-off material."

Dr. Ben C. Duke, Associate Professor of Comparative Education at the International Christian University, Tokyo, Japan, was the featured speaker at a college assembly in November. His topic was "The Effects of the American Occupation on Contemporary Japanese Education and Society."

A graduate of Berwick High School, Dr. Duke earned the Bachelor of Science degree at Bloomsburg State College in 1953, served two years in the United States Army in which he currently holds the rank of captain, and taught for two years in the public schools of Hershey, before completing the requirements for the Master's and Doctor's degrees at The Pennsylvania State University in 1959. He began his tenure with the International Christian University five years ago, and is currently on a leave of absence as a visiting scholar at Columbia University, New York City.

During his time abroad, he has done post-doctoral research study at the University of London and Educational Media Research in the Far East. In addition, he has traveled through forty-five countries on five continents, including a month in Russia.

Dr. Duke has written extensively regarding the problems and conditions involving education in Japan and other Asian countries. His articles have been published in the Educational Forum, the Comparative Educational Review, School and Society, the Harvard Educational Review, the Journal of Higher Education, and the London Times Educational Supplement.

"Under the kind of atmosphere which exists twelve years after the Americans have left Japan, it is inconceivable that Japan could once again become a threat to the peace and security of the world.

"Since the American occupation ended in 1952, two trends have emerged. We can discern the Japanese conservative reforms and the liberal democratic influences, implanted by the Americans, which has had both positive and negative influences on contemporary Japanese society and reflect the centralization of power in the ministry of Education.

Dr. Duke noted the expansion of educational opportunity at all levels for both men and women. Along with this expansion, there has been a marked increase in the academic, social, and political freedom of the student.

In his conclusion, the speaker expressed the opinion that, as a result of the American occupation, the potentialities for Japan's return to a program of militarism and nationalism are overwhelming and drastically reduced.

A Purdue University biologist has helped bring advanced science teaching to a small Southern Negro college seeking re-accreditation.

And Prof. J. Alfred Chiscon, BSC '54, of Purdue, feels that the cooperative effort by volunteer professors and students of six universities and colleges at Miles College, Birmingham, Ala., the last summer could be followed at many other such schools.

Miles is the only Negro college in an 80-mile radius, and in a center of a dense population area. Chiscon observes that it differs from the typical unaccredited college in that it attracts many bright students who find it difficult to go elsewhere—a major reason educators wanted to work there.

Besides Purdue, volunteers—each contributing his vacation period—came from Harvard, Radcliffe, Stanford, Brown and Lake Forest to help update and enrich Miles' curriculum. Chiscon describes Dr. John Monroe, dean of Harvard College, as the project's catalyst, but notes that invitations came from Miles.

Volunteers offered summer courses in chemistry, music, French, sociology, philosophy and history. Although they arrived at different times and stayed for varying periods during the summer, they agreed in advance to work with the Miles faculty as well as the students to improve laboratories, course structure and content.

Chiscon's biology classes were attended not only by students seeking undergraduate credit but also by other students, faculty and even janitors.

Chiscon had been invited to join the experiment because the Purdue courses he teaches are widely known for introducing a new, sophisticated understanding of biology—a comprehensive view of the similarities in all living forms—in contrast to more traditional approaches.

The latter study each species separately and, in Chiscon's words, force students to "learn about every tree before they can glimpse the forest."

As the only visiting biologist, Chiscon taught three concentrated courses, meeting each one nine hours a week, including a course in genetics.

"I taught all morning," Chiscon recalls, "and in the afternoons I talked to students and professors, suggesting what might be done after I left—to ensure that the work would continue."

There was so little laboratory equipment the Purdue teacher had to improvise drastically. He borrowed supplies from scientific institutions in the area, one source was a Purdue alumnus on the faculty of a nearby school.

He launched a joint science seminar in chemistry, physics, mathematics and biology for majors in those subjects and will send discussion material periodically "to keep it going." He recruited speakers from neighboring schools for the seminar with hopes that "in the future, it will be commonplace for these scientists to visit us regularly and present seminars of their own."

100,000 PENNSYLVANIANS AWARD TO BLOOMSBURG STATE COLLEGE

This article appeared in the Winter Edition of the Pennsylvania Ambassador)

Praise, plaques, and plaudits decked the ivied halls of Bloomsburg State College during its 125th Convocation, as Governor Scranton and Fred P. Fuller, Jr., associate director of the 100,000 Pennsylvanians, congratulated the entire campus for its tireless efforts on behalf of the New Pennsylvania.

Thomas Miller, president of the Community Government Association, recruited over 2000 new ambassadors, comprising nearly all the student body, for the 100,000 Pennsylvanians. Bloomsburg is now the site of the largest single enrollment of Pennsylvania Ambassadors enlisted at one time in the Commonwealth.

Mr. Miller commented, "We had quite a bit of cooperation from our entire student body. We mentioned this program to them . . . and they came through perfectly."

Governor Scranton presented Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, with a special plaque on behalf of the 100,000 Pennsylvanians. The award commended "the enrollment of more than 2000 students as ambassadors in the effort of the 100,000 Pennsylvanians to Help America the New Pennsylvania."

Mr. Fuller bestowed Ambassador certificates upon Dr. Charles Carlson, acting director of the Maroon and Gold Band, Dean of Men M. Elton Hunsinger, Dean of Women Ellamae Jackson, William Lank, president of the Board of Trustees, and Boyd Buckingham, director of public relations for the college.

The highlight of the afternoon was Governor Scranton's speech. "One of our greatest assets in Pennsylvania is our educated youth," the Governor told the assembly. "Through the 100,000 Pennsylvanians, I am sure that the students of this fine school will be helped to learn more about our great state and its advantages."

The Governor, in urging all Pennsylvania colleges and universities to join the 100,000 Pennsylvanians, concluded, "Every Pennsylvania student should be aware of the many benefits the future holds for him in Pennsylvania."

BSC SUMMER STUDY ABROAD

Bloomsburg State College will conduct its second annual Summer Study Abroad program this year in conjunction with the Pennsylvania State Modern Language Association. The study program will be under the direction of Dr. Carl Bauer, chairman of the Department of Foreign Languages, BSC, with the tentative dates being July 15 to August 31, inclusive.

The three universities at which study will be conducted are the University of Mainz, Germany, the University of Dijon, France, and the University of Madrid, Spain. Six credits will be paid for the program and may be granted by Bloomsburg State College upon successful completion of courses.

The program has three basic goals. The communicative facility of students, particularly future teachers, is the primary consideration. This is based on the observation that there is no substitute for actual foreign experience in acquiring the living language and culture. A second goal of this program is the refresher seminar for in-service teachers. As with any other skill, the active use of the foreign language suffers with time. The study program can strengthen both speaking and writing skills. A third goal is to continue a four-way cultural exchange program which has already been started between the institutions involved, namely, the universities of Dijon, Madrid, and Mainz and Bloomsburg State College.

The program is available only for members of the Pennsylvania State Modern Language Association and immediate families. Future information can be obtained by writing to Dr. Carl D. Bauer, Director, Bloomsburg Abroad Program, BSC.

ASSISTANT TO PRESIDENT

James B. Creasy, a member of the faculty since September, 1960, has been appointed assistant to the president, and began his new duties at the beginning of the second semester.

He was born and educated in Bloomsburg, and attended BSC from 1949 to 1951. In the spring of the latter year, he began four years of military service with the U. S. Navy. Immediately following his discharge from the Navy, he resumed his studies at the College and completed the requirements for the Bachelor of Science degree in Business Education.

Prior to joining the faculty, Mr. Creasy was a member of the business education faculty of the Williamsport High School for three years. During that period, he earned the Master of Science degree in Business Education at Bucknell University. While completing the degree requirements at Bucknell, he served as an assistant in economics, and has continued his graduate studies at the Pennsylvania State University.

His professional affiliations include membership in the National Business Education Association, the Pennsylvania Business Educators Association, and the National Education Association. He has served as Pennsylvania State Chairman for the NBEA, and is a member of Kappa Delta Pi and Omega Pi, honorary professional education fraternities. During his four and one-half years at the college, he has filled the offices of secretary, treasurer and vice-president of the Faculty Association, and was a member of the organization's Executive Committee for two years.

Mr. Creasy is married to the former

ALUMNI DAY

May 8th

Alumni Day,

May 8

This will be the last issue of the Quarterly before Alumni Day. A few weeks from now, the College will send a letter to all BSC graduates for whom we have the correct address. This letter will include an announcement of the program of the events that will take place on Alumni Day, May 8.

Alumni Day has been moved to an earlier date this year. It is hoped that, as a result, the Alumni who are teaching will be less involved in affairs in their own schools, and will be able to attend their reunions. Members other than reunion classes are invited to come to the campus and enjoy the festivities.

We request that reunion classes plan their activities in such a way that it will be possible to attend the Alumni luncheon and the general meeting which follows. We were greatly disappointed last year because about one-third of the Alumni in reunion were not present at the meeting. In its desire to help the College in every way possible, the Association is greatly limited by the fact that only 1600, out of a possible 9000, are active members. Members of the Association will render a great service by urging their Alumni friends to join.

The Nelson Scholarship Fund is moving slowly. This fund is intended to bolster up the athletic program of the College by attracting good athletes who can meet the academic requirements for admission.

Please keep your address up to date. The College expects to publish an Alumni directory this year, so be sure that your address and those of your friends are correct.

Federal funds have been allocated for almost $400,000 as a share of the $1,300,000 cost of the Library to seat 750 students and shelve more than 400,000 books.

If you wish an early copy of the first Alumni Directory in many years, please send your dues (5 years—$10.00; life memberships—$35.00) to the Alumni Association immediately. This Directory contains the names of all graduates listed from 1867-1964 and commemorates the period from the founding of the Academy in 1839 to the end of the anniversary year, 1964.

All these make the one hundred twenty-fifth anniversary year a memorable one in the history of the college.

Harvey A. Andruss, President

...1965 COMMENCEMENT...

A class of 317, with three of those receiving Master's Degrees and the others Bachelor's Degrees in Education, was graduated Saturday, May 29, from the Bloomsburg State College at the commencement in the Centennial Gymnasium.

Dr. D. Elton Trueblood, president Yokefellow associates, delivered the address, "The Vision of Greatness."

The program opened with the processional "Maestoso (Third Sonata)," Mendelssohn. Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, delivered the invocation and made the announcements.

"The response to greatness is the test of a person," Dr. D. Elton Trueblood, told the members of the graduates who can demonstrate it.

Speaking on "The Vision of Greatness," he asserted "The finest thing is a certain humility. It is a humility that is not marked by degrading yourself. It is the humility which is largely a willingness to learn, of being willing to be impressed by the men and women of the past who have done better than we have. It is a constant mood of openness. This is within our power. You cannot change your intelligence quotient, and you cannot change your fundamental endowment, but you can be humble. You can be open, and you can learn. When you do this, you not only have the vision of greatness; there is a sense in which you can demonstrate it.

Speaking of the cost of greatness,

Dr. Trueblood said: "This is a great deal. Maybe too much. In any case, it is enough to make any intelligent person wonder if it is justified. It is not justified if you merely go to college, if you merely go through the motions. It is not justified unless you know why.

The subject of a college is greatness. There have been great periods; there have been great sciences; there have been great men; there have been great ideas. These are a challenge to you and me. The college is a society which is devoted to the recognition of greatness when it occurs, and to its encouragement. It is a society which exists to contemplate greatness and to allow your lives to be influenced thereby.

Erosion is a fact. Soil runs off; culture runs off. It all goes down unless we do something about it. Colleges are anti-erosive societies. Without such societies, and sometimes even with them, life goes down. After all, Greece went down even before the Academy was closed. It would have died much sooner without it.

What then is your task and mine? Our task is to recognize and to appreciate greatness when we see it. The response to greatness is the test of a person. It really tells you what is in you. Can you see it? When it appears, do you love it?"

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, President of the College, in the awarding of degrees, which included three receiving the degree of Master of Education, told the class:

"There are two days in every week when we should be kept free from fear and apprehension. One of these days is yesterday; the other is tomorrow. That leaves us only one other day—Today! Any man can fight the battles of one day—today—but not yesterday and tomorrow along with it. May you, therefore, live one day at a time, and may God bless you."

Following the address John A. Hoch, Dean of Instruction, presented the class and Dr. Andruss conferred the degrees.

The presentation of candidates for Bachelor of Science in Education degrees was made by Dr. S. Lloyd Toumey, director of business education; Dr. Royce O. Johnson, director of elementary education; C. Stuart Edwards, director of secondary education, and Dr. Donald F. Maietta, director of special education.

Dr. Robert C. Miller, director of graduate studies, presented the candidates for degree of Master of Education.

After the conferring of degrees and awarding of diplomas by Dr. Andruss, the exercises concluded with the "Alnia Mater" and the recessional, "Fantasy in C Major," Bach.

The organist was William K. Decker and the honorary commencement marshal Dr. J. Almus Russell, who is retiring at the close of this academic year.

DR. DONALD D. RABB TO TEACH IN HAWAII

Dr. Donald D. Rabb, Benton, professor of biology at Bloomsburg State College, has accepted a summer teaching position at the University of Hawaii, Honolulu, Hawaii.

Dr. Rabb will be in charge of the biology institute and principle lecturer for the BSCS (Biological Science Curriculum Study) Yellow Version during the regular summer session—June 20 through July 31.

Teachers attending the institute will be selected from various islands of the Pacific including Hawaii and the Pacific Trust Territory.

Dr. Rabb has been active in promoting the new secondary school biology program throughout Central Pennsylvania. He has attended a number of regional conferences and special briefing sessions on BSCS Biology at Washington, D. C. The Pennsylvania State University, and the University of Colorado.

During the past year, Professor Rabb has been conducting an NSF Institute in Modern Biology for high school biology teachers at Bloomsburg State College.

Twenty-five high school biology teachers within commuting distance of Bloomsburg have taken the course which began August, 1964, and has continued on Saturdays throughout the current year. In addition to his work and studies in BSCS Biology, he has continued post doctoral studies at summer institutes for college teachers in Radiation Biology, Syracuse University, 1960; Genetics, North Carolina State, 1961; Marine Biology, Duke University, 1962.

Dr. Rabb's wife and his three children, Dorothy Ann, Robert and James, will accompany him to Hawaii.

RETIREES FROM BOARD

Mrs. Vera Hemingway Housenick retired this year from the Board of Directors of the BSC Alumni Association. Mrs. Housenick has a long record of service as a member of the Board, and also served as secretary of the Board during most of that time. The Alumni Association owes Mrs. Housenick a great debt of gratitude for the time and effort which she has put forth to advance the interests of the Association and the College. We thank you!

ALUMNI MEETING

Bloomsburg State College is hopeful for eight million dollars in appropriations this year for physical expansion of the facilities of the local education institution, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss told a large number of alumni at the annual luncheon and meeting. The popularity of the early date for the festivities was reflected in the fine attendance.

The college president said the anticipated appropriations would be for two men's dormitories, a dining hall, kitchen and student union and are in addition to a library, now under construction, and an auditorium and men's dormitory.

He observed that the fourteen State Colleges are the only such institutions in the commonwealth that are owned, operated and controlled by the state and that they must be enlarged to meet the demands.

Speaking of target dates, he said Bloomsburg had reached, far ahead of schedule, the objectives of the past as to enrollment. First the local schedule called for 2,000 students by 1970 and then this was revised to 3,000 but "we will reach that total four years ahead of the date with only half of the buildings required."

Speaking of things as they are, the educator said "we have to increase our student body each year or our building program will suffer. I am confident that if we obtain the land we will have a university of 6,000 by 1980.

"In this expansion we are going to have to sacrifice some landmarks. I know some of you do not like this, and neither do I, but in a new world there are new things and we ask your indulgence."

Elected to the board of directors for three-year terms were James H. Deily, class of 1941; Mrs. Verna Jones, class of 1926; Raymond Hargraves 1958; Dr. William Bittner III, 1956; and Miss Elizabeth Hubler, 1931. Mrs. Grace Foote Conner, 1934, was named to a one year term.

The board later organized by re-electing Howard F. Fenstemaker, 1912, president; Mrs. Elmer J. McKechnie, 1935, secretary and Earl A. Gehrig, 1936, treasurer. Frank Furgle, class of 1962, Woodrow Wilson High School, Levittown, was named vice president.

The Alumni Association through the Mary McNinch fund of $138,627.47 now has out in student loans $40,910.96. Of these $20,000 were made during the current term.

In his report Gehrig also noted there are other funds of $39,642.79. From these funds the association is currently making grants. During the year contributions and earnings yielded $2,059 and from them $570 was paid out in scholarships.

In the general operation of the association Howard F. Fenstemaker, president, stressed the only funds available are those from dues. He mentioned that the membership has been increasing but the costs are going up and if the association is to continue its present program it must increase its membership at better than the past rate. Those taking out memberships on the campus were reported to total the largest in years.

Carl Sheran, president of the class of 1965, presented to the association dues for all members of that class and they were formally voted into membership.

Former members of the faculty presented were Dr. Thomas P. North, Dean of Women Marguerite Kehr, Maurice Houck and G. Edward Elwell Jr.

Recipients of the Alumni Meritorious Service Award in past years in attendance included Mrs. Verna Jones, Fred W. Diehl, Dr. Kimber C. Kuster, Glen Oman, Dr. Kehr and Dr. Harvey A. Andruss.

Editor's Note: All operations of the Alumni Office, except for loans, scholarships and the administration thereof must be paid from Alumni dues.

These operations are handled under the General Fund. Because of the need for hiring clerical help, higher postage rates, and higher cost of supplies, your Treasurer had to draw on reserve assets to meet operation costs. Money received for dues of over one year's membership is put in reserve, and cannot be used entirely during the current year. Last year we had about 1700 members. THIS YEAR WE SHOULD HAVE 2500 MEMBERS TO TAKE CARE OF INCREASED COSTS.

The money that you paid for your education at the Bloomsburg State College was an investment. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania invested more than you did.

What has been the annual return on your investment? Without doubt, the sum of $3.00, dues for one year in the Alumni Association, represents

TO CLASSES IN REUNION IN 1966

If any persons have been designated as chairmen of the class reunions to be held on Alumni Day, 1966, please notify the Alumni Office as soon as possible. The names and addresses of the Reunion Chairmen will be published in the Quarterly throughout the year.

Class lists will be prepared during the summer and mailed to the Chairmen early in the Fall. The Alumni Office will mimeograph any letters that will be sent to the members of the class. These letters will be mailed in bulk to the reunion chairmen, who will send out the letters.

As there will be an expense involved in purchasing envelopes and paying for postage, many classes ask for a contribution of $1.00 per member to reimburse the chairman for the expenses involved.

We need the help of the reunion chairmen to secure memberships in the Alumni Association. Each class will be credited with one-fifth of all money collected for membership.

ARE THESE OUR OLDEST ALUMNI?

In the process of compiling a college directory, which will soon be available to graduates of BSC, an effort was made to determine the present status of all persons graduating between 1885 and 1894. In six instances replies were received, indicating our oldest living alumni. The persons named below may therefore be the oldest living graduates of BSC. If you know of any person whose name should be added to this group, we should be very happy to receive information concerning them.

Hess, Syracuse, N. Y.; Dr. Kimber C. Kuster, Bloomsburg; Ruth Nicely Sterner, Dewart; Edna Runyan Charrie, Nanticoke.

ALUMNI DIRECTORIES TO BE DISTRIBUTED

A directory of all graduates of Bloomsburg, the first to be published since the publication of "Bloomsburg Through the Years" in 1950, will soon be coming off the press. The Alumni Association has been designated as one of the principal channels through which the directories will be distributed.

By action of the Alumni Board of Directors, and with the approval of the College Administration, the directories will be sent to the following:

1. All persons who have taken out a five-year membership in the Alumni Association since Jan. 1, 1965.
2. All persons who are now life members in the Alumni Association.
3. All persons who will take out

1915

The honor class in reunion, the class of 1915, and an excellent turnout, reporting fifty-six. The members of the fifty year class were guests at a dinner in College Commons on Friday evening and then followed with a class breakfast at the Elks on Saturday morning. Members were on the campus throughout much of the day participating in the numerous features.

1920

The class of 1920 had twenty-eight back for an outstanding day. The program opened with a breakfast at 8:30 Saturday morning at the Magee. Leroy W. Creasy, Bloomsburg postmaster and class president, extended welcome. The class, with Mrs. William V. Moyer at the piano, sang the Alma Mater. Mrs. Grace Gotshall Pannebaker gave the invocation. Howard F. Fenstemaker, general alumni president, gave greetings and told of the work of the general graduate body and the various projects now underway. Creasy expressed thanks to all who helped in the arrangements for the day. These were: Arrangements—Mrs. Moyer and Mrs. Ella Sweppeheiser Kennedy, invitations—Mrs. Anna Davis Barrow and Miss Clara Santee; finance—Mrs. Grace E. Pennebeker, treasurer ann Mrs. Ruth Titman Deitrick; invitations—Mrs. Anna Davis Barrow. The officers, Creasy, president; Mrs. Moyer, vice president; Mrs. Barrow, secretary, and Mrs. Pannebaker, treasurer, gave reports, with letters from those unable to attend being read. Plans were made for the fiftieth year reunion as officers were reelected. The class recalled that its motto was "Knowledge Is Power"; the colors, black and red and the flower the laurel. The breakfast concluded with the singing of "Blessed Be the Tie that Binds."

1925

Opening with a breakfast at the Hotel Magee on Saturday morning, the class of 1925 had a splendid forty-year reunion, reporting thirty back for the event.

1930

The class of thirty-five years reported a dozen back for its get together which was held at Science Hall during Saturday afternoon.

1935

The class of 1935 reported forty back for an active and memorable weekend which opened with a breakfast at the Magee on Saturday morning.

1940

The twenty-five year class had a busy day. Its silver anniversary program was held in the lounge of West Hall and followed with a dinner in the Commons Saturday night.

1945

The class of 1945, graduated during World War II, was small due to the crisis and plans a later reunion with other classes of that period. Betty L. Dietrich, Philadelphia, was one of those of the class on the campus for the festivities.

1950

The class of 1950 had a dinner in College Commons on Saturday evening.

1955

The largest turnout of the day was the class of 1955. There were around a hundred at the dinner at the Elks on Saturday evening at which many of the faculty members were guests. A. Arnold Garinger, Berwyn, was in charge.

1960

life memberships, or five-year memberships, until the supply is exhausted.

The directory will contain two listings:

1. An alphabetical listing of all graduates to date, with the year of graduation.
2. A list of the graduates by classes, with the addresses as they appear in the College Alumni file.

The Alumni Quarterly will serve as a supplement to the Directory, by publishing all changes of address as they are brought to our attention.

ALUMNI: PLEASE NOTE!

This issue of the Quarterly is being sent to all graduates of Bloomsburg for whom we have addresses. If any of your fellow alumni fail to receive a copy, please advise them to send their correct addresses to the Alumni Office.

If you receive more than one copy, this is due to several reasons: a husband and wife may both be graduates of Bloomsburg or you may have finished the old two-year course and received your degree several years later. In the latter case, you are listed with both classes in Alumni file.

If you are one of those who receive more than one copy, we suggest that you give the extra copy to a friend, or to one of your local libraries.

Two special performances of The Wizard of Oz, production of the Bloomsburg Players, were held for children on Saturday, February 27. Regular performances for the college community were given Thursday and Friday evenings, February 25 and 26.

Dr. Hartline Awarded D. S. A.

Aptly presented as "the distinguished son of distinguished parents" Dr. Haldan Keffer Hartline, class of 1920, was honored by the Bloomsburg State College Alumni Association by being presented with the distinguished service award during the annual graduate luncheon session in College Commons.

The son of a member of the dedicated and genuinely admired "Old Guard" of "Old Normal", the late Prof. Daniel S. Hartline, he received from Dr. Kimber C. Kuster, retired faculty member, the award which noted it was presented to "Haldan Keffer Hartline, D. Sc., M.D., member of Rockefeller Institute and professor of biophysics since 1953; recognized for his contributions in pure and applied research in physiology, especially noteworthy investigations on sense organs of animals and for classical discoveries in the physics and biology of visual perception." In his response Dr. Hartline, who was accompanied here by his wife, said the things most difficult to teach are the fundamentals and the bulwark of teaching is shouldered by those who teach the young.

He said that science is one of the great contributing factors in society. It is neither good nor evil; it is whatever we make of it and here is where the role of the teacher becomes one of prime importance, he continued.

The first requirement of a teacher is that "he must understand his subject and with this there can be no compromise."

At the present he does comparatively little teaching, and then with graduate students, but he said it is a most enjoyed experience and "teaching, as you know, is not a one-sided experience."

In presenting the honored scientist, Dr. Kuster observed that Dr. Hartline had started his education at Bloomsburg and then, as had his father, continued it at Lafayette. He also studied at Johns Hopkins and in Germany. The Hartlines have three sons, one in graduate school and another in undergraduate school at Harvard and the third at Reed College.

Following the program Dr. and Mrs. Hartline were warmly greeted by many in the College Commons dining hall, some being the scientists' classmates at BSC and more having been students of his father and mother.

Dr. Hartline received a Bachelor of Science Degree at Lafayette in 1923, a Doctor of Medicine Degree at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, in 1927 and a Doctor of Science Degree at Lafayette in 1959.

He held a National Residence Council Fellowship in medical science at Johns Hopkins from 1927 to 1929; was a Johnson traveling scholar from Pennsylvania to Leipzig and Munich, Germany, 1929-31, and held a Johnson Foundation Fellowship in medical physics from 1931 to 1936.

He was an assistant professor of biophysics from 1936 to 1940, associate professor in physiology in the Cornell Medical College, 1940-41, assistant professor in biophysics under the Johnson Foundation at Pennsylvania, 1941-42 and an associate professor there from 1942 to 1948 and a professor in 1949.

He was professor and chairman of the department at Johns Hopkins from 1949 to 1953 and he has been a member and professor at Rockefeller Institute since 1953. Dr. Hartline received the Howell award in 1927 and the Warren medal from the National Academy in 1948. He holds membership in numerous scientific societies.

CLASS REPRESENTATIVES

In this number of the Quarterly appear the names of some of the class representatives. The functions of the class representative are as follows:

1. To keep alive the spirit of the class.
2. To act as a channel through which news of the class may be published in the Alumni Quarterly.
3. To act as agent for the collection of Alumni dues. For every $3 dues sent to the representative, the class may keep 75c. If this procedure is effective, and is maintained through the period between reunions, each class may have a sizeable reserve fund to take care of the expenses of its next reunion.

If any of the classes have, at previous reunions, elected a chairman to take care of the arrangements for the next reunion, it is hoped that this person will accept the responsibility of Class Representative. The Alumni Office would appreciate being informed of the names and addresses of these persons.

Whether your reunion is in 1966 or 1970, now is the time to begin working. The Alumni Office will be glad to assist in every way possible.

DR. RUSSELL HONORED

Bloomsburg State College Faculty Association at its annual dinner in College Commons Saturday evening, April 10, honored Dr. J. Almus Russell, professor of English, who has been on the local faculty 18 years and retired at the close of the second semester. He has been an educator since 1921. Present at the dinner was his son, Charles T., supervising principal at Damascus. The son is another in a long line of educators. His mother, before marriage, taught in Hill Institute, Northampton, Mass., and his grandfather and many other relatives have had careers in the college and secondary fields of teaching.

12 STUDENTS GET $1670 IN BSC AWARDS

Twelve students at Bloomsburg State College received scholarships and awards totalling $1,670, during a convocation held in Centennial Gymnasium.

The Community Government Association Scholarship, was presented by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of the College, to Barbara Gass, a junior, from Ephrata.

Two scholarships provided by the Day Men's Association, were presented by Dr. Ralph Herre, professor of history, to Darryl Lanning, a junior, Berwick; and Robert Long, freshman, Northumberland.

Robert Reese, a sophomore, Frackville, and Thomas Scott, a junior, Mifflinburg, received the Men Residents' Association scholarship from Elton Hunsinger, dean of men.

The President's scholarship was awarded to John Witcoski a junior, Shenandoah, by Miss Ellamae Jackson, dean of women.

The annual Faculty Association Scholarship was received by Connie Rohr, a sophomore, from Ridley Park, from Gerald Strauss, president of the Faculty Association.

The Clyde S. Shuman Sportsmanship Award was presented by John A. Hoch, dean of instruction, to Grant Stevens, a sophomore, Gettysburg.

Howard F. Fenstemaker, president of the Bloomsburg State College Alumni Association, presented the following scholarships: The Lucy McCammon Scholarship to Ann Marie Rapella, a junior, Forest City; the Earl Rhodes Scholarship to Michael Bonacci, a junior, Carbondale; the R. Bruce Albert Memorial Scholarship to Mary Steffen, a freshman, Williamsport; the Alumni Association Scholarship to Carol Kopp, a freshman, St. Clair.

Recognition was given to two BSC students who had previously received the James A. Finnegan awards at a meeting in Harrisburg. They are Sandra Ryan, a sophomore, Shamokin, and John R. Witcoski, junior, Shenandoah. This summer, Miss Ryan will work in the office of Miss Genevieve Blatt, Secretary of Internal Affairs, and Witcoski in the Pottsville office of the Department of Public Welfare.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss noted that someone has defined a college as "a community for living and learning and that both of the latter have equal importance." He noted communications are important at all levels to help us be better organized for both living and learning. He commended the recipients for this good work and activity and joined the faculty and students in congratulating those who had received awards.

Palmer E. Dyer's address has been changed to 117 Township Road, Sellersville, Pa.

The Maroon and Gold Band has just completed one of its most active years. Under the direction of Dr. Charles H. Carlson the band has represented the college in both on and off campus performances.

Starting the season was a full schedule of half-time performances during football season. The colorful exhibition of precision mid-game display provided audiences with entertainment of the highest calibre. Homecoming provided the opportunity of hosting six visiting bands.

Early in the year the Maroon and Gold Band was pleased to be selected as part of the 100,000 Pennsylvanians campaign. Photographs and film shots appeared in newspapers throughout the state and on television.

The Concert season was highlighted by numerous off campus performances as well as the usual two concerts presented for our own student bday. The band this year accepted invitations from several high schools to perform assembly program concerts. Highlighting the concert season was the presentation of two concerts at New York World's Fair early in May.

NEW MEMBER OF FACULTY

John E. Dennen, a cost accountant of the Armour Leather Company, Williamsport, has been appointed an instructor and joined the faculty at the beginning of the second semester.

A native of Exchange, Dennen attended the elementary and secondary schools of Turbotville. In 1954, he received his Bachelor of Science degree from Bloomsburg State College, majoring in science and mathematics.

Upon graduation from BSC, he served in the United States Army. While teaching mathematics at Muncy Creek High School from 1956 to 1960, Dennen attended Lycoming College in Williamsport. In the near future, he will complete the requirements for the Master's Degree in Business Administration at Bucknell University.

From 1960 until his employment began with Armour Leather Company in October, 1963, he was employed as an accountant by the Girton Manufacturing Company, Millville. He has served as a member of the school board at Warrior Run School and is president of the Anthony Township School Board.

SUPERVISE FROSH GIRLS

The Junior Resident Women Advisors on the campus of the Bloomsburg State College formed an organization that has gained tremendous importance in a relatively short period of time. The JRA's are chiefly juniors and seniors whose function is to supervise the activity of freshmen women living in town residences, as well as those on the first floor of the two new women's residences on campus and those on two floors in Waller Hall.

Students apply for JRA positions and are evaluated and selected for a year by a group of college administrators, plus members of the preceding JRA group. To become a JRA, a student must have a two point average or better, and possess those qualifications necessary to be in complete charge of freshmen women. Although the advisors receive compensation for their service, they are more interested in the prestige and experience which the opportunity affords.

Last year there were ten JRA's at BSC and this year there are seventeen. It is anticipated twenty-five will be used during the 1965-66 College term.

According to Miss Ellamae Jackson, dean of women, who holds group meetings as well as the JRA's, these girls are outstanding and certainly influence the future college life of freshmen students. The present group is keeping a scrap book and preparing a hand book to be used to guide future junior resident advisors.

In addition to a very full concert season, the Maroon and Gold Band participated in the first Band Music Reading Clinic which was held on the campus of Bloomsburg State College. And, four members of the band were participants in the Intercollegiate Band Festival held this year at Lock Haven.

The members of the Maroon and Gold Band and the director wish to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to the many alumni who have so strongly supported the activities of the band during the past years.

COLLEGE HISTORY

Although the college archives contain many official documents about the institution's past, the College remains eager to add to its collections of less formal materials.

Among the items which may prove of special interest to future historians are diaries; groups of letters written by students and others connected with the College; photographs; and memoirs of College life in all periods.

Alumni interested in adding to the College's archives should write their recollections of College life, and particularly of the unofficial incidents.

Alumni wishing to submit such materials should send them to the Alumni Office, Box 31, Bloomsburg State College.

Esther C. Helfrich '15

Miss Esther Helfrich, Reading, died Friday, January 22, 1965. A Wilkes-Barre paper had the following editorial comment on Miss Helfrich's death:

The death of Miss Esther Helfrich, retired principal of the Doron School in the Rolling Mill Hill section of Wilkes-Barre terminates a life of service, dedicated to her fellowmen without regard to race or creed. Her influence extended far beyond the confines of the classroom at Doron, where she spent 51 years of her life —six as an elementary student, 23 as a teacher, and 22 as principal.

Miss Helfrich was a pioneer in the movement for racial equality. No person knew better the contribution, hopes and aspirations of the Negro child, for 50 per cent of the Doron School population in her day was not white. One of her last acts was to a Negro family bereaved of a loved one. She paid her personal respects to members of the household, and later that evening suffered a fatal heart seizure.

Miss Helfrich never spared herself in a worthy cause. For the past 40 years she was actively engaged in the Girl Scout movement and in the activities of the Women's Club of Wilkes-Barre City Schools, as well as local, state and national professional organizations of teachers and principals.

Years before local PTA organizations made known their value, Miss Helfrich launched the Doron School Community League, an organization of civic-minded people from the Rolling Mill Hill area. In 1960, the membership honored Miss Helfrich upon her retirement with a testimonial dinner which was attended by high officials in public life and educational circles.

Upon retirement from the teaching profession, Miss Helfrich continued her interest in education by substituting in local schools and participating in the Retired Teachers Association, of which she was secretary. It may be said of Esther Helfrich that she lived the good life—a life of felicity, and above all, good example.

In January of 1962 the then first sergeant Trapane was commissioned by direct appointment as a second lieutenant and assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Shortly afterwards, he went to Korea and saw combat action with the 5th Regimental Combat Team as a platoon leader in a rifle company, and as an executive officer and commander of a heavy weapons company in the Chorwan Sector. For Maj. Trapane, a master parachutist and glideman who has 606 jumps to his credit from altitudes of 500 to 15,000 feet, his Korean combat action was his first non-airborne duty.

Major Trapane went to Fort Greely, Alaska in 1957 as the Army's Arctic Airborne Test Officer, testing airborne equipment at temperatures as low as 72 degrees below zero from Nome to the Arctic Circle and making as many as 15 test jumps a day.

Three years later this major was transferred from the Arctic north to sunny Florida to become a professor of Military Science in the University of Florida's Army ROTC program. LEGISLATORS MEET AT BLOOMSBURG SC

Bloomsburg State College, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president, told area members of the State Legislature, we cannot accept large numbers of students who are qualified to be admitted because of lack of physical facilities. The legislators met at the College on Friday, March 26.

Today the State's share of the overall cost of education at the institution has not increased percentage-wise compared to that now placed on the student and thus has closed the door to some because of financial circumstances.

If enrollment is to increase in accord with the population increase and the larger percentage who desire to attend college, then there must be a coordinated long range program which will provide the necessary facilities and faculty.

The instructional and maintenance phases of the State Colleges are being seriously impaired by the complex and slow moving procedures which state agencies employ for the purchase of equipment and supplies.

Dr. Andruss pointed out that California, Illinois and New York have fifty per cent of their young people attending college while in this commonwealth only thirty per cent attend. This situation he attributed to lack of adequate state support of higher education, thus placing more of the financial burden on the student or the student's family.

With regard to construction, he said an accelerated program is needed that would allow the occupancy of a building within two years after it was authorized. Today, he pointed out, in this state it takes more than a year to get an architect appointed and four and a half to six years until the building can be placed in use.

With regard to faculty salaries he said the salary schedule in Pennsylvania was reasonably competitive at the time it was conceived but well below the standard of many states before it was implemented by the legislature.

The educator also definitely urged that before a submitted budget for the college is decreased, the head of th institution be consulted.

With regard to a shift in the method of naming trustees he advocated the plan to one that would assure the appointment of individuals interested in the college and divorced from politics.

Dr. Andruss advocated that half of anything left of an appropriation to a college at the end of a fiscal year be retained for the advancement of that institution, pointing out that half of that amount is money which students of the college have paid.

In the face of the rising cost of textbooks he said the Legislature can aid higher education at the state colleges by exempting textbooks from the sales tax. It was also suggested by Dr. Andruss tha a limited numer of students from foreign countries be allowed to attend the State Colleges without paying tuition and other fees in order to promote cultural development and better understanding.

In devloping his thoughts on costs to students, Dr. Andruss observed the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce recommended back in 1957 that "Resident tuition and fees, over a period of years, should be placed at a level approximately equal to one-fourth of the annual cost of education at the institution." The state should supply the other three-fourths of the cost.

Boyd F. Buckingham, director of public relations, pointed out that when additional dormitories are constructed to accomodate more students, there must be additional dining hall facilities and classrooms. Unless there is a balance in such facilities there cannot be a workable program.

C. Stuart Edwards, director of admissions, told of the large number of requests for admission to the college. In 1952 there were 3,320 requests for applications. Of these 1,150 individuals complete applications but admissions could be offered to only 650.

Three years later, there were 4,800 who requested applications for admission this coming fall and there would have been more had the college not stopped sending forms to those making requests when it was apparent that all who had earlier been supplied could not be accomodated. There were 2,500 who completed and returned the forms but admission can be offered to only 1,000 for September, 1965.

Paul G. Martin, business manager, described the burdensome purchasing procedures now required which seriously handicap both the instructional and maintenance programs. He stressed the need for expediting the purchase of supplies and equipment for classroom use, particularly in sciences where the required items are either used up or become obsolete within a short period.

Rep. Fred Shupnik, D. Luzerne and a teacher, said it was almost inconceivable that a period of from three to six months should elapse before supplies arrive for classroom use.

Adam T. Bower, R. Northumberland, suggested the possibility that the colleges operate on the calendar rather than fiscal year setup as it present. He felt this plan might help in making materials available when needed.

Kenneth Lee, R. Sullivan, questioned purchasing procedures and asked for suggestions to improve them. Dr. Andruss replied that there should be a person in the Department of Public Instruction and or in the Department of Property and Supplies, who knows something about instructional purchases and could expedite purchases for the state colleges.

Dr. Andruss and Martin both stressed the need for more local autonomy in purchasing.

A number of lawmakers were present for the press conference in early afternoon and then toured the campus. The meeting with Dr. Andruss and other administrators followed. The Legislative guests were entertained at dinner at the College.

Trustees at the conference and dinner were President William A. Lank; Secretary J. Howard Deily, Bloomsburg; Judge Bernard Kelly, Philadelphia; E. Guy Bangs, Greenwood; Leo Dennan, Exchange and Sam Jacobs, Danville.

SUPERVISORS IN CONFERENCE AT COLLEGE

The Susquehanna Valley Elementary Supervisors' Association met in the College Alumni Room with president, Eugene Keifer, elementary supervisor, Selinsgrove, conducting the business session. Nine counties were represented by fifty elementary supervisors and principals. Guests were also present from Bucknell University and College of Misericordia.

Boyd Buckingham, Director of Public Relations, extended greetings from the College.

Theme for the day's program was "Listening and Speaking." Mrs. Iva Mae Beckley, Supervisor of Student Teaching, who was chairman in the day's program, presented highlights of a report by four national groups on the topic, stating the most frequently used means of communication are listening and speaking.

Members of the Benjamin Franklin Laboratory School staff presented techniques and devices for stimulating children in the areas of listening and speaking. Miss Beatrice Englehart, Supervisor of Kindergarten, presented an approach to listening through phonics. Miss Ann Marie Noakes, Supervisor of First Grade, continued the approach with first grade children. Miss Dorothy Andrysick, Supervisor of Sceond Grade, assisted by Dr. Donald Vannan, presented tape and film illustrating morning talks using second grade children and extemporaneous talks by sixth grade children.

Members and visitors of the association were guests of the College for luncheon in the College Commons.

The program was continued in the afternoon with a demonstration in critical thinking through the use of poetry. Sixth grade children participated under the direction of an English major, Lawrence Recla. He is currently doing his student teaching in Bucks County.

A film, "Effective Listening," concluded the day's program.

Other members serving on the committee were Dr. Royce Johnson, Dr. Margaret Means, Deborah Griffith, Warren Johnson, Nerine Middleswarth, Kenneth Roberts and Ray Sunderland.

Alumni Day, 1965, is now history. We were favored with pleasant weather, and the attendance was good. The amount received in dues was very encouraging, but it was disappointing to note that many did not attend the Alumni luncheon and the meeting that followed. One class, with almost sixty in reunion, had only eight representatives at the luncheon.

It seemed to be the general comment that the moving of Alumni Day to an earlier date was a good idea. Although no definite date for the Alumni Day in 1966 can be announced at this time, the tentative date is May 14. This will avoid conflict with Mother's Day, and also with some important meetings in Bloomsburg.

A questionnaire sent to the fourteen state colleges in Pennsylvania revealed that Bloomsburg was the only college provided the Alumni luncheon free of charge to those graduates who were active members of the Alumni Association. The College has in the past been willing to assume this obligation, but with rising costs and the increasing number of graduates, it has been found necessary to discontinue this policy. Beginning with Alumni Day, 1966, there will be a charge of $1.50 or $1.75 to all who participate in the luncheon. If we are able to increase the membership sufficiently, the Alumni Association may in the future be able to assume this expense, or at least part of it.

In order to carry on the routine in the Alumni Office, it has been necessary to hire clerical help. In addition, some of your officers have spent many hours without remuneration, in order to keep the business of the office running smoothly. More clerical help will be needed. Increasing postal rates have also increased our expenses.

We should have at least 5,000 active members. Instead of that, our membership during the past year has been about 1,600. We appeal to all graduates to join the Association, and to keep up their membership from year to year. If we can attain this goal, no special drives for funds will be necessary.

THE FIRST THOUSAND

An Alumni Directory containing the names of graduates for the first one hundred twenty-five years of your Alma Mater will be distributed shortly. The names of those completing curriculum or degree requirements from 1867 through 1964 are shown by classes and also in an alphabetical list.

As you may have read in the "Tenth Letter to Alumni and Friends of Bloomsburg - Fall, 1965," free copies will be sent to all graduates who hold life memberships in the Alumni Association, and to all those who purchase a five-year membership during 1965. This offer is limited to the first thousand who qualify, by membership in the Alumni Association, to receive a copy of the Alumni Directory.

This publication contains the pictures and dates of the administration of the nine Principals and Presidents, the Board of Trustees, and some of the older and more historical buildings of the campus.

Before this project is completed, it is expected that the College and the Community Activities Association, acting through the 125th Anniversary Committee, will have expended in excess of $10,000 on this project.

The Editor of the Alumni Directory was George G. Stradtman, Sr., who is to be commended for this monumental task of compiling the names and seeing this publication through to completion.

It is hoped that former students and Alumni of Bloomsburg will be interested enough in the Directory to join the Alumni Association in large numbers.

Cordially yours,

President

P. S. Send your Alumni Memberships (Life $35.00 — Five year $10.00) to

"The annual increase of two percent in the world's population cannot possibly persist for very long in the future; currently, this is the most overwhelming problem mankind faces," declared Dr. Richard T. Parsons, President of Lock Haven State College in a commencement address Thursday, August 5 at Bloomsburg State College. During the convocation, Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, President of the College, conferred the Bachelor of Science degree on seventy-nine seniors and the Master of Education degree on twelve graduate students.

Dr. Parsons compared Pakistan, one of the world's underdeveloped nations, with the modern countries of our western civilization. "We are actually living in two worlds," he said. "In one world we find underdeveloped countries where people live as their ancestors did one hundred to several hundred years ago. Their population growth is very rapid and their economy cannot produce enough to feed the people. The second world is the modern western world where we can grow more than we can eat and make more, perhaps, than we can use. Here, advances in the field of health have extended our lives almost beyond comprehension.

"Regardless of our political philosophy, can these two worlds exist side by side without trouble," Dr. Parsons asked, "when one has so much and the other so little and where one has an enlightened citizenry with well-developed systems of education while the other lacks knowledge because an impoverished economy cannot make sufficient education available?"

"It seems quite clear that if the underdeveloped nations are not limited in population growth, something must be done to increase their ability to provide the necessities of life. The answer herein is education! We need a kind of education which can teach these people to increase the productivity of the soil, to determine how basic industries can be developed, and to understand the need and possibilities for controlling the growth of the population. A basic education should be emphasized for all the people.

"In our western world, education must also change. During the past several years, the United States has had crash programs in science and mathematics to compete with scientific progress in Russia. Isn't it just as important to emphasize the social sciences, that is, the understanding of one man as compared to another type of man if we are to avoid our repeated failures to maintain peace?"

Two seniors were graduated with honors. Ted N. Arbogast, son of Mrs. Miriam Perna, 14 North Jerome St., Allentown, was graduated Summa cum laude and Mrs. Sylvia Mauro Lucchino, wife of Dr. D. B. Lucchino, 4326 Spruce St., Philadelphia, was graduated Cum laude.

Prior to the Recessional, President Andruss read from Henry Van Dyke's "To The Unknown Teacher" which ended with these thoughts "The teacher communicates his own joy in learning, and shares with boys and girls the best treasures of his mind. He lights many candles, which in later years, will shine back to cheer him. This is his reward."

Dr. Andruss concluded his remarks by saying: "This is my hope for you."

BSC GETS $8.6 MILLION MAJOR OK FOR 8 YEARS

Bloomsburg State College has had an allocation for construction in the 1965-67 biennium of $8,672,856 approved by the State Board of Education and this now goes to the State Planning Board. If it gets approved there it will be submitted to the Legislature.

The amount approved by the Board of Education is included by a $110 million package for the fourteen State Colleges of the Commonwealth.

It includes part of what the local college has asked for in its projected program of $27 million for construction here in the next six to eight years. If this is forthcoming by the end of 1973 there is every indication that Bloomsburg will have the 6,000 enrollment and university status by 1980 as Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president, predicted some months ago.

In the better than $8.5 million which has the State Board of Education approval there are included:

Two men's dormitories for 672 students, to be erected on the plots opposite faculty porch of Waller Hall and for which the College earlier this year asked Council to close Wood street for a half block from Second street to Pine avenue. The demolition of Waller Hall and the construction on that site of a dining hall for between 800 and 1,000 students and which will be larger and in addition to College Commons, and an adjacent student wing for the construction of a student center which will be of a type known on many campuses as a student union.

Also in this allocation would be planning and designing fees, averaging six to seven per cent of construction cost, for a woman's dormitory to go up on the site of the present Science Hall; another gymnasium, with this to embody many field house features; a classroom building and a maintenance building.

It also includes the purchase of additional land and the creating of more parking area.

The large number of commuting students, certain to increase markedly on the basis of enlarged enrollment and also in light of the opening of the Keystone Shortway, makes it imperative to provide a large parking area.

These buildings do not include the library, now under construction, and the new auditorium for 2,000.

APPROPRIATION INCREASE OF $80,824 PROPOSED

Gov. Scranton has recommended that an addition $1 million be divided among Pennsylvania's fourteen state colleges as a result of the state's record $102 million budget surplus.

In a breakdown of the distribution Bloomsburg State College would receive an additional $80,824.

The Governor also proposed that a $500,000 emergency fund be created to meet any critical but unexpected needs at the individual schools. This would include fire and storm damage among other crises.

The $1 million extra appropriation would bring the total for the colleges to approximately $26.5 million for the fiscal year beginning July 1. This does not include a $1.5 million appropriation to be returned to the schools from money not spent during the current fiscal year.

Twenty participants will be selected from junior and senior high school teachers who are teaching biology or expect to teach biology in the near future. A preference will be given to those candidates (1) with two or more years of teaching experience (2) with minimal background in molecular, cellular, and ecological levels of biology, (3) who plan to teach BSCS Biology within a year's time, (4) who live within commuting distance of the college campus, (5) who plan to take the entire three-part course. Financial assistance will include travel allowance, book allowance and tuition and fees.

Lecturers for the various topics in modern biology will include the following members of the BSC biology staff: Dr. Donald B. Rabb, Dr. Michael Herbert, Robert M. Jordan, Craig Himes and Mordeccia Treblow. In addition to the lectures, laboratories and field trips will be conducted.

EDUCATORS FROM LONDON

Two visiting educators from England presented the Montessori method of teaching to fifty-four teachers at a workshop during the summer session.

Miss Phoebe Child and Miss Margaret Homfray, St. Nicholas Center for Montessori Training, London, England, presented a detailed explanation of the Montessori philosophy and demonstrated the use of their specialized methods and materials.

The Montessori method, developed by Miss Maria Montessori, is basically a compromise between the old method of the teacher as absolute dictator and some modern methods of teaching where the children do the dictating. The Montessori method stresses the social and consideration aspects of both teachers and pupils concentrating on mental responses at each age level to meet all needs of individuals.

Miss Child and Miss Homfray were first exposed to this method of teaching when they were both students in London in 1929; Miss Montessori had just arrived from Italy to introduce her method of teaching. Two years later, they went to Rome to continue their study under Miss Montessori. All three were instrumental in establishing the St. Nicholas Training Center in England in 1946. This training center is an educational-trust operated by a board of trustees on a non-profit basis and is open to young girls, graduates and teachers.

WRITES ARTICLE ON CAMEO GLASS

The current issue of "The Antique Journal" carries a feature story on cameo glass by Dr. Harold H. Lanterman, Professor of Chemistry at Bloomsburg State College. The seven page feature has many interesting photographs of cameo glassware by craftsman of various countries. A photo of an English cameo collection appears as part of the cover of the magazine.

The complete set of photographs appearing with the article and on the cover were taken by Dr. Bradford Sterling, assistant professor of geography and earth science at the college. The glassware appearing in the photographs came chiefly from the collection of Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Gluchoff, Bloomsburg and Mrs. William A. Lank and that of the author, Dr. Lanterman.

Cameo glass is really cased ware; it is made with a basic under piece with layers of colored glass placed over it. Craftsmen noted for producing cameo glass are the English, French, Venetian and American. Dr. Lanterman, who has been interested in cameo glass for many years, gives an extensive history of this famous art.

COLLEGE OFFERING EVENING WORK

Beginning in September, Bloomsburg State College initiated a pilot program of evening college courses for part-time students to determine the need and feasibility of this type of program in the Bloomsburg area.

The courses are intended for individuals who have completed their high school education and who wish to develop broader interests or to improve their knowledge of specific subjects. Public school nurses and dental hygienists, who are currently enrolled in special degree programs offered by the college, are also eligible to enroll in these evening classes.

Any graduate of an accredited high school, who is twenty-one years of age and gainfully employed, may make application to take these courses. The college will reserve the right to select the best qualified applicants. Registrants will be enrolled as unclassified students of the college and will be permitted to register for a maximum of six semester hours per semester. Students who are regularly enrolled in a degree program at any college are not eligible for admission; this does not apply to public school nurses and dental hygienists. The evening program is not intended for teachers in-service.

Five three-credit courses are offered. They are: English Composition I and history of the United States and Pennsylvania I—Tuesday; fundamentals of mathematics—Wednesday; general psychology — Wednesday; principles of accounting—Thursday.

The tuition is $12.50 per credit for residents of Pennsylvania and $20 per credit for out-of-state residents.

THIS YEAR'S CHORAL ACTIVITIES AT BSC

The College Choraleers, Men's Glee Club, Madrigal Singers under the direction of Mr. William Decker completed a very active year. Highlights included two performances of Haydn's Creation, which is thought to be the first oratorio ever to be performed by BSC students. The Madrigal Singers made their first extensive tour—traveling to New Jersey and New York City where they gave a total of eight performances, ending with the World's Fair. The Men's Glee Club, just formed last year, has increased its activity and given several programs of its own as well as sharing some with the Madrigal Singers and Choraleers. In addition to these and several other live appearances, all three groups have appeared on the Varsity TV Program and made an LP recording, along with the college's other musical groups, celebrating the 125th anniversary. Although the preparation of all these programs is hard work, the students feel that they want to do their best to bring the highest quality of music possible to the Bloomsburg campus and community.

BSC WORK-STUDY GRANT APPROVED

A federal grant of $53,581 for Bloomsburg State College was approved by the Office of Education in Washington as part of a $681,820 work-study project for 43 Pennsylvania Colleges under the anti-poverty program.

The funds will provide jobs for students in low-income families with ten per cent of the cost to be contributed by the participating schools.

Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, president of BSC, said the funds will allow the college to provide jobs where none had previously been created. They will include an inventory of fixed assets, library work, landscaping and outdoor parking, among other tasks.

The wages will vary from seventy-five cents to $1.25 an hour depending on the type of work being done. The program will not affect any of the present student-work projects.

Many things are the lengthening shadow of an individual and if such a role has been played by any one in the Benton school system that man was L. Ray Appleman, identified with the school for almost half a century, forty years as the administrative head of the system, prior to his retirement in 1952. His death occurred in February, 1963.

The educator had an influence for good among his pupils in school and out and it was fitting that when the alumni association set up a scholarship fund in 1955 it was a testimonial to the beloved educator. This program, now a memorial to Mr. Appleman, is growing yearly.

Benton graduates staged their greatest get together this spring and the spirit of the educator was everywhere, and especially near when a portrait of Mr. Appleman, a work of Mrs. Ralph Heire, was unveiled during the program. It was presented to the school and will hang in "Ray's workshop" in the years ahead.

Nearly a third of the 1,900 graduates contributed through the spring to the association's scholarship fund and 400 attended the largest annual dinner meeting ever.

The association established the scholarship a decade earlier in Mr. Appleman's honor.

Mrs. John Bakeless, Great Hill, Seymour, Conn., the former Katherine Little and a Bloomsburg native, "stuck" with another of her own books, which she cannot read. This time it is her volume for juveniles, originally called "Story Lives of American Composers," and published by Lippincott in 1941. It has been continuously in print ever since though revised for new editions in 1953 and 1958. It is now appearing in Bangal, in the Gurajati language, one of the numerous languages spoken in India.

This is the second of her books that Mrs. Bakeless can't read herself. A few years ago a publisher in Lebanon brought out her book "In the Big Time" in Arabic. Some of the author's local Arabic friends could read that book but apparently there is no local resident to read the Gurajati edition of "Story Lives of American Composers."

Dr. Bakeless's life of Daniel Boone and his "Eyes of Discovery" have long been available in German editions. Dr. Bakeless is a former Bloomsburg resident and the son of the late Prof. and Mrs. O. H. Bake-less. Both he and his wife can read those books but Dr. Bakeless himself cannot read the Bengali edition of his juvenile Lewis and Clark. Fortunately, this is meant for students trying to learn English in India and the publisher obligingly supplies a companion volume in English-only a thousand words.

Her former students from throughout the state recently gathered in Downey School to pay tribute to the 46 years of teaching in Harrisburg Schools by Miss Edith Dennis, 1214 North 17th Street, Harrisburg.

A student from her first first-grade class, Dr. Charles Baltimore, a Pittsburgh psychiatrist, praised the start she had given him in learning.

"I started him on reading," she said proudly. Several score former students had similar praise for the good beginnings they had in her classrooms.

In his talk, Dr. David Porter, assistant city superintendent of schools, told the audience of 300:

"The admirable influence of Miss Dennis has been felt not only by her students, but her fellow teachers and by myself."

Dr. Glenn Parker, superintendent, had similar words of praise.

Miss Dennis was presented a bouquet of flowers by her youngster student—Robert Moore, 12-year-old Downey sixth grader.

She also was praised for founding the PTA movement at Downey. It began in 1940 with a Mothers Club organized by Miss Dennis. In 1946, the group was converted to a PTA. They were the first in the city to buy audio-visual equipment for a school.

William C. Coffman, Bloomsburg native and long a resident of Millville, retired at the close of the 1964-65 term of the Millville Areat Joint High School after almost two score years of teaching.

Mr. Coffman, a World War I veteran, has been active in the American Legion and in St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Millville. He has also been a leader in many civic endeavors.

The educator bears a distinction of having served as commander of three different American Legion Posts, Valley of Bloomsburg 273; Arthur Bardo Post 460, Millville, and that of Flemington, N. J.

A graduate of the Bloomsburg State College, then a Normal School, in 1925, he obtained his B.S. degree from Bucknell University in 1929 and his Master of Science in Education degree, as a teacher-in-service, in 1940 from the same educational institution.

During his eight-year tenure in Flemington the trial of Richard Bruno Hauptman for the Lindbergh kidnapping was held there. Over the prolonged trial there were sixty boys absent from school, being employed as messengers by the press and that, he recalled, required some adjustments in the school program. He also remembers that during the trial he had to detour to and from school. His shortest route was by the court house but this was closed to general traffic—pedestrian and vehicular—during the trial.

Coffman started his long and successful tenure at Millville in 1937. He was principal of the school from 1937 through 1946 and from then until his retirement was in the science department of the school.

During the spring he was honored by the local branch of the Pennsylvania State Education Association and more recently by the Millville Joint Teachers at a dinner session at which he was presented with a gift.

COLUMBIA COUNTY ALUMNI HEAR OF 'OLD NORMAL'

Some recollections of life at "Old Normal" around the turn of a century were made by Edwin M. Barton at a get together of the Columbia County Alumni of BSC during the spring.

Some time ago we used some of his observations in a column. Here are some others which we believe will be interesting.

He starts out with recollections of the gym exhibition that was always a "sell-out" presentation of the spring. It was staged two nights, had just about every one in the school on the program and was presented in the old gym, now the Husky Lounge. The gym, finest in the area at that time, had a running track about some 15 feet above the main floor. The structure was practical for physical education but it wasn't built with the thought in mind of accommodating spectators for events which might be staged there.

Here is one of Mr. Barton's recollections having to do with the gym show: "In my senior year, the boys' gym class was assigned, for the gymnasium exhibit, an intricate figure march to execute. The column carefully sized, with the smallest to lead, put me at the front. At some place in executing figures something went wrong. I was unable to say what, but to our extreme chagrin, Prof. Bryant had to step in and excruciate us from our fouled up figures. I do not think that I made a mistake, but I am not sure. My uneasy suspicion about this situation recalls that when I turned my part of the column to mesh with that of the leader of the other half, he was not there! I never got a bawling out or even a censure, so possibly it was not my fault; but neither was I ever told that it was not my fault.

"And the athletics. During most of my time, except the last year, we were attending during the period of Dr. A. K. Aldinger. When the baseball team played, Aldinger would hold down first base. We played such teams as Gettysburg, Bucknell and Susquehanna on even terms. Oh, yes, almost always the Carlisle Indians and the Cuban Giants, the latter a professional team, appeared on our schedules. The latter team, always going through some clown antics, was enjoyed hugely and drew large crowds.

"Another melange of memories: Prof. Cope (an ardent fisherman and member of the Old Guard, tapping knife on tumbler in the old dining room, now the library, for the quick silencing of rattling of dishes and flat ware on crockery, and conversation. Then Prof. Cope's clear voice—carrying to the uttermost corners of the room—in announcements clarified by language that made the most complicated arrangement clear.

"In fact announcements here or in the auditorium by men like Prof. Dennis (who wrote the lyrics of the Alma Mater); Dr. Waller and Prof. Albert were delivered clearly with voices that carried throughout. An electronic gadget would not only have been superfluous but an actual detriment.

"Our tradition here at Bloomsburg of a speech teaching college goes back at least as far as Miss Henrietta Prentice, a charming, talented, teacher graceful in appearance, a giant in ability.

"Once you were in the big school, and preparing for teaching, the climax of the year was the coming of the State Board of Examiners. We were warned that the committee was made up of experienced examiners from other Normal Schools or superintendents from cities and counties around the state.

"There was some fear and soul searching as to why one had not applied himself more diligently earlier in the year. The examinations covered two days, each examination lasting about an hour. I remember vividly the newspaper headline the morning after the second day in my senior year. It carried a screaming headline to the effect that all the seniors passed.

"During the period of Dr. Welsh's principal—he left in 1906—daily chapel exercises were held. Dr. Welsh, with religious regularity, began at one place in the Bible for Bible reading, and took up the next day's selection where the previous one had left off. This was not always most advantageous when the more intimate details of the domestic life of one or another of the oriental potentates were referred to with objective and simple frankness.

"Dr. Welsh had a rather comprehensive and eloquent prayer, which he tended to repeat each morning until some of the students in chapel rows further back got the habit of repeating the prayer ahead of him.

"One phrasing ran closely like this: 'Wilt Thou remember those who have gone out from these halls, meeting trials and tribulations of which they little dreamed when here. Will Thy blessing rest on them and aid them in their efforts.'

1,013 ENROLL AT BSC PRE-SESSION

There were 1,013 undergraduate and graduate students registered for the three-week summer school pre-session at Bloomsburg State College John A. Hoch, dean of instruction, reported. This is an increase of almost 200 more than the number of students who registered for the pre-session in June last year.

The total number of students registering for undergraduate courses, along with students in the speech and hearing therapy program, represented the largest pre-session enrollment in the history of the college. Seventy members of the college faculty were on during the sessions.

Approximately 290 men and women were housed in dormitories on the campus.

1,343 REGISTER FOR MAIN SESSION

A total of 1,343 undergraduate and graduate students registered for the six-week main summer session at Bloomsburg State College, according to John A. Hoch, dean of instruction.

The enrollment included: 559 BSC undergraduate students; 326 students from other colleges, teachers-in-service, and transfer students; 21 students in the summer residential speech and hearing therapy program; 101 new freshmen enrolled in a special summer program; 25 students in the Foreign Language program at the University of Dijon, France, and 25 at the University of Mainz, Germany; 32 students in the European Culture Study Tour; 254 in the Division of Graduate Studies.

Approximately 365 men and women were housed in residence halls on the campus. Ninety members of the faculty and administration staff was on duty during the six-week session.

"And so the class of 1907 went out from these halls, and they did meet many trials and tribulations, and like many other classes, they did meet their problems on the whole successfully."

ACTIVITIES CONCERNING THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

The BSC campus is a busy place these days. Two buildings, an auditorium and a library, are under construction, and test borings have been made for the new men's dormitory to be built facing Second Street, opposite Long Porch. Many other buildings are on the drawing board.

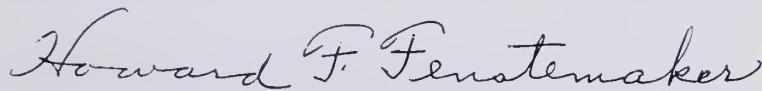

With 1,000 in the Freshman class this year, and with more in the years ahead, there must be constant planning in order to adjust the College to ever-changing situations.

New problems are also arising to face the officers of your Alumni Association. The most important problem at present is that of finding ways to increase the active membership. We have had a good response during the summer, but the active membership of the Association must be much larger than it is now, or the Association will not be able to render to the College and its graduates the service that is needed under the changing conditions.

The costs of printing and mailing the Quarterly are increasing. Assisting the reunion classes entails a great amount of clerical work, and more help is needed. These expenses must be met by the General Fund, which comes from dues. The various loan funds must be used exclusively for loans and scholarships, because in most cases the donors of these funds have specified that their contributions must be used for loans only. Their wishes must be respected.

We are trying to find people who will accept the responsibility of acting as representatives of the various classes. They will serve as reporters of class news, and will take charge of class reunions. Anyone who has accepted this responsibility knows that a successful reunion can come only as the result of many months of preparation. If you want a good reunion in May, 1966, or in 1967, now is the time to begin working on it. Write the Alumni Office, and we shall help you to get the machinery going.

Don't forget Home-Coming Day, Saturday, October 16. West Chester will be the attraction at the game in the afternoon. A fine program has been planned for the day. Come early and stay late.

CAN BLOOMSBURG STATE COLLEGE DOUBLE ITS ENROLLMENT IN THE NEXT DECADE (1965-1975)?

The answer to this question depends on the cooperation, planning, and understanding by everyone concerned, especially the citizens of the Town of Bloomsburg.

To promote this understanding and cooperation, Mr. William A. Lank, President of the Board of Trustees, suggested a meeting of the College with selected community leaders from Bloomsburg and the surrounding area, which was held in the College Commons on November 3, 1965. The opening address stressing the economic importance of the College to the Town of Bloomsburg was delivered by Mr. Lank.

The main presentation by the President of the College indicated that in the last decade (1955-1965) the enrollment has trebled from 900 to 2,800 full-time undergraduate students, and the payroll for faculty and non-instructional personnel increased 600%. Projecting to 1975, the College is seeking to double the 1965 enrollment to 5,600 full-time undergraduates and possibly 400 part-time students.

If we are to achieve an enrollment of 6,000 students, we shall need more land and additional construction. Presently, Senate Bill 1122 provides approximately $10 million dollars for land acquisition, a dormitory for 672 men, a science and classroom building, a dining hall and kitchen, and funds to extend utilities and provide parking facilities.

Also requested and included in Senate Bill 1122 are funds to plan and design a dormitory for 400 women, gymnasium, classroom building, and a maintenance building. The construction of these projects would begin in the 1967-1969 biennium at an approximate cost of $5,327,000. A new student center and additional land purchases are included in the development funds of this Senate Bill.

Bloomsburg State College must expand the campus landwise and building-wise. If the necessary land and construction are provided, and if we have cooperation and understanding with the Town of Bloomsburg, we can look to an exciting decade of growth and the continuance of service to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Cordially,

Harvey Andrusz

BSC TODAY AND TOMORROW

Bloomsburg State College has taken significant strides toward becoming a multi-purpose institution providing more extensive opportunities in higher education to citizens of the Keystone State in the little more than five years since the General Assembly passed legislation changing the fourteen State Teachers Colleges to State Colleges.

Bloomsburg now offers courses leading to the Master's Degree in business education, elementary education, special education for teachers of the mentally retarded, speech correction, social studies (including geography), English, and biology. There are 138 graduate students who completed registration to continue their graduate program this semester.

Undergraduate students enrolled in the Arts and Sciences division now number approximately ten per cent of the enrollment. These students, who first began their studies in September, 1963, will earn the Bachelor of Arts degree in either the natural sciences, the social sciences, or the humanities.

A new program of service to the community, night courses for adults was initiated on September 13 when the college began the 1965-1966 academic year. The response to this program was almost immediately overwhelming. Prior to final registration there were 133 adults enrolled in the five courses offered plus a long waiting list of individuals who hoped they could be enrolled. On the basis of present circumstances, it is likely that course offerings will be expanded in future semesters.

Highlighting the growth of the institution has been the annual increase in total enrollment. There are currently 2,838 full-time and 126 part-time undergraduate students, an increase of nearly 450 over the number enrolled a year ago. The total number of students enrolled as undergraduates, graduates, and in evening classes has hit a new peak of 3,016. Approximately 925 of this number are freshmen or transfer students who are studying at Bloomsburg for the first time in their college career.

To accommodate the increased number of students, twenty-one faculty members were added to the instructional staff which now totals 167.

The building program was given a fresh impetus recently when Governor Scranton requested more than $9,800,000 for additional projects at the campus. When added to projects already under construction and in final design stages, there should be $14,500,000 spent on new campus facilities in the next two or three years.

The college has reason to be proud of the services it offers to the Commonwealth as well as its record of 127 years as the cultural center of the community.

CONFERENCE AT BSC

The Nineteenth Annual Conference for Teachers and Administrators was held at Bloomsburg State College on Friday and Saturday, October 22-23.

The general session featuring Dr. John I. Goodlad, professor and director of the University Elementary School, University of California, was held on Saturday. His topic was "School Curriculum Reform in the United States."

Following registration Friday, separate addresses were heard by each of the four education divisions. Dr. Goodlad addressed the elementary conferees on "Redesigning the Learning Environment in Small Elementary Schools"; Dr. Donald G. McGarey, professor of education, The Pennsylvania State University, talked to the secondary education group on "Innovations in Instructional Practices" and the business education section heard Dr. Leonard J. West, Office of Research and Evaluation of the City University of New York, speak on "Research in Business Education."

Special education was divided into two areas. In that for mental retardation—Dr. Henry E. Garrett, professor emeritus, University of Virginia and nationally known psychology consultant, talked on "Classroom Learning and Learning Theory." In speech pathology, Dr. Jack Matthews, chairman of the Department of Speech, University of Pittsburgh, spoke on "Speech and Hearing Problems of the Mentally Retarded."

Following dinner in the College Commons Friday evening, separate division sessions were held until nine o'clock. Separate sessions resumed Saturday morning. Following Dr. Goodlad's main address, the conference concluded with a luncheon in the College Commons.

GIFT TO COLLEGE

A check for $250, which their son, Bruce W. Albright, had saved toward the expenses of his education which was tragically cut short when he was fatally injured in an automobile accident last spring, has been presented to the Day Men's Association scholarship fund by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Albright, Berwick. Announcement of the memorial gift was made by Dr. Ralph Herre, professor of history and assistant dean at the College.

The money is to be used in aiding some worthy student to further his or her education at Bloomsburg. The recipient will be selected by the faculty committee on scholarships and grants.

Mr. and Mrs. Albright gave the check as an expression of their appreciation for the kindnesses extended to them by Dean Elton Hunsinger, Dr. Herre and the Day Men's Association at the time of their bereavement. The Albrights said Bruce had saved the money for the furtherance of his education at Bloomsburg, and they felt it should be used for a purpose similar to that for which it was originally intended.

In accepting the check, Dr. Herre stated, "This is one of the most heartening manifestations of interest in our student body that I have seen on the part of a parent in my many years of association with the local college. It is an indication not only of the interest which Bruce W. Albright had in securing a college education but also an indication of the generosity and thoughtfulness of his parents."

FACULTY PROMOTIONS

Promotions in rank for fifteen members of the faculty were announced by Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, President of Bloomsburg State College. Recommendations for the promotions were presented by Dr. Andruss and approved by the Board of Trustees.

ALUMNI COUNCIL

The Council of Alumni Associations of the State Colleges of Pennsylvania has urged for formation of a permanent central board which would coordinate policy towards the fourteen state colleges and help guide them during the next critical phase of their development.

The new board would report to the Council of Higher Education for overall policy guidelines and for its budget and would have necessary staff responsible to the board.

At its annual meeting in Harrisburg, the council, which represents the alumni of the colleges, commended Governor Scranton, the State Council of Higher Education, the State Board of Education and the Legislature for their combined support of and interest in the fourteen state colleges—Pennsylvania's public higher education.

Following the meeting, the Council's newly-elected president, Ernest C. Aharrah, Clarion State College, said, "The support of these leaders proves tha the pressing demands of our state colleges can be met by united, determined efforts."

The alumni group singled out the Governor for special commendation for the Administration-backed carry-over bill which appropriates to each college money not spent during fiscal 1964. Scranton was also praised for his support of a new faculty salary schedule and for pushing an accelerated $135 million construction program at the colleges.

The State Planning Board and the Council of Higher Education were also instrumental in formulating this program which is embodied in Senate Bill 1122. The Council of Alumni has urged the legislature to pass this measure in order to provide adequate facilities for thousands of college-bound young Pennsylvanians.

The legislators were commended for passing bills granting the state colleges 100 per cent of their budget requests. The Council of Higher Education was also lauded for its "continuing deep interest in the fourteen state colleges of Pennsylvania."

Once again, the Council of Alumni were on record urging that the 14 state colleges be granted autonomy in the conduct of their fiscal affairs, the adoption of curricula and the recruitment and appointment of faculty.

To implement these resolutions, the Council has called for a leadership conference composed of all those concerned with the creation of a stronger state college system. It would bring together the presidents of the 14 schools; representatives of their faculty association; college trustees; Governor Scranton and several of his predecessors; officials from the Department of Public Instruction; the Council of Higher Education; legislative leaders, and representatives of chambers of commerce from the areas where the colleges are located.

The Council also adopted a motion restating its position that the 14 state colleges are Pennsylvania's only public higher educational institutions and they should receive first consideration when tax monies are allocated to higher education.

The Council of Alumni maintains that sufficient funds for the state colleges are available, if the money is used first for these schools and only secondarily for state-aided and private institutions. President Aharrah said, "When the legislature allocates funds for state-aided and private institutions it should place the same controls on this money that it does on disbursements to the state colleges."

The Council's executive committee has been authorized to create a steering committee of state college cases. The committee, which would coordinate all those groups interested in the activity in behalf of the schools, will consist of the officers of the Council of Alumni and its advisory board; officers of the state college's trustees association; faculty association officers; the four college presidents appointed to work with the council and the Governor; officers of the state student government movement; officials of chambers of commerce in the affected areas, and others who might be of service.

Also elected at the annual meeting were: Dr. Rufus C. Johnson, Cheyney State College, vice president; Michael Zahorchak, Edinboro State College, secretary and Mrs. Karl B. Etshied, West Chester State College, treasurer.

Named to the executive committee were Millard C. Ludwig, Bloomsburg State College and Edward H. Young, Lock Haven State College. Leon Lunn of Mansfield State College, president of the organization for four years will now serve in an ex-officio capacity on the executive committee. Continuing as executive committee members are Sam Furguiele, Indiana State College and Wallace Kerr, Slippery Rock State College.

During the fiscal year ending July 1, 1965, the Alumni of the Millersville State College contributed $4,003.57 to the Carillon Project and $5,098.02 to the NDEA Loan Fund, making a total of $9,101.59. In a previous Loyalty Loan Drive, the sum of $5,000 was contributed to equip a Listening Room in their new library.

STUDIED UNDER FOUNDATION GRANT

Mrs. Marie B. The institute which began June 20 and continued through July 31, was designed to further the training of college and university teachers of science.

HOME COMING

The thirty-eighth annual homecoming at BSC was one of the finest in the history of the local Educational institution, with hundreds of graduates and friends on campus from Friday evening until late Saturday.

The weather was ideal, the program varied and interesting and the welcome of the College—administration, faculty and students—friendly and sincere.

If there was one drab note it was the loss of the football game to West Chester, 40-21, but many of the grads got solace from the points the Huskies ran up on the Rams. It was one of the highest, if not the highest total, ever scored against a West Chester eleven by a Husky team.

The entire community was decorated for the fastivity. The campus was alive with features and every one of the resident houses in the community was in special dress for the occasion. Many of the students were up at six o'clock Saturday morning completing the decorations or making a final check to see everything was ship shape.

The open house feature was one that attracted many, and for hours there were visitors in all buildings on the campus.

The parade was colorful and attracted thousands. It was not as large as that for the '64 celebration, when the 125th anniversary of the College was the theme, but it was still one well worth viewing and maintained its rating of recent years of being the town's largest and finest parade.

Husky lounge was filled with visitors for the get together after the game and Centennial Gym attracted a large crowd for the dance, the concluding feature.

Benton, Millville and Bloomsburg

High Schools participated in the parade and in the half time festivities at the football game. Benton was adjudged the best band and was presented a trophy. The College band headed the parade, appearing for the first time in their new uniforms.

Float awards went to the Junior Class and Phi Sigma Pi, first; Sophomore Class, second; Maron and Gold Band and Alpha Phi Omega, tie for third.

Judges of the floats were Miss Sylvia Cronin, Miss Janice Youse, Ronald Fedrock, Mrs. Westover and John Dietrich.

Miss Sandra Berkoski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Berkoski, Duraea, a junior in elementary education at BSC, Phi Sigma Pi Sweetheart, was crowned at halftime of the football game by Gilbert Gockley, president of the Community Government Association.

Ray M. Cole '11

Ray M. Cole, seventy-eight, 710 East Second street, Bloomsburg, was found dead at his home Friday, November 5 by his son David. Dr. J. R. Brobst, Columbia County coroner, ruled death as accidental, due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Mr. Cole, former superintendent of Columbia County schools and well-known throughout the region, had returned to his home about eight o'clock after taking his wife to the home of their son, David.

Dr. Brobst said that Cole, who was reported to have had impaired hearing, neglected to turn off the engine of his auto when he parked it in the garage located on the basement floor of his home, directly beneath the living quarters.

The coroner reported that his investigation revealed that Cole walked from the garage to the living room where he turned on a television set, apparently intending to wait for his wife to return. Cole apparently became ill (because of the fumes) and made his way to the kitchen of the home where he collapsed.

Mr. Cole was one of the most widely known and popular educators in the history of the county.

Born in Orangeville, he was a graduate of the Bloomsburg State College (then a normal school) and the Pennsylvania State University.

He started his teaching career in the county and later became its vocational supervisor during the 1920s and during a period when there were numerous small high schools in the county without vocational teachers.

During this time he traveled thousands of miles and arranged his schedule so that he could teach vocational agriculture in the smaller schools.

Some of the most successful farmers in the area were his pupils and became interested in their special fields as a result of his instruction.

He was a leader in the development of the school show at the Bloomsburg Fair and for many years delivered scores of commencement addresses in schools of the region.

He was elected superintendent of schools of Columbia County following the death of William White Evans and continued in that position until retiring some years ago.

Maietta.

An additional grant of $9,000 will establish five summer term traineeships for graduate students or senior undergraduates in special class curriculums from June 1, 1966 to August 31.

SPENDS SUMMER ON GLACIER

How would you like to live on a glacier, be snowed in on Independence Day and go to bed in temperatures down to sixteen below?

That was the experience of Dr. W. Brad Sterling of the Bloomsburg State College faculty who spent twelve weeks in Yukon Territory working in meteorology and climatology under a National Foundation. In his letters Dr. Sterling wrote:

"This morning when my ob (observation of weather) was taken it was thirty-one degrees at six a.m. Yukon standard time. My shift is from six to three in the afternoon. We measure temperature, relative humidity, wind velocity and direction, cloud cover and precipitation.

"We are on from three p.m. until three a.m. every other week. At 2:30 a.m. one can read the temperature without a flash light.

"The coldest weather we have experienced since I came on June 28 has been four above zero. We had a spell of fifteen, seventeen and twenty degrees Fahrenheit.

"We live in army tents, two men to a tent, and eat in a special tent about 35 x 20 feet with wood floor and a gas range to cook on. There are five men in this camp. During the day we send pilot balloons up two times and measure with a theodolite for wind speed and direction. We also have a weather station (unmanned) about two miles away and on a peak about 2,000 feet above us.

"We travel there with a snow traveler and skis. The snow is rotten and we have to watch for crevices covered with snow bridges. Two of the men in this camp are working on snow crystallizations and in that work dig snow pits.

"We have been snowed in for eight days, including the Fourth of July. Then we had four days of sunshine allowing the aircraft to support us with mail and extras.

"Right now our generator is out and the battery is dead. This however, is no sweat. Our food is wonderful and a Mr. Machauski, who teaches at White Water, Wis., loves to cook and is excellent. In addition to Mac we have in camp a Mr. Colline from Rochester Tech, a Mr. Kelberg, a Norwegian, from Valparaiso, Ind., and R. Ragle, field director who has been working in Antarctica, Greenland up here for four years. So we don't worry.

"The weather is quite warm and gets up to forty some degrees during the day. The only uncomfortable thing is going to bed when the tent is sixteen to twenty.

"Most of the men in our camp are or were farm boys from the Northern USA and that includes me. (We are all now teaching in colleges.) The director said people with this type of background were best suited for this

GREATER NEW YORK BRANCH

The Greater New York Chapter of the Bloomsburg Alumni Association held its annual meeting at a luncheon at the Green Valley Restaurant, Denville, N. J., on May 1, 1965, with Dean and Mrs. Hoch as guests of the chapter. The invocation was given by Mr. Joseph Shemanski, class of 1955.

After the luncheon, Mr. Willis Swales, class of '50, the President for 1964-65, called the meeting to order. The Treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Thomas Bisco (Bette Gibson), class of '57. Each person present was then asked to give a short resume of his life at the College and since graduation. The reminiscences ranged all the way from the days when the two sexes were not to walk together to the number of times Dean and Mrs. Hoch were kept waiting for the second shoe to drop on the floor above their living quarters in the boys' dorm. Mr. Beaver, who had made a trip to the campus a few weeks before May 1, showed some lovely colored slides of the College as it is today, and many wondered if they'd be able to find their way.

The Association was then given the following slate of officers for 1965-66, which was accepted unanimously:

President, Mr. Walter Bird '50; Vice-President, Mr. Matt Kashuba '50; Secretary, Mrs. N. W. Moreth, (Kathryn Vannauer) '36; Treasurer, Mrs. Thomas Bisco (Bette Gibson) '57; Chaplain, Mr. Joseph Shemanski.

Plans are being made by the above officers for the 1966 meeting, and they hope to see many more New York Area graduates of Bloomsburg attending.

Dr. and Mrs. J. Almus Russell, Bloomsburg, have returned from a ten-week tour of the British Isles and the Continent. The last ten days of their trip they were the guests of Dr. Russell's niece and her husband, a physician in NATO, at Vincenza, Italy. The Russells sailed to New York City from Genoa on the new liner "Raffaello." Dr. Russell retired at the close of the summer session this year.

"Mt. Logan is twenty-five miles back of my tent and I look at it every night and morning. It is beautiful to see.

"With the warm weather the snow cornices are falling from the mountains and we hear these avalanches. We are on the Kachowalch Glacier so the avalanches are of no danger to us. Where we are there is 2,000 feet of moving ice below us. However, it moves slowly so we do not have crevices at the camp site.

"This has been a wonderful and valuable experience and I do appreciate it."

ATHLETICS

FOOTBALL SCORES 1965

Bloomsburg State College posted its best football season in the past four years with a 4 win 4 loss record. Russ Houk completing his second year as head coach used a substantial number of sophomores and juniors most of the time, indicating a bright outlook for the gridiron sport for BSC in the years ahead.

"Inexperience and lack of depth hurt us this year," stated Houk, "but even so, the boys played some excellent football. We have a crop of outstanding players that will move up from our freshman team next year to give us additional depth, particularly in the line and defensive halfback positions."

GIFT TO COLLEGE

Carl A. Rhoades, Vice President of A.R.A. Slater School and College Services recently presented a check for $1,500 to Dr. Harvey A. Andruss, President of Bloomsburg State College. The contribution is for the Community Government Association of BSC, and will be used for the Student Scholarship Fund.

For the third consecutive year, Miss Leatrice Sunaoka, an honor student from Haneoke, Hawaii and currently a junior at Bloomsburg, will be the recipient of this scholarship. As additional funds become available, it is anticipated that scholarships will be awarded to other students from both Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

The scholarship fund was initiated three years ago to help students who wanted to enroll at Bloomsburg but lived outside the continental limits of the United States. It was the feeling of the administration, faculty and students at the College that the program would stimulate cultural exchange and help improve relations between students of various racial and cultural origins.

Contributions have been received in the past from individuals, organizations, and business establishments located largely within a 50 mile radius of the college. The funds are solicited and disbursed by the International Student Relations Committee, a group of faculty headed by Mr. John Scrimgeour.

URGES CURRICULUM REFORM

"Human variability is not served by conformity and uniformity, nor can it be wished or organized away," asserted Dr. John I. Goodlad, director of the University Elementary School, University of California, Los Angeles, in an address to nearly 600 teachers and administrators who attended the general session of the Nineteenth annual Education Conference at Bloomsburg State College recently.

Dr. Goodlad began his discussion of ways to design the learning environment in small elementary schools by presenting four basic propositions.

"Human variability demands alternatives; providing for this variability and the learning needs of each individual necessitates a diagnosis of the individual pupil; diagnosis becomes educationally meaningful only when followed by prescription; prescription is possible only when alternatives procedures and opportunities are available."

Professor Goodlad emphasized the fact that each individual has untold potentialities. These, he noted, are no longer thought of as being irreversibly fixed. The main deterrent to the full realization of a person's abilities is heavily anchored in his environment. This demonstrates the need to change the environment for learning at all levels of the educational process. He suggested that all school practices should be geared to revealing individual differences at all times and never trying to conceal or disguise these differences.

Dr. Goodlad noted the vertical and horizontal organization of the school constitutes a good place to begin redesigning because school organization shackles or unshackles so many things and is almost completely subject to manipulation by the local educators.

One of the important roadblocks facing curriculum reform in the United States is the lamentable fact that seventy percent of our elementary schools do not have libraries or curriculum materials centers. "This," he declared, "is a serious indictment of the richest nation on earth."

Dr. William L. Bitner, superintendent of the Glens Falls City School District, visited Africa this fall at the invitation of the U. S. Department of State to participate in the development of an American-sponsored school in Tunis.

The State Department has asked 25 school systems and their superintendents to participate in the School-to-School Project. The aim is to promote international understanding by bringing personnel of leading American schools in direct contact with schools located abroad, according to Ernest N. Mannio, overseas director.

The program also provided an opportunity for foreign educators already familiar with and committed to American educational philosophy and techniques to broaden their knowledge and experience and opportunity for American educators and school children to have contact with knowledgeable educators from foreign countries, Mr. Monnio stated.

Dr. Bitner was first invited to meet with overseas Directors last February to hear an outline of the aims of the proposed undertaking. Later in the spring, the Board of Education was asked if the Glens Falls City School District would be willing to participate in the School-to-School program and if the services of the superintendent could be made available for an overseas visit.

The district was offered three choices from a list of schools for American dependents which have recently been organized and have requested the assistance of a School-to-School sponsor.

From the suggested list, Dr. Bitner chose Tunis, and State Department officials arranged the exchange. A grant of $10,000 was made by the Department of State through the American Embassy in Tunis to the American Cooperative School in that city to finance the school-to-school exchange. Subsequently, a letter of invitation from Richard M. Payne, president of the Board of Governors in Tunis, was forwarded to Dr. Bitner and the City School District.

The American Cooperative School was established in 1958 by a group of American parents and U. S. government officials residing in Tunis. It is now being governed by parents of the children attending, through a board elected by the parents.

The school is housed in a converted cow barn outside Tunis in what is termed "a pleasant rural setting on the Carthage Road." It has eight classrooms, small in size, with minimum equipment.

The U. S. Government has granted $21,600 for the renovation of the school, now financed by an operating budget supported by tuition charges and federal grants. The needs of the school are identified as "re-examination of the school curriculum and total operation."

The chief problem facing your Board of Directors at the present time is that of securing more active members. The present membership is about 1800, which shows progress. However, this figure still represents about twenty percent of the potential. The dues from the present membership will be barely sufficient to take care of the running expenses of the Association. We must again be reminded that neither the principal nor the income of the loan funds can be used for this purpose.

At the meeting of the Board in October, there was some discussion of the advisability of offering special bargain rates, in order to secure more members. One of the women on the Board later expressed the opinion that membership in the Association should not be cheapened, and that Alumni should consider it an honor and a privilege to be enrolled as an active member.

Some of the other Alumni Associations of the Pennsylvania State Colleges have abolished dues, and are depending on annual voluntary gifts to meet running expenses. This is a very desirable goal, and your President would favor such a procedure if these gifts reach a figure equal to, or somewhat greater than the present income. A voluntary annual gift of only one dollar from 5,000 Alumni would make this possible, with a surplus that could be used each year for projects that would be beneficial to the College.

You are urged to give careful consideration to this matter.

Howard F. Fenstermaker
